will suffice now and ventilation can be freely given. When watering soak the benches thoroughly but be sure to allow them to dry out tolerably well before applying any more. With a soil sufficiently porous so that water will pass away freely and with some bottom heat and a nice genial atmosphere there will not be any considerable number of buds dropping. One good syringing a week with the spray nozzle will take care of mealy bug but do it on clear warm days. The foliage should be allowed to dry before nightfall.

Lorraine Begonias

Probably you will have noticed how much faster the Lorraine begonias are now growing. They do not move much during the hottest summer weather but as soon as the nights are cooler they, in common with many other plants, make much more rapid headway. Give attention to ventilation now as the weather is more uneven both in sunshine and temperature. After the middle or 20th of September they will want to be in a house where they can have fire heat at night. The strongest plants should now be well established in 6-inch pots or pans and it is to be hoped that the necessary staking has not been forgotten. Be sure to use stakes which are light, painted green and as inconspicuous as possible. Keep the growths nicely tied up to them.

Violets

Scratch over the surface soil occasionally. Remove all weeds, runners and spotted or decaying foliage. If the plants are growing in raised benches do not allow rubbish to accumulate below them. Neatness, cleanliness, careful watering and ventilating and the keeping of a sweet atmosphere are what violets need. Double violets should have been all planted indoors some weeks ago and by this time will be well established. Ventilators can usually be kept wide open all the time until the middle of October and no fire heat should be necessary before that time. Violets do not like artificial heat and were it possible to have a sufficient warmth without using it they would do all the better and be less susceptible to root rot. To grow low and when to water denotes the experienced grower. It is just as great a fault in treatment to stint fast-growing plants in the needful amount of water as to keep the soil in a constantly saturated condition.

"It seems to me there is abundant room for some artistic person with bold and original ideas to devise some really pleasing method of staging gladioli. The formality of long rows of vases filled with noble spikes of these gorgeous flowers is a drawback to the effectiveness of a large collection. Cannot Mr. Felton or some gifted artist show us something new in arrangement?"

The foregoing, clipped from the Horticultural Trade Advertiser of London, indicates that the flower industry in England, like that of our own country, is permitting its best opportunities for publicity and advancement to be lost through indifference or inability to show their products to the public in an attractive and impressive manner. The day of "long rows of vases" has gone by, and exhibitions depending upon that worn-out and monotonous method of displaying flower exhibits are making a costly mistake.

About "overplanting"

We have noticed in our exchanges recently some complaining about the overplanting of Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora as a garden ornament. We are inclined to take issue on this question. The hardy hydrangea is pre-eminently a "people's" shrub. It requires no coddling, is perfectly hardy, not particular as to location, soil or food, and practically free from troublesome insects. It blooms profusely and the flowers last a long time at the season when flowering shrubs are few. Why should not the people plant it abundantly? The critics fail to suggest anything that might be acceptably substituted for it. It is very true that not enough shrubs are planted and many of the most commendable ones for the home grounds are rarely seen in the gardens or exploited by the nurserymen. But that is another story, and is no ground for condemning the Hydrangea. For every garden in which this shrub flaunts its glorious white and pink tinted trusses there are scores where none are seen and in our humble opinion thousands more might be planted in every town before its abundance would be any blemish on the landscape. The real trouble is that in many instances they are set in the wrong place and wrongly grouped and in this respect we agree that criticism is in order and education in artistic arrangement and planting judgment is sorely needed. If every retail nurseryman were to maintain an exhibition plot where intelligent suggestions as to the proper placing and grouping of garden material might be seen it would result in the greatest revival the ornamental nursery business ever received.

Futility of spasmodic effort

The paint and drug trade people naturally take a direct practical interest in the "Paint Up and Clean Up" campaigns which have been started with more or less success in many places. They, however, express the conviction that the various plans for a clean-up day which have been advocated have little merit in them or permanent value to the trade. They are simply incidental and it is urged that to be effective and fully carry out their mission these efforts at civic improvement should be continuous, hammering away at the good work every day the year through. Limitations of activity to a single day or single week should be removed and a steady drive put in operation to impress on the public that there was something to interest them all the year around. We read with interest these views as expressed by the leading paint manufacturers and dealers, for they are in line exactly with what HORTICULTURE has been harping upon for years in regard to the flower trade. To the flower producer it is but a small matter that the florists whose business it is to turn his products into money should merely boost the sales for any one special day or occasion. What he needs is that the public shall be induced to use his goods every day and in increasing quantity. Like the paint and oil men, what concerns him is that a steady demand shall be built up for his products. In one respect, indeed, he is directly and permanently injured by the spasmodic exploiting by the retailer of any one special day or exclusive flower for any occasion which is sure to cause sharp fluctuations in market values and bring public criticism and disfavor upon the flower industry which in the long run overbalances by far any transient financial advantage that may have been reaped.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Manure for Mulching

The manure to be used for mulching will have to be turned over almost every week now. Do not add too much soil just yet, and if any coarse sod can be had do not use the soil at all, using the sod instead. Never add bone to the manure, or any fertilizer, as it would only waste a lot of it. Lime should never be added, as it would free a good deal of ammonia and nitrogen, and the manure would be worth just so much less. If there is no shed or other covered building to store the manure, put a layer of good coarse sod under it. This will take up whatever leaches and this sod can afterward be used wherever it is wanted for it will be very rich. In turning the manure over all straw, corn stalks if any, and coarse materials that would interfere with applying it, should be removed.

Packing Cut Roses for Shipment

Beauties and some of the free-growing Teas will now be cutting long-stemmed roses and these are best tied in the boxes when shipping to the market. Where the roses have to travel long distances this method is especially useful. It is very simple as after the long-stemmed roses are packed a piece of rope is run around the outside of the box and into the box through the side wherever wanted and the two ends are tied over the stems. This will keep them from sliding around and prevent their getting bruised and broken. It is also well to put two thicknesses of newspaper between the layers of stems every three rows or so. This will prevent the thorns from puncturing the leaves and will make the roses much more attractive when they reach the market. The thorny varieties should always be packed in this way for if the leaves are damaged the bud will not show off as it should and, therefore, will not bring the price that a bud with perfect leaves would. Where two layers of roses are packed in one box be very careful not to pack white in the bottom. The whites will show the bruises more readily and no matter how carefully the blooms are packed the bottom layer will always get bruised more or less. We would never advocate this method, save in packing short stuff such as No. 3 Beauties and roses that have very little market value. Of these we have very few, as they are all pinched at the proper time and then soon grow into number ones or extras.

Icing the Boxes

With the weather warmer than it has been all summer roses had better be iced after packing for shipment. Use a little more paper in the boxes and crush some ice which is afterward put in the end of the box around the stems. A little can be added here and there all through the box, being careful not to have it come into contact with the buds. The object of more paper in the boxes is to keep the roses cooler by keeping the heat out. This will make the ice last longer and the flowers will arrive in a much better condition.

Water in the Vases

This had better be changed daily and the jars scrubbed out at least once a week. If this is not done the water will become polluted and is bound to damage the bottom foliage on all the roses that are put into the water. It is also apt to poison the men that have to handle the roses after they are taken out of such water. The poisoning we hear about every now and then from rose thorns could easily be traced to bad water in the rose jars. Where there are plenty of jars on hand it will be a great help to set them out in the sun every now and then. This will sweeten them all the way through so that the water will not get bad so soon. This is the same with the barrels in which special Beauties are kept. Roll them out every now then and let the sun get at them. They should not be allowed to stay in the sun too long as they are likely to get too dry and spread so that it will take quite a while to get them tight again.

Watering the Bench Fronts

As the season advances the benches will not dry out evenly all over, as they have been doing all summer, and it will be necessary to water every now and then while the rest of the house will be wet enough. Watch these fronts so that they are never allowed to get too dry as the roses would soon show signs of check in their growth. Also see that they are mulched, or have some coarse material right on them all the time, for if the earth is allowed to lie exposed it will not be very encouraging for the roots to work in, and we shall need all the roots that we can get before very long. In watering it is best not to use too much pressure as this would wash the surface of the branches around too much and would be sure to hurt the plants. It will take a little longer to do the watering if the hose is not used full force but it will pay in the end. In watering it is best not to flood the benches too much as this would wash out a good deal of plant food, but at the same time enough water should be applied to wet the soil through thoroughly, letting the water drip through evenly all over. There should be no dry spots in the benches after they are watered.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF GARDENERS

The summer meeting of the National Association of Gardeners was held in the Civic Center Auditorium, San Francisco, Cal., Wednesday, Aug. 18, 1915. In the absence of President John W. Everitt, of New York, Vice-President William S. Rennie, of California, presided.

Although the meeting was not as largely attended as some of the mid-summer meetings have been in the East, what was lacking in numbers, however, was fully offset by the general interest and enthusiasm manifested by those present in the proceedings.

Mr. Rennie in welcoming the visiting members to California expressed his regrets at the inability of the president of the association to be on hand. He presented a message to the meeting from the president, however, in which the latter stated in part.

"Whether we come from the East, the West, the North or the South, as professional gardeners our aim should be to produce a broader development for ornamental horticulture which cannot fail to bring greater recognition to our profession, and which will ultimately result in increasing benefits to those in it.

"A strong national association of the gardeners, heartily supported by those who follow the profession, I believe, could be made most powerful and influential in its work for the good of the profession, although it may at times prove disappointing to individuals seeking direct benefits from it. It is, as you are aware, the policy of our association to develop along lines where it will serve its members and aid those striving to advance and better themselves in their calling. We have committees at work endeavoring to thrash out the problems with which an organization like ours is confronted in its development stage, and these committees, and also your officers, at all times court and welcome suggestions from members which may be valuable in aiding the progress of the organization."

Following the reading of the president's message, Vice-President Rennie called on the different members present for a few remarks, and in responding, Robert Williamson, of Greenwich, Conn., said:

"I am indeed glad to be here to meet with the gardeners of the West. I am somewhat disappointed that there are not more of our Eastern members present, as we expected to have a larger body with us, but, of course, we are rather young as an organization and on account of the distance being so great we must make allowance for so few of us here from a distance, but personally I am glad to have taken the trip to meet with the other gardeners here.

David F. Roy, of Marion, Mass., referring to President Everitt's message, said, "I can quite understand why it is that he is not here. Men in our position, if they want to succeed, find that one of the first requisites is that they must cater to the wishes of their employers."

L. P. Jensen, of St. Louis, Mo., in urging a campaign to increase the membership, remarked: "This is the first opportunity I have had to be with this body of gardeners. I hope in the future I will be with you often. It seems to me that the gardeners throughout the country do not know enough about it. I think we ought to make a strong effort to have our members throughout the country get in new members. In that way in a short time we would have a strong representative body of men throughout the United States.

W. T. Lee, of San Francisco, Cal., speaking on increased membership remarked, "It seems to me that as we develop and get more members we should have local organizations if it can be done, to affiliate with the central body in some way, so that we could meet once in a while. I understand that there are quite a number of members on the coast."

A. Bischke, of Noroton, Conn., speaking on the pleasures of the trip and the future of the association, said: "I am greatly surprised to see the strides that have been made by these great western cities; for instance, Minneapolis and Seattle. Then take Tacoma, with its giant trees; we have to take our hats off, to those trees, lakes and boulevards. We have nothing like them in the East. I think we should strive to start a propaganda in each community to develop our association right now. It should not be a local society. It should be a national organization. The more members we can get in, the better, and scattered all over the United States. Our profession is a great one. What would a city like Minneapolis or New York, or any of the greater cities, be without their parks, or without gardens and trees? They would be a barren waste."

Percy Ellings, of Menlo Park, Cal., secretary of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society, extended an invitation to the visiting gardeners to come to Menlo Park and be the guests of the society for a day, stating that they had made arrangements to take the gardeners all through the principal estates down on the Peninsula, and afterwards to treat them to a good old-fashioned Spanish barbecue.

Theodore Wirth, of Minneapolis, Minn., on being called on said in the course of remarks: "While I am a park superintendent now, I came to that position as a gardener, and I am proud to be a gardener and always have been proud of it and always will be. There are many possibilities in our profession, so many different ways to develop that it is certainly very important that we make more effort in the future than in the past to get together and enlarge the usefulness of the National Association of Gardeners. The only way that this can be done best in my opinion is through the formation of local organizations and having them represented by delegates to the national meetings wherever they may be held."

Vice-President Rennie next called on Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., who said: "In regard to this matter before us, I am something like the boy who made his first trip out in the country. I may be a little green as to what the idea of this association is, but I think that the suggestion in regard to building up the organization is an excellent one. Every man who wants his organization to go ahead ought to put a little energy into it. It is only by thorough work that you can make this organization what it ought to be. It is now in its infancy, but it can and will grow if you will only put your shoulders to the wheel and give it a little push up hill."

Mr. Vincent was followed by some of the members of the Pacific Coast, and what they had to say indicated that they were thoroughly interested in the work that could be accomplished by an organization such as the National Association of Gardeners and that they might be counted on to give their support and co-operation.

An invitation was received at this time from the American Association of Park Superintendents to attend the illustrated lecture of Hon. Samuel E. Hill on "Good Roads" and the meeting adjourned to attend the lecture. It was intended to re-convene after the lecture, but owing to so many other attractions of the exposition city there was no re-convening and the meeting stood finally adjourned.

BIENNIALS AT GLENSIDE, PA.

The cover illustration represents a partial view of Foxgloves and Sweet Williams which, exposed to a lively traffic on two Philadelphia suburban pikes during last June attracted considerable public attention. Calculated to demonstrate to some extent their usefulness for floral mass-effects it also offered a good opportunity to study the attitude of the average visitor. The frequent question, "What are those beautiful flowers?" indicated less familiarity of even well-educated people with biennials than one would suppose. The fact that this class of plants do not flower "all summer" and as a rule do not last over two seasons, invariably brought to light by succeeding questions, did not seem to dampen the admiration for the display. But the most appealing feature to many interested callers was apparently the possibility of easy raising from seed. I am inclined to believe that from the purely business standpoint similar displays are likely to, first of all, benefit the seed trade. There is, however, not the least doubt in regard to their stimulating influence in general. To see a thing brings the desire to have it and the American garden owner, particularly when the quality warrants it, is, as a rule, quick to act.

Knowing the readers of HORTICULTURE to be well posted on the simple proceedings of growing biennials from seed I wish to call attention only to the matter of strains in seeds. From the very start the best should be just good enough for your planting and while foxgloves, for instance, "grow like weeds", to obtain strong evenly grown stock means systematic work and the necessary care. Keeping this strictly in mind and, acting accordingly, the matter is indeed an easy one.

Gleaside, Pa. RICHARD ROTHE.

During Recess

Florists' Club of Washington.

The members of the Florists' Club and their friends were the guests on the occasion of the September meeting of Edward S. Schmid and Fred H. Kramer at the crab feast annually tendered them in the Kramer conservatory, at 916 F street. This was to be the "florists' fun night" and all speaking was tabooed. This rule was vacated only in the case of Edward S. Schmid, Fred H. Kramer and George H. Cooke who made two-minute addresses of welcome, and by Richard Vincent, Jr., and Adolph Gude who sang "We're Glad Because We're Here" refrain. Charles A. Stevens acted as toastmaster.

The entertainment consisted of songs and recitations by J. Crosby McCarthy, songs by Kirk Miller who sang of how at the last crab feast the florists had missed going home "On the Five Fifteen" and had returned to finish the festivities, and songs by Sam Shreve, Gerald E. Fitzgerald, and Peter Latterner, for all of whom Jacques Heidenheimer was accompanist.

During the course of the evening the florists were visited by a Russian count and a German schoolmaster, each in native dress, the former in everyday life being Charles A. Stevens and the latter Fred H. Kramer. Mr. Kramer sang a funny little schoolroom song in which he was joined by nearly all of those present.

The big surprise of the evening was the arrival of members of the theatrical companies playing at the Casino and Gaiety theatres who joined them in the feast and later the popular song hits of the respective plays and skits in which they were appearing.

Among those present were George H. Cooke, Edward S. Schmid, E. F. Schmid, Fred H. Kramer, William F. Gude, Adolph Gude, Richard Vincent, Jr., Clarence L. Linz, George H. Shaffer, Otto Bauer, O. A. C. Oehmler, George W. Hess, Harry B. Louis, G. E. Anderson, R. L. Jenkins, C. A. Jackson, Jake Richards, David J. Grillbortzer, Otto Bauer, Samuel Simmons, William Marche, M. J. John Morley the gentleman on the left is the man responsible for the grand planting about the San Diego Exposition, which has been so highly praised by all visitors. Theodore

Wirth is too well-known to our readers and the public park profession all over the country for any further introduction here. F. C. Green, standing, is the popular superintendent of famous Roger Williams Park and other public reservations of Providence, R. I. California, Minnesota and Rhode Island fairly represent "both ends and the middle."

The Michell Outing.

The Henry F. Michell Company, seed growers, of 518 Market street, Philadelphia, on Sept. 8, gave its second annual outing to nearly 1200 horticulturists, whom it entertained on its seed farm at Andalusia. Among the farmers and flower growers who made the trip were men from all parts of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, several from New York and Connecticut and one from Chicago.

At Andalusia station the throng formed in line, eight abreast, with the Imperial Band in its midst, and marched to the Michell farm, past canna beds of unusual brilliancy. A buffet lunch was served, and then most of the horticulturists set out on a tour of inspection through the grounds.

The floral display which attracted the greatest attention was an exhibition of cut flowers which included all the varieties seen in the beds outside, and many others as gay and more exotic. They were then taken through the fields where flowers are being grown for seed. In the horticultural reservation they were shown 45,000 blooming cannas, 75,000 blooming plox, 60,000 scarlet sage plants, 50,000 gladioli and 30,000 dahlias.

When the visitors had finished their tour of the flower-beds they were gathered on the lawn for addresses. Henry F. Michell, president of the company, welcomed his guests and announced that it rounded off the company's twenty-fifth anniversary. Brief addresses were also made by E. J. Berlet, president of the Walnut Street Business Men's Association, Prof. Pancourt and Robert Craig.

The addresses were followed by field sports. There were events for both men and women, and the day culminated in a prize contest. Prizes of a very substantial sort were awarded to the winners. After the sports had been concluded the visitors went back to tour the gardens. The special train returned to bring them back to the city.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

PITTSBURGH FLORISTS' AND GARDENERS' CLUB.

The meeting of this club, September 7, was Gladiolus Night, and in addition to the local exhibits there was a large display from Bidwell & Fobes, Kinsman, O., including some of the newer varieties. We have seldom had before the club an exhibit of gladioli of such all around excellence. Perhaps the least striking of all as shown was the much-advertised Europa, the blooms being very small although they were certainly white. The Secretary was instructed to express the thanks of the club in a letter to Messrs. Bidwell & Fobes. Carl Becherer, gardener at Dixmont Hospital, showed double and single seedling dahlias, the most striking being a large, double-flowered peony dahlia, not yet named, and of a most beautiful deep rich pink. The Bureau of Parks, through Jno. W. Jones, foreman, showed red helianthus, they should make a very striking window decoration. They were grown from seed procured from England. Neil McCallum, president of the club, showed many interesting outdoor flowers and grasses from West End Park. Pasquale Fabozzi, gardener for J. C. Trees, showed gladioli and asters.

I. Roznosky, representing H. F. Michell Co., of Philadelphia, cheered the hearts of those present with his predictions of good fall trade and business. Messrs. Falconer and Knauff who have recently returned from vacation spent in visiting the principal cities of the west and middle west from San Francisco to Cleveland, agreed that in none of the parks of the cities visited did they see such fine specimens of bedding as we have in the Pittsburgh Parks, and on resolution it was carried by the club that the Superintendent of the Parks be requested to have pictures taken of the bedding for use in the trade papers.

H. P. JOSLIN, Sec'y.

PACIFIC COAST HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

This society held its regular monthly meeting Sept. 4th, with a large attendance. The session was taken up largely with aftermath of the S. A. F. convention. President H. Plath gave a very satisfactory report of the event, which was followed by a short talk from Daniel MacRorie, on matters pertaining to the convention. For the exhibition committee, H. Plath announced a dahlia show to be held on Sept. 18 and 19 in the Palace of Horticulture at the exposition, under the auspices of the California State Floral Society and the Alameda County Floral Society. He said eleven prizes would be open for professional growers. For the picnic committee Frank Pelicano recommended a Florists' Day at the Exposition instead of the usual picnic. Following the acceptance of J. Noordink to membership in the society, several more names were proposed by Daniel MacRorie, including Patrick Welch, Chas. Willis Ward, Wm. F. Kasting, V. J. Gorly and John Morley. The calling of the names was greeted with applause, and then more applause when Mr. MacRorie added that some of them had asked for life membership. As there is no provision in the constitution for life membership, a committee was appointed to consider the matter of changing that part of the bylaws. Among the evening's exhibits were Victor Podesta's bowling trophy which took 105 points; a display of Delice and Kaiser Wilhelm dahlias by Frank Pelicano rated at 85 points, and Nephrolepis Piersoni Elegantissima, rated at 85 points.

ST. LOUIS FLORIST CLUB.

The St. Louis Florist Club had a fine day for their outdoor meeting Sept. 9, which was held on the grounds of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co. The members came out in large numbers. All those having touring cars placed them in service. The meeting was held in the large packing shed fitted up for the occasion. Frank, George, William and Walter Weber took the visitors in charge and escorted them through the grounds. This being installation meeting the chair ordered all committees to make final reports, as the new officers always begin with a clean slate. Ex-Presidents Pitcher and Windler installed the newly elected officers—Julius Bourdet, president; J. J. Beneke, secretary; W. C. Smith, treasurer. Vice-President Weils and Trustee Ohlweiler, owing to business engagements, were absent. After a general talk the meeting adjourned and the members were then invited to a fine lunch and cigars. After satisfying the inner man a second tour was made of the greenhouses and north side grounds. Before leaving for home there were three cheers for the hosts, and the day will long be remembered by those who took part.

MEDFORD (MASS.) HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The annual fall exhibition of this society was held on Friday, Sept. 10. The Breck-Robinson Nursery Co. put up an excellent display of gladioli and cannas. Quite a collection of fine varieties of gladioli was also staged by the Brookland Gardens, S. E. Spencer, proprietor. This gentleman contributed a silver cup for the best basket of gladioli. Joseph Breck & Sons, Fotler, Fiske, Rawson Co., and Breck-Robinson Nursery Co., also contributed prizes. Fine dahlias were exhibited by Mrs. George B. Gill and Mrs. St. Dennis. The children's classes for flowers and vegetables were keenly contested. The ladies of the society devote a great deal of time and patience to this work and it is bearing fruit. The prize for the best kept home garden for the season was won by Mrs. Aykroid. Mrs. Bush's garden showed the greatest improvement. An Italian boy 13 years old had the best vegetable garden; a Chinese boy the best vase of flowers. Wm. N. Craig and Duncan Finlayson of Brookline were the judges.

NEW JERSEY FLORICULTURAL SOCIETY.

A regular meeting of this society was held at the house of Joseph A. Manda, West Orange, on Tuesday evening, Sept. 7, 1915. A letter was read from the National Association of Gardeners asking all local societies to affiliate so that should a member leave one society he would immediately become a member of another, without payment of further dues, on presentation of a card from the secretary of his society showing him to be in good standing. The society acted favorably on this proposition. Everything is completed for the Dahlia Show, Oct. 4, and schedules will be mailed on application to the secretary.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were enjoyed at the expense of Mr. Manda. A vote of thanks was recorded him and all spent a very pleasant evening. The awards were as follows:

Begonia McLance, Peter Hauck, Jr., gard. Max Schneider, 52 points; dahlias by same, 75 points. Cissus discolor, Wm. Barr, gard. Emil Panuska, 75 points. Coleus Cecil Brown, Mrs. Wm. Barr, certificate of merit. Display of orchids, Joseph A. Manda, first class certificate.

GREYSTONE (R. I.) HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

This society held its Fifth Annual Exhibition on Saturday, Sept. 4, in the Whitehall Assembly Room.

For quantity as well as quality of the exhibits, the show was easily the best ever held here. John Lewis Childs sent a beautiful collection of gladioli which along with a very fine and comprehensive collection of asters from Henry A. Dreer of Phila., occupied the whole of the stage. The dahlias of Wm. Steel, Auburn, R. I., were the best shown in the open classes.

In the classes for members of the society only, R. J. Murray obtained the most points and won the medal offered by Messrs. Dobbie & Co., of Edinburgh. Ben Steed of Greystone won in both members and open classes with asters.

Cornelius Hartstra and John Marshall of Providence were the judges.

CLEVELAND FLORISTS' CLUB.

The annual meeting of the Cleveland Florists' Club held September 13th, resulted in part of the list of officers being changed. Herbert Bate, president; Al. Ligren, 1st vice-president; Claude Tyler, 2nd vice-president. The old standbys, both of whom have proved their value as faithful officers in the club for the past two years, were re-elected to their respective positions—for secretary, Frank A. Friedley and treasurer, Geo. W. Smith. These men have the handling of several thousand dollars annually, being the funds subscribed by the florists of Cleveland for co-operative advertising. Mr. Knoble assumes the chairmanship of the executive committee and will be assisted by Albert Barber, F. C. W. Brown, F. A. Witthuhn and S. S. Pen-

DREER'S ARAUCARIAS

Only partial imports of Araucarias were received from Belgium the past spring, not sufficient to cover the usual season's requirements, and even if shipments should come through this fall (which at present does not appear likely) newly imported stock would not be available for this season's sales as it takes fully three months for this stock to become established and be fit to sell after its trip across the Atlantic.

tecot, who with the officers will compose the Board of Directors. There was a good attendance present, all of whom enjoyed the personally conducted tour as given by Frank Ritzenthaler and Fred Witthuhn who took the entire party over the route of their recent Southern and Western trip. Mr. Witthuhn only succeeded in reaching Texas, where he discontinued the trip because it was about time for the berths to be made up. He promises to continue his interesting story, pointing out many of the exciting and amusing adventures of their party.

CHICAGO FLORISTS' CLUB.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held Sept. 9, at the Hotel Bismarck, about fifty being present. The meeting was more social than otherwise, no important business coming up. Discussion of the Amalgamation banquet to be given on October 7, the regular meeting night, followed. Mr. Tricker of Arlington, N. J., was a guest and gave a description of his method of growing nymphaeas. One variety Mrs. Woodrow Wilson which is a success in the New York market, he hopes to make equally successful in Chicago. Pres. Wm. J. Keimel and T. MacAllister both spoke of their impressions of the convention and the two fairs and were voted the thanks of the club for their interesting accounts. Several names were added to the membership and several new ones proposed.

MASSACHUSETTS HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Dahlia and Fruit Exhibition.

This exhibition is one of the series of free summer shows at Horticultural Hall, Boston. It opened on Saturday, September 11 and closed on Sunday evening and was well attended by the public, whose infatuation with the dahlia continues unabated.

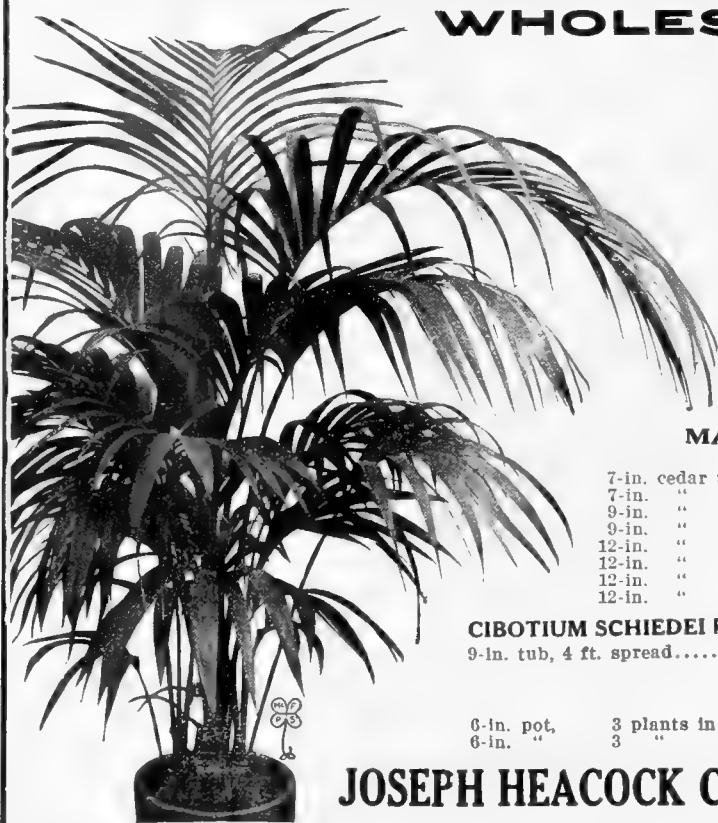

Dahlias were shown in brilliant array, all classes being well represented on tables that occupied the main part of the large exhibition hall. The flowers were superb, the season apparently having been favorable. New developments in the cactus, decorative and peony-flowered sections were noticeable but other classes seemed to simply hold their own with recent past shows. The principal winners in the dahlia classes were J. K. Alexander, W. D. Hathaway, George H. Walker, E. F. Dwyer, W. H. Symonds, Miss Fanny Foster, Lamont D. Litchfield, Mary C. Caswell, F. P. Webber and James Robertson. These were all represented by extensive displays, and most of the blooms were nicely labeled. Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co. showed a very large collection, flowers mostly under number. Mrs. L. A. Towle, F. L. Tinkham, J. S. Bailey, Thos. M. Proctor, Riverside Dahlia Gardens, and H. F. Burt all had good displays and F. H. Snow staged some 25 excellent seedlings. A creditable basket of dahlia blooms was put up by the Boston Cut Flower Co. Luther C. Parker got honorable mention for a seedling decorative dahlia, an enormous flower of pale delicate pink.

The show was notable for many other things besides dahlias. Mt. Desert Nurseries made a beautiful and unique display of hardy perennials in branching bamboo stands, among them being enormous spikes of Lilium Henryi. This exhibit received honorable mention. T. D. Hatfield, gardener for Walter Hunnewell showed Buddleias from seed sown last March, the flowers borne on branches four feet high which certainly put this popular shrub in a new and impressive light. Blue Hill Nurseries showed among their hardy phloxes a fine seedling white named Mrs. Heurlin. J. K. Alexander was strong on gladioli. Geo. W. Page showed fall asters. Buddleia variables was staged by James Wheeler.

The fruit and vegetables display was very fine, the peaches being the best we have ever seen exhibited in Boston. Jennison's Floral Gardens showed a basket of the new everbearing strawberry Ideal, which was a great attraction, the berries being simply perfect. This variety was awarded a first-class certificate by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society last year.

The American Dahlia Society, in cooperation with the Horticultural Society of New York, will hold its Dahlia exhibition in the American Museum of Natural History, Central Park West and 77th street, New York City, on Sept. 24, 25 and 26. Copies of the schedule and further information may be had by addressing Joseph J. Lane, Secretary A. D. S., 11 West 32d street, New York City, or George V. Nash, Secretary Hort. Soc. of N. Y., Bronx Park, N. Y.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The Dayton (Ohio) Florists and Gardeners' Association met on Tuesday, Sept. 7.

The Minneapolis Florists' Club met in the Minneapolis Floral Co.'s establishment on September 14.

There was a large attendance at the regular meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society at Hotel Gibson on Monday evening. J. A. Peterson and John Van Leeuwen gave interesting talks, the former on the S. A. F. meeting at Frisco, the latter on Co-operation in Buying Among the Florists.

The New York Florists' Club held its first meeting for the season of '15 and '16 on Monday evening, September 13. Exhibits of dahlias and gladioli, a fine lecture on Gladioli with lantern slides, by Mrs. B. Hammond Tracy, of Wenham, Mass., a gratifying report of the Flower Show committee and the formulating of general plans for preliminary work on the big flower show for next spring furnished interest and instruction in plenty for the members who were present and to all this must be added, last but not least, the ample provision made for the inner man's comfort by Chairman Phil Kessler and his vigilant House Committee.

The next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston will take place on Tuesday evening, September 21, when it is said a talk will be given by M. C. Ebel, of Madison, N. J.

The annual field day was held last Saturday afternoon at the nurseries of the Breck-Robinson Company at Munroe Station. The party of 100 came in a special car. Lunch was served in the large packing house. A. E. Robinson was master of ceremonies. After lunch Pres. Herman H. Bartsch of Waverley called the meeting to order. The other speakers were W. N. Craig of Brookline, Charles H. Breck of Boston, Ex-Pres. W. J. Kennedy of Chestnut Hill and Thomas J. Grey of Boston. It was a most interesting and enjoyable occasion.

The annual exhibition of the Andover (Mass.) Florists and Gardeners' Club, held in the Town Hall on September 10 and 11, was like its predecessors, a very large and attractive show, creditable alike to the amateur gardeners of the town and the professional florists and gardeners who gave it encouragement. There was a long list of prizes in which the children were well remembered and there was plenty of competition. We should estimate that there was between four and five hundred running feet of table space filled to the limit. The stage was handsomely banked by J. H. Playdon, who officiated as manager, and there was a long table of dahlias, gladioli and Buddleias from Fottler, Piske, Rawson Co. Everything else was from amateur sources. Nasturtiums, verbenas, gladioli, stocks, cockscombs, zinnias, asters, dahlias, balsams, centaureas, sweet peas, etc., certainly made a very gay picture and it was evident from the quality of the blossoms that the Andoverites go in for the best strains of seed the market affords.

The judges were J. Berndtson of Lawrence, Frank Leith of Haverhill and George Westland of North Andover, and they surely had a big afternoon's work laid out for them.

Clover Seed Acreage and Condition.

The acreage for clover seed in the United States this year is estimated to be about 114.5 per cent of last year's acreage, based upon reports to the Bureau of Crop Estimates of the United States Department of Agriculture. The condition of the crop on September 1, is estimated at 80.3 per cent of normal which compares with 77.3 per cent a year ago and 79.7 the average of the past ten years on September 1. These figures forecast a moderately larger crop this year than last year.

The acreage this year as compared with last year, and the condition on September 1 of this year and of last year, in percentage of normal in important States, are estimated respectively as follows: New York, 125, 88, 73; Pennsylvania, 95, 83, 84; Ohio, 108, 74, 78; Indiana, 130, 67, 74; Illinois, 125, 78, 70; Michigan, 106, 79, 84; Wisconsin, 95, 83, 88; Minnesota, 97, 84, 91; Iowa, 102, 87, 86; Missouri, 148, 79, 63; Kentucky, 140, 89, 55; Tennessee, 120, 88, 75; Idaho, 120, 94, 88; Oregon, 86, 84, 63.

American Seed and Nursery Stock for China.

(Commercial Attaché Julean H. Arnold, Peking, Aug. 9)

It is suggested that American dealers in seeds and nursery stock furnish this office with a number of catalogues as we often receive inquiries from residents in this country for American seed and nursery catalogues. The climate of Peking is dry and cold in the winter and damp and hot in the summer, with a temperature ranging between zero and 100 degrees Fahrenheit.

Notes.

D. D. P. Roy has opened a new seed store at 168 North Michigan avenue, Chicago.

Rochelle, Ill.—Augustus Caspers is going into the wholesale and mail order seed business.

Saginaw, Mich.—The branch store of the Grenell house will be managed by F. W. Mahan, of Watertown, N. Y.

Washington.—After years of vain efforts to make blue grass grow on the little plot in front of its building, the agriculture department is plowing the weeds up, to start again.

The value of imports of horticultural material at the Port of New York for the week ending September 4, is given as follows:

Sulphate of potash, $18,670; nitrate of soda, $231,857; clover seed, $31,510; grass seed, $10,999; trees, plants and bulbs, $180,404.

Louisville, Ky.—A fine store formerly occupied by a grocery concern has been secured by Hardin, Hamilton & Lewman for a seed store, in place of the temporary place they have been occupying since they were burned out.

The news that a certain well-known house in the trade are offering £300 a year for the services of an assistant manager caused a little excitement among some of the actual or would-be experts of the seed trade. Berths with such a salary are not going every day, neither are really good men for such positions as plentiful as grass-hoppers. It will be interesting to see who is the chosen candidate.

The above, clipped from the Horticultural Trade Advertiser of London, may interest our readers. In this country "berths" such as mentioned are more plentiful than men who are competent to fill them. And $1500 a year would hardly be sufficient inducement for the right man.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

I notice in the last issue of HORTICULTURE you credit us with informing you that we are developing a seed stock of beans free of anthracnose, by which we suppose you mean anthracnose resistant stock. Any stock of beans may be free of anthracnose under certain conditions of growth. Think you must have misunderstood your informant or had this bit of gossip second hand, for if we are anywhere within forty miles of accomplishing so worthy an object, I am unaware of it, much as I regret to say so. I hasten to enter this disclaimer for the reason that I do not want those of our friends who realize the responsibility assumed in making such a statement to be misadvised on the one hand, or, on the other, credit us with dealing with so serious a matter flippantly.

Very truly yours,

WILBUR BROTHERTON.

Of Interest to Retail FloristsBATTLE OF FLOWERS AT WORCESTER.

One of the big features of the New England Fair at Worcester, Mass., last week was the parade of flower decorated autos and "battle of flowers."

When the hour arrived for the parade and judging, the grandstand was packed, and enclosures about the track were crowded. For an hour previous, cars had been coming in decked in all the beautiful hues of New England flora. An international truck owned by Ross Bros. Co., promptly at 4.30 o'clock led the procession onto the track and 16 cars, covered with a wealth of flowers and occupied by handsomely gowned women and enthusiastic men followed. As the cars approached in front of the grandstand, each was given an ovation, while thousands of yards of serpentine streamers of bright colors were thrown at them from the stand.

As cars passed and repassed each other in front of the grandstand, armful after armful of handsome blossoms was hurled into the faces of the happy contestants. Basket after basket of confetti was emptied and hundreds of rolls of the streamers were unfurled until cars and occupants were buried beneath it and the track itself was carpeted with a four-inch depth of color that no artist could duplicate.

It was a stirring scene, novel to Worcester and the applause from the stand and track was tremendous. Each car had its supporters among the spectators. The appearance of the battle-ship Cadillac, entered by Walter D. Ross, was a signal for applause from all sides. Flying the stars and stripes, manned by men in the uniform of Uncle Sam's seamen, armed with a battery of four-inch guns, the Cadillac steamed through to victory, winning in each place where a win was possible, $170 in prizes.

Wm. Anderson and L. C. Midgeley were the judges. Second money in the touring car class, finally went to Arthur T. Hunting, West Boylston, for his Cadillac, handsomely trimmed with gladioli, asters, dahlias, goldenrod and asparagus. Henry A. Mower's Stanley steamer was adjudged winner of third money. The car was a mass of flowers, and on each side and on the hood were great butterflies made of red gladioli on a green background. Fifteen hundred blossoms were used by Harry I. Randall who designed the decorations and was a passenger in the car.

At the conclusion of the battle, Gov. David I. Walsh boarded the craft and was taken into the city, convoyed by all the other cars in the show.

Hampton Beach, N. H.—Sept. 9 was Governor's Day at the Hampton Beach carnival and nearly 20,000 persons attended. There was a parade of more than a mile of decorated automobiles. Silver cups were awarded to J. J. Comley, florist, of Newburyport, Messrs. Lane of Haverhill and Whitely of Lowell. Mr. Comley's machine was decorated with nearly 5000 flowers.

NEWS NOTES.

Chelsea, Mass.—Tower & Harney, florist, have removed to a new store at 440 Broadway.

Newburyport, Mass. — Comley, the florist, is adding a large glass room to his flower store at the corner of Pleasant and Titcomb streets.

Houston, Tex.—The Cotney Floral Co. are about to replace their old flower establishment, which was demolished in the great storm, with a fine modern store and work rooms.

Rutherford, N. J.—A plantation of standard roses at Julius Roehrs' Co.'s place is attractively blooming at present, and offers a good opportunity to compare the merits of the many varieties there represented. The conclusion pretty sure to be reached is that after all, Gruss an Teplitz has all the rest beaten as a standard rose.

We noticed some good phloxes on a recent visit. Among the very finest were Chastity, white, dwarf; Champs Elysee, deep magenta; Geo. A. Strohelein, bright scarlet with dark eye; Mme. Paul Dutrie, pale lilac blush; Beranger, soft pink with darker eye; Baron von Dedem, deep pink, on scarlet tone.

St. Paul, Minn.—The annual chrysanthemum show at Como Park will mark the celebration of the opening of the immense greenhouse completed in the last year. Park Superintendent Fred Nussbaumer expects to have the building filled with its winter quota of flowers in October, including almost 100 varieties of chrysanthemums.

Adolph Keiper, 318 Wabasha street, was the only successful candidate in a class of four who took the examination for head gardener. This is the second examination to be held, no one having passed the first. The head gardener will have charge of the greenhouse under Superintendent Nussbaumer's direction.

Andover, Mass.—J. H. Playdon is just completing a new greenhouse, 20 by 125 with Stearns Lumber Co. material. Emil Weber is foreman in charge of this place for the past 14 years and it is easy to see by the appearance of the stock and general surroundings that his reputation as a good grower is well merited.

W. A. Trow, whose estate adjoins the Playdon establishment, is one of Andover's most ardent amateur gardeners—we should add that Mrs. Trow is also. They have a splendid field of dahlias of which many are seedlings raised on the place. Mr. Trow is an enthusiastic supporter of the club and the flower shows.

The Minnesota State Florists' Association held its annual meeting in St. Paul, on Thursday, September 2nd at the Holm & Olson store.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

CHICAGO.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Winterson have returned from two weeks at Deleran Lake, Wis.

Allie Zech is back from a fishing expedition at Tomahawk Lake, Wis., where he spent a fortnight.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Asmus are home and like all the rest think Chicago a pretty good place to live in after all.

Theodore Vogel, formerly known as "Teddy" is back in Chicago where he hopes to secure a position and again call Chicago his home.

W. Weatherwax formerly with W. J. Smyth, 31st and Michigan Ave., has opened a store at 47th St. and Drexel Boul, known as the Drexel Floral Co.

H. Perkins, 2nd, formerly of the Shaw Gardens, St. Louis, Mo., was in Chicago this week looking up materials for building. He will go into business in Pacific, Mo.

Miss Marguerite McNulty and Miss Parker are both back at their desks and pleased with their western outing which included some 6000 miles of continuous sight-seeing.

E. W. Siebrecht will sever his connection with the Fleischman Floral Co. in the Railway Exchange Bldg. and open a store at 6972 N. Clark St., to be known as the Rosery Florist.

Victor Young, manager of Geo. Wittbold & Co.'s retail store on N. Clark St. will go into business with Fred Ronsley, now doing business under the name of Ronsley the Florist, on Dearborn St.

The new warehouse now being built by Vaughan's Seed Store at Morton Grove, is nearing completion under the supervision of Albert Erickson. It is for storing onion sets and surplus seeds.

A Lange and family and Tom MacAllister are all back from the Pacific Coast. At this popular store four or five wedding orders per day have come in regularly since Sept. 1, and no dropping off as yet. The little colonial corsages are taking as well as ever at their stand in the Stevens Arcade.

C. B. Knickman was a welcome visitor here on his way back from the Pacific Coast this week. He found enough business there to keep him well past his usual schedule and says he is well pleased with the summer's work. This seems to be the general verdict of those who sought business in the West this summer, possibly because so few ventured to undertake it.

Jas. G. Hancock and family say that when they were crossing the Canadian Rockies they stopped at that pearl in the mountains, Lake Louise, on August 5th. Leaving the hotel they climbed the trail a thousand feet higher to Lake Agnes, then skirted the rocky side of the mountain above the water and continued to climb till snow line was reached. Very few flowers were passed on the trail but beyond that and growing not more than fifty feet from the ice snow packs, were quantities of wild flowers. Mr. Hancock gathered a collection of 20 varieties. There was nothing, however, that closely resembled the Edelweis of Switzerland.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. G. Hancock and their daughters have returned from an extended trip through the West, going out via the Canadian Pacific then down the Coast as far as Mexico and home via the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, Colorado Springs, etc. One of the most unique things they saw was the Great American Desert covered with sage bush and cactus trees, broken up by orchards of apples and fields of hay. The great desert seems bound to give way to the conquest by water which engineers are solving with their irrigation projects. A "prairie schooner," and an automobile seen from the car window at the same time, crossing the desert seemed to link the past with the present.

The Outlook.

Judging from the number of debutantes, Chicago florists have reason to look forward to a good season just ahead. Social butterflies they may be, but they revel in roses, and social affairs of all kinds follow in their wake. This has been a busy summer for Cupid. Shut off from the usual outdoor sports by the daily downpour, the summer youth has used his time wooing and the florist reaps the benefit. From all the retailers comes the same report that September is making a record for weddings. Florists and fashion makers have apparently entered into a friendly conspiracy, for the fall suits seem to demand the return of the corsage for street wear, while for parties and evening affairs they are more popular than ever.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The September Exhibition of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society opened in the ball room of the Narragansett Hotel, Thursday, Sept. 16, for a two days' exhibit of dahlias, asters and gladioli in commercial and professional classes.

The Elmwood Dahlia Society of Providence held a dahlia show last week and prizes were taken by John Cade, 1st; William Ashcroft, 2nd; and James W. Speight, 3rd. The judges were Thomas Gould, John Morrison and Thomas Stones.

The professional classes at the South County fair this week were well filled and keen competition was a result. A new feature was the big exhibit of gladioli by Carmichael Brothers of Shannock. George L. Stillman the Westerly "dahlia king," was also a large exhibitor.

PHILADELPHIA.

Charles R. O'Donnell representing Henry A. Dreer left on the 15th inst. on a business trip West.

Edwin J. Fancourt of the S. S. Pen-nock-Meehan Co., was reported to be at Butte, Montana, on the 15th inst. headed East, after a successful business tour of the Pacific Coast.

Howard M. Earl will leave on the 18th inst. for his second trip this season to California. We presume this is, in part, called for by the death of Mr. Lonsdale, their manager at the Floradale Farms, and the new arrangements made necessary thereby.

George Anderson is about the same; but for the first time in five weeks two of his brother craftsmen, John Burton and your scribe, were allowed in his sick room on the 14th inst. He looks natural enough, and was able to sit up to greet us. But can only speak a few syllables. The doctor says the lingual nerve ought to be the first to recover but its not there yet. Still, George knew us, and seemed glad to nod an acquiescence for a motor race with honorable Burton and smile at a cigar from thrifty scribe. This is not a very cheerful report but it is the best we dare give under the circumstances.

"God Almighty first planted a garden," said Bacon, and ever since Eden gardening has been a highly respectable business.

Emerson said that "the earth laughs in flowers," and John Milton, blind though he was, spoke of "flowers of paradise." I didn't intend, however, to reproduce Bartlett's familiar quotations, but to tell you something about Washington Atlee Burpee.

Here is a gentleman whose father was from the French Beapures, whose mother's people, the Atlees, lived in England at the early home of the Washingtons, and himself born in Canada, works in Philadelphia and lives in Bucks County.

Besides that, he is probably responsible for more flowers than any other person in the land. Thousands of years ago it was commanded:

"In the morning sow thy seed and in the evening withhold not thine hand;" and Burpee is the man who grows the seeds you sow, hence I might almost christen him the godfather of flowers.

Nearly everybody hereabouts has heard of the wonderful Fordbrook farms, near Doylestown; but bless you, broad as are their several hundred acres, they don't produce more than a fraction of all the seeds which this bucolic artist and poet distributes over the world.

"Do you buy seeds in Europe?" I asked him.

"I dislike that word 'buy' because I don't buy seeds anywhere. I grow and sell them," was his answer.

Yes, Mr. Burpee not only raises tomato seeds in Bucks County, but cabbages in Denmark, beets, radishes and carrots in France, sweet peas in California and goodness alone knows how many other things in other parts of America. Each thing is grown where it will develop the best; but even so, Mr. Burpee takes nobody's say-so for a seed any more than Uncle Sam's mint will take your gold without assaying it.

The above is clipped from a lengthy article which appeared in the Philadelphia Ledger, September 11th, which is certainly pretty good work for a daily paper and very well put. But while it is true Burpee was born in Canada, he is not much of a Canadian—as all his people fore and aft are Philadelphia colonial from “seventeen something!” G. C. W.

CLEVELAND.

Wm. P. Craig, representing the Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, was one of the visitors of the past few days. Mr. Craig reserved space in the Cleveland Flower Show where he is planning to put a feature exhibit.

Clarence Myers, of the Smith & Fetters Company, left on his vacation Monday. He chose a good time for vacating because of this being the hottest week of the summer. Trade is very inactive and stock is hanging on according to the wholesalers.

Schiller, the Florist (George Asmus?) of Chicago, was conducted by Mr. F. C. W. Brown, of the J. M. Gasser Co., through a tour of all the retail and wholesale houses in town. Mr. Schiller stated that he was going to try and get away to come to the Cleveland Flower Show if he could arrange it.

The Flower Show Committee is very much elated in securing a special prize from Mr. James W. Corrigan, one of the wealthy iron ore operators in Cleveland. This will be a silver cup valued at $500. The order has been placed with the Tiffany Company, New York, to design a special cup after a chrysanthemum. It is to be competed for by the private gardeners of Ohio only.

This is Style Show week in Cleveland and all the retail stores are full of the newest creations for milady. J. M. Gasser Company have taken advantage of the extensive publicity of all the dry goods stores by making a feature style show window. They have a model bride dressed in an American-created gown. At one side of the window is a very fine specimen of peacock which adds greatly to the attractiveness of the window.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Stanley Holland has removed from 2406 Eighteenth street to his attractive new quarters, corner of Eighteenth and Columbia Road, N. W.

W. W. Kimmel has reopened his store on Fourteenth street, N. W., for the fall season. He had been spending the summer at Colonial Beach.

Local gossip has it that Henry Pfister will shortly re-enter the retail florist business and will be located in the vicinity of Connecticut and Rhode Island avenues, N. W.

The Civil Service Commission announces that an examination will be held on October 6 to secure eligibles for appointment to the position of assistant in shade tree insect work in the Bureau of Entomology of the Department of Agriculture. This position pays between $1,400 and $1,600 per annum.

Fred Leapley became infected with poison last week by the bite of an insect, probably a mosquito, and the irritation caused him to scratch his forehead just above the eye. He had been handling flowers and plants that had evidently just been sprayed and it was not long before the swelling became of a size as to necessitate him remaining home for several days.

Although the purchase of the property has not yet been consummated, the Leo Niessen Company state that before another year they will be in a building of their own. In addition to putting on an automobile delivery wagon, they intend increasing their store force to take care of their added business and other improvements, such as increasing the capacity of their ice boxes, are also to be made.

“It was an agreeable surprise to those of us who represented Washington and Baltimore at the recent Convention,” said William F. Gude, who has recently returned from San Francisco, “to be entertained so royally all along the line. Through the courtesy of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Rock we had an excellent opportunity of touring Kansas City, Mo., by automobile. We were their guests at a dinner at the Muehlbach Hotel and later visited one of the theatres, and altogether spent a most enjoyable day in that city. This is a sample of the entertainment provided for us at every place we stopped.”

ST. LOUIS.

The Vanderwoorts Floral department worked a big force on Saturday night and Sunday decorating the store for their fall opening, which took place Monday, Sept. 13.

The Lady Florists held a pleasant meeting at the home of Mrs. John L. Koenig on Clarence avenue. All members were present and enjoyed a pleasant afternoon. Mrs. E. Schray will entertain them for the October meeting.

A new floral concern has made its appearance in St. Louis under the name of Young Bros. Floral Co. William C. Young and John Young, formerly with C. Young & Sons Co., have gone into the retail florists' business at 5504 Waterman avenue, the old West End branch of the C. Young & Sons Co.

The floral firms of Windler's, Wm. Schray & Sons, A. Brix and Max Pelletier were victims of many bogus telephone orders on Wednesday of the past week by a young West End woman to send floral baskets and plants to her birthday in the names of prominent brewery officials. The second order to the Windler store caused suspicion, and on investigation it was found to be bogus and caused the arrest of the woman, who was at the time entertaining her friends. The plants and floral offerings were ordered sent back and the woman held for fraud.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

Wm. F. Kasting has returned from the S. A. F. Convention, also Jas. Peak and Wm. Sleever and family.

Al. Keltch is now in the swim, having purchased a real Ford car, and can be seen at the wholesale house early in the morning.

Peter Hoffman, well known to the trade, is at the Deaconess Hospital. Mr. Hoffman had an operation performed which was successful and he is now gradually improving.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON This market is suffering from the effects of the hottest days of the present summer. Much of the material comes to town in a bedraggled condition of collapse equalled only by the condition of those unfortunate mortals who must stick to their job, an almost hopeless one at present, of trying to turn the stuff into cash. There are heaps of asters and gladioli still, and roses and carnations are accumulating only to go into the discard daily. People have little need to purchase flowers at such a time. Better news next week.

Conditions have fallen back to summer days again, the weather being very hot and roses of new crops came in very much full blown. Asters have continued heavy throughout the week, though gladioli have shortened up and price on these are a trifle better. Chrysanthemums have made their appearance but no special demand. Lily of the valley, white roses and orchids had a slight demand and lilies moved a little better than a week previous. Dahlias are coming in; also carnation are seen, some very choice Enchantress and Perfection, and these have sold readily.

CHICAGO As the first fall month advances, summer heat prevails as if making up for lost opportunity. Asters are being hurried to a finish and the most of the stock remaining is of medium size, although a few of the larger ones are still left. Carnations are beginning to come more freely, but they are far from their best. The Queen of the Fall arrived two weeks ago and Golden Glow and Smith's Advance have no rivals as yet in the chrysanthemum world. Prices are not high and demand is not urgent. Gladioli are seen in beautiful colors and spikes are large and full, but sales are very slow indeed. A fair quantity of roses is coming each day and the local demand is generally conceded to be fair, but the outside trade is needed to use up the flowers. The supply of garden flowers is not so great as in some other seasons and this has helped to keep prices steady.

CINCINNATI After an unusually cool August, September has started to give us some real summer weather. This has apparently worked to a disadvantage in the florist business for it has brought in very heavy cuts while the demand for stock seemed to fall away. Shipping business, however, has been pretty good. The supply of roses is very heavy and the same is true of asters and lilies. Dahlias are beginning to come in very strong. They are excellent in quality. Carnations are good and in a fairly large supply. A few chrysanthemums in yellow have made their appearance.

NEW YORK Whatever optimism might have been generated by last week's improved market tone was quickly and most effectively dissipated when this week's sizzling got to working. The unprecedented heat has created fierce havoc with most of the stock coming in and put a quietus on all demand. Lots of material has been received at the markets in useless condition. Quoting prices is a waste of time. There is no standard of values under present conditions.

PHILADELPHIA

The hot spell has certainly "played hob" with the cut flower business here. Last Saturday there were hundreds of boxes of asters that had never yet been opened and could not be sold at any price. Gladioli were almost in the same boat. The stocks came piling in by the carload, without sense or reason—each grower seeming to think maybe his particular shipment would be lucky enough to get the preference on any little business going. The aster and gladiolus situation was certainly enough to drive any wholesaler to drink. Things were not quite so bad in the rose market. American Beauty keeps improving in quality and is selling at about normal prices for this season of the year. Russells are also very good and going well. Brilliant is the best of the Killarneys at present, but even that summer favorite will soon show effects if this torrid weather keeps on a few more days. Carnations are shaping up a little better. The moist summer has been particularly favorable to the dahlia crop. We have never seen them in finer form than this year. October Frost and Golden Glow are about the only chrysanthemums to be seen so far. Orchids are still very scarce. A few Dendrobium formosum added a little variety to the limited list last week.

SAN FRANCISCO

The holidays of the past week drained this market of flowers, and some of the wholesalers say they could have sold more of some varieties had they been available. Labor Day and Admission Day, September 9th, were big days at the exposition, and the festivities in connection with both celebrations took many flowers, especially the Native Sons parade, which contained some of the most elaborate floats yet to appear during the exposition period. The Jewish holiday helped out considerably also by stimulating the demand for chrysanthemums and fancy basket arrangements, as well as general counter trade. Carnations are very scarce, it being difficult to fill orders at times.

The early violets are very popular and the limited supplies are readily absorbed. A good many asters are still appearing, but they offer no difficulties, as everything in this line cleans up closely. Chrysanthemums show more variety and better quality. Unakas are appearing quite freely in addition to October Frost, Golden Glow, Monrovia, Crocker and some of the smaller varieties which have been in for several weeks. Amaryllis is still plentiful and cheap. The supply of dahlias is abundant, but the demand seems to equal it every day. Small outdoor stock is decreasing in supply a little and the offerings find a ready outlet. Lots of flowering plants were brought in the past week which met with great popularity. Roses continue rather scarce with good stock demanding high prices. Orchids and gardenias are in light supply.

The wholesale market received some hard knocks the past week owing to the hot weather when the demand slowed down and consignments came in bad shape. The retailers, too, say that trade was beginning to look up when along came the hot wave and stopped the demand. Roses are so plentiful that a great many are dumped. The great majority of them are of the Killarney varieties. Carnations, too, are away too many. There is also a lot of outdoor stuff still coming in, including a great raft of asters.

Business during the past week has been exceptionally flat. This is due in part to the return of hot weather. There has not been near enough business to clean up even a fraction of the flowers with which the market is flooded. The supply of gladioli has lessened considerable. Dahlias are improving to some extent and more of them are coming in but these, as well as asters, have been hit by the heat and their sales are draggy. A decrease in the receipts of lily of the valley was reported but this did not cause much of a hardship and allowed the dealers to clean up better on that which they received. Cattleyas still remain very scarce and high of price. Roses are very plentiful and some of them are exceptionally good. Carnations are increasing in quality and improving slightly in quality, but for them there is very little call. An oddity of the week was the receipt by a local firm of an order calling for 175 callas which, of course, could not be filled.

NASSAU CO. HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the meeting of this society at Glen Cove on Wednesday, Sept. 8, awards were made as follows—Musk-melon, 1st J. Robinson; celery, 1st R. Jones; tomatoes, 1st F. Hitchman.

Nephrolepis Smithii exhibited by J. W. Everitt was awarded a certificate of culture. Early flowering chrysanthemums by H. Goodband and outdoor fruit by J. Holloway received the thanks of the society.

The Dahlia Show will take place on Thursday, October 7. Schedules may be had by applying to Harry Jones, secretary.

NEW YORK.

Frank Dinda of Farmingdale, Long Island, N. Y., is cutting flowers of his new orchid tinted seedling chrysanthemum, which Guttman & Raynor inform us they are selling at the exceptional price of $5.00 a dozen, wholesale. Frank Dinda has also a new seedling carnation, Olive Whitman, which is very fine at this early date.

Charles Millang is satisfied that he has solved the problem of the bundle boy and the street car restrictions with his Ford delivery car. Labor Day afternoon he spent in getting 1000 hydrangea heads in Bayside and distributing them in upper Broadway to the stores of the Colonial Florist. We had the pleasure of making the trip with him and could see plainly how impossible the transaction would have been without a motor wagon.

George Polykranas, the well-known manager for the United Cut Flower Co., has leased the store at 104 West 28th street for a wholesale and commission flower shop. He resigned from the United last December but remained with the firm until they were able to find a man to take his place. Mr. Polykranas has been in the retail flower trade for the past 25 years. Of his five sons two of them are his able assistants.

Bayside, N. Y.—Among the florist establishments of Bayside, one of the most interesting is that of Charles Thienel. Mr. Thienel has just had a new Lord & Burnham carnation house finished. A new boiler house and coal cellar ingeniously constructed under the concrete walk outside the houses has just been completed. Chrysanthemums and carnations are indoor specialties and outdoor the asters and hydrangeas, which are very fine, hold supremacy.

Frank Finger is another prosperous Bayside florist. Outdoor sweet peas are his leading specialty. There are three houses of carnations, very early, blooming quite profusely, and lots of chrysanthemums coming on. Branching asters have been grand for several weeks.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Adolphus E. Gude of Washington, D. C., and E. G. Hill of Richmond, Ind., returned to San Francisco a few days ago after visiting other parts of the state.

Just before his departure for the South, Wallace R. Pierson was guest of honor at a dinner given by a number of local florists. Mr. Pierson's friends will be glad to learn that he has fully recovered from the operation for appendicitis performed at a local hospital during the S. A. F. convention.

Angelo J. Rossi was chairman of the parade committee on Admission Day, and his house decorated one of the finest floats. It was a float for the Native Sons and Native Daughters, the main body of which, 26 feet long, was done with yellow chrysanthemums, while the lettering around the top was made of coreopsis and African marigolds. A big bear flag appeared on the sides, white carnations being used for the field, Minnie Burtle dahlias for the base, scabiosa for the bear and red carnations for the star.

Obituary

Joseph H. Bechamps.

Joseph H. Bechamps, a well known florist of Bayside, N. Y., died at his home in Flushing on September 7, aged 76 years. He was a veteran of the civil war. He leaves three sons and three daughters.

George Walther

George Walther one of the old-time Chicago retail florists, died on September 1. He was born in Germany and was 78 years of age at the time of his death. He retired from active work about two years ago leaving the business management to his daughter and son.

James Allen.

James Allen, gardener for A. D. Juilliard, Tuxedo Park, N. Y., died suddenly on August 17, aged 46. He was a native of Kent, England, and was classed as a very proficient gardener. He was active in the affairs of the Tuxedo Horticultural Society for many years.

Edward H. White

Edward H. White, a well known market gardener of Norwalk, Conn., committed suicide by hanging, early Saturday, Sept. 11, presumably because of the failure of his peach crop with which, it is said, he had speculated extensively. He was about seventy years old and leaves a son Fay O. White.

Fritz Starke.

Fritz Starke, who was until a few years ago, when he retired from business, a well known florist and nurseryman at Ravenswood, Long Island, N. Y., died at Dundee Lake, N. J., on Wednesday, Sept. 1, aged 63 years. He was a native of Westphalia, Germany, where he got his education as a gardener. He leaves a widow, three sons and two daughters.

Louis Forget

The British journals tell of the death in a hospital at Rennes, France, on August 10, of Louis Forget, a noted orchid collector for Sander & Sons for the past twenty-four years. The large consignments of the re-discovered Cattleya labiata which surprised the orchid world in the '90's were the result of Mr. Forget explorations in South and Central America, as well as many other rare and lovely gems among the Cattleyas and Laelias. His death was sudden, caused by heart failure.

Charles Jameson

Charles Jameson, 29, gardener for Mrs. Arthur Hale of Philadelphia, was drowned while bathing off Scarborough Beach at Narragansett Pier last Saturday afternoon. His home is in Hyde Park, N. Y. Mr. Jameson was swimming with late-season residents at the Pier when he was caught in a heavy undertow and carried out, the heavy seas of the past two weeks having made the beaches very treacherous.

William Goff, a companion, seized Jameson by the hair to save him when a big wave wrenched him from Goff's grasp and the body was lost and has not been recovered. Goff and three other persons were saved by the police.

Patrick Norton.

Patrick Norton passed away at his home in Dorchester, Boston, Mass., on Thursday, September 9, aged 76 years, after a weary and painful illness extending over seven or eight years, and on Saturday was laid away in Calvary cemetery. He was born in Athlone, Ireland, and came to this country when one year old. He was educated in the Dorchester public schools and, when a young man, got employment in Hovey's Nurseries at Cambridge, under that able old gardener, C. M. Atkinson. After seven years Mr. Atkinson left to take charge of the famous Cushing estate at Belmont and Mr. Norton went with him as assistant foreman. Four years later Atkinson accepted the position of superintendent of Mt. Hope cemetery. Norton was offered the place on the Cushing estate but refused, preferring to leave and go into the florist business with his brother Michael as Norton Bros., adjacent to their old home in Dorchester. That was in 1864 and for over thirty-five years the firm carried on a successful business, with greenhouses in Dorchester where they grew Bousilene roses and violets, and a store in Boston during the greater part of that time. Upon the dissolution of the firm Mr. Norton retired from business.

Mr. Norton's activities were many and he was a strong leader in the affairs of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, serving for many years in the capacity of chairman of the garden committee and of the committee of arrangements. It was in the latter capacity that he scored his most signal success—the great horticultural exhibition which was held in Music Hall during the S. A. F. Convention in Boston in 1890, an exhibition which to this day stands without a rival in this country as to quality and arrangement.

Patrick Norton was an able, genial, generous-hearted man, very popular among the leading men of the profession who were his contemporaries. Among his most intimate associates and admirers were such men as Peter Henderson, John Henderson, Michael Wiegand, Ernst Asmus, John N. May, John H. Taylor, Thomas Cartledge and other eminent horticulturists of New York and Philadelphia as well as the leading gardeners in and around Boston, most of whom have long since passed away. In fact, Mr. Norton's suave, tactful and kindly personality made him a great favorite wherever he went. The death of his only son about fifteen years ago made him heart-broken and since then he has never been the same man as before. He is survived by his widow and three daughters, and his brother M. H. Norton.

Manures for all Greenhouse Soils
Manufactured Exclusively for the Trade by the
CHICAGO FEED & FERTILIZER CO.
Union Stock Yards, CHICAGO, ILL.

BASIS FOR EUROPEAN IMPORTATION PERMITS.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

Dear Sir: I am informed by the Merchants' Association of New York that it is stated unofficially by the Foreign Trade Advisers in behalf of The American importers that the incurring of liability for the payment of goods by the American importer prior to March 1, 1915, is to be the basis on which permits for shipments will be issued in future. No payment needs to have been made, but the American purchaser must show that he was legally bound to pay for the goods before that date. Evidence that will substantiate the above facts should be submitted to the Foreign Trade Advisers by interested houses as follows:

(a) An affidavit giving the history of the case and showing all the documentary evidences submitted:

(b) Either the original contract or certified copies of the same:

(c) Copies of order sheets, the original acceptances, invoices and consular invoices if available. In addition to these proofs all marks, numbers, value, and cost of goods, and the name and address of shipping agent in neutral port should be given.

Such evidence will be kept on file by the Foreign Trade Advisers and as soon as the Department of State is officially notified by the British authorities that such claims will be received and considered by the British Government, it is the purpose of the Foreign Trade Advisers to file these claims with the British Embassy in Washington in the order in which they are received by the Department of State. It would be well, therefore, that all interested houses should forward a sworn statement to Judge W. D. Fleming, Foreign Trade Adviser, Department of State, Washington, D. C., as soon as possible if they desire an early movement of their goods.

As soon as the Department of State receives official confirmation of the above, they will be notified.

Yours very truly,

New York. CHAS. A. DARBS.

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 500 lbs.

THROW your old Supply Book away. We have a new one.

So many have been the improvements in the last two years in our various constructions, fittings and boilers, that we found our two years' old supply book was way out of date. So we promptly got busy and made it entirely new. Scarcely a page in it is like the old one.

There are a good many hundred different things listed, illustrated and described. Everything from glazing nails to our complete Reconstructed (construction you will find in it.

There are several very valuable pages of Helpful Hints on heating that you will particularly welcome.

There are suggestions about constructions.

There are new fittings which have never yet even been advertised. Fittings that we have just recently made, to solve special problems. They may exactly meet your needs.

We want every grower to have one of these Supply Books, but we do not intend to send them out hit or miss. They are a little too costly to use that way.

So fill out the coupon below, tear it off and send to us and we will be only too glad to send you one or more copies. One to hang in your work room, another for your desk drawer.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Allamandas

Plants that were pruned last spring to within a joint or two and these when they had made two or three whorls of leaves pinched again and so on during the summer will by this time have formed nice bushy specimens. Water may be withheld till they flag but do not allow the wood to shrivel. In fact allamandas can be so managed as to have them bloom at any time of the year by first resting the plants then pruning them back and then encouraging root action. If these plants are required for early flowering they should now be kept drier at the roots so as to harden and ripen up their wood. They will rest well in a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees, but when starting them into bloom keep them at 65 degrees and give an abundance of water as soon as they get into active growth. These plants are well worth to grow where yellow flowers are wanted; they adapt themselves beautifully to various forms of decorations.

Care of Palms

Now that the sun is losing its power we can discontinue shading. Get them inured to the sun by reducing the shading little by little until they are standing full sun. Syringings once a day during bright weather will now be enough. Root action is becoming less and less so they will not need so much moisture as a month back. For large palms it will be well not to run the temperature any higher than about 60 degrees night with about 10 degrees higher during bright weather. After the summer's heavy syringing and moving about the soil may be loose and they may have lost some of their compost. It will be well to go over them and replace any of this lost soil. Also give them a good cleaning by sponging the foliage.

Ferns

After some months of labor with the Boston fern and others of the same family we are now at the season when we will have to get them into shape for the winter and spring sales. Those who made a practice of planting out their Boston ferns during the summer months on benches should lose no time in getting the stock potted up. The average florist retailing his stock has use for Boston ferns from 4-inch pots on up to 12 inch pans and it is well to make what will be needed in the larger sizes when lifting the plants. There is no trouble in getting made-up plants established in a very few days if they are kept in a shady house, but don't let them remain there any longer than necessary. They can stand a good deal of sun and plants which have had a rather cool house and but little shade will be more satisfactory as house plants than soft stock. When potted up keep the atmosphere moist by damping down.

Orchids

Dendrobium nobile, and many Dendrobium hybrid-should now have their growths completed and be ready for a ripening process in a cooler and dry house. Reduce the water supply considerably but spray overhead on clear, hot days, such as we often get in October and November. Dendrobium Phalanopsis Schroederianum is at its best under warm house culture, and should have a night temperature of 65 degrees when developing its flower spikes. This orchid succeeds best in quite small pans or baskets, which dry up rapidly, and, if time will permit, the best method of watering is dipping in a pail or tub. At this season twice a week will suffice. D. Phalanopsis is more difficult to keep in good condition year after year. It does well in a hot, humid, old-fashioned stove-house.

Poinsettias

Keep the temperature where the poinsettias are, at about 60 degrees during the night, which can be raised 10 to 15 degrees more during sunshine. As they grow give the pots more room. Do not let them become crowded as they will draw up and grow lanky. On all bright mornings give them a light spray and keep the air of the house moist. When ventilating do it so as not to create any cold drafts or chilly atmosphere around the plants. From this out you will have to watch the waterings, as there is no plant more affected by careless watering than the poinsettia.

Necessary Repairing

All repairing that has been put off until now should be done without delay as the days are becoming shorter and the nights much cooler. This repairing will include putting in broken glass, replacing loose putty and painting where needed, and putting the boilers in the very best shape before the cold weather sets in.

Next Week:—Chrysanthemums; Cyclamens; Carnations; Christmas Lilies; Planting Trees and Shrubs; Waxed Bench Spice

Horticulture's place

Any periodical looking for advertising support in any special field is liable to be called upon from time to time to furnish evidence as to its value as a publicity medium and business producer for the advertising trade. Numerical circulation, that greatly overworked weapon of the advertising agencies, while it may have a considerable bearing upon the value of a publication catering to the general public is in a journal with circulation restricted to people engaged in a distinct industry, by no means an infallible basis of estimate as to productive publicity value, but, in fact, is in many instances a secondary consideration as compared with quality and appeal to a desirable purchasing class of readers. It has been the aim of HORTICULTURE since its inception to maintain a high plane of excellence and to count first among its readers the most reliable, intelligent and worthy classes in the industries to which it caters. That we have met with a good measure of success in this respect will not be openly denied. HORTICULTURE has reason to feel proud also of the wide territory over which its influence extends. For the information of those who may not fully realize what this means we will state that in the morning mail of the day on which these lines were written subscription remittances were received at the office of HORTICULTURE from twenty-one states, viz: Michigan, Georgia, Virginia, Maine, Missouri, South Carolina, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Illinois, Massachusetts, Nebraska, Minnesota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, New York, Indiana, Connecticut, Rhode Island, South Dakota and Florida, and Canada. Of the various enclosures referred to one was for five years in advance and three were for two years each. HORTICULTURE offers the advertising trade in horticultural, floral and allied industries a zealous and trustworthy advertising service and the evidence for any and all of the foregoing claims will be cheerfully opened to any intending advertiser desiring same.

"Abnormal" colors in the landscape

In connection with the question of propriety and taste in the use of certain trees and shrubs for garden and landscape adornment which was the subject of one of our editorial notes last week we are reminded by a friend about the clamor against the use of material bearing foliage other than straight green, which has been taken up as a sort of fashionable fad by some people. The blue spruce, purple beech and red or golden or variegated foliated subjects have all come under wholesale interdiction by these critics as unnatural and abnormal and consequently objectionable to their artistic sensibilities. But is the glaucous foliage of the blue spruce really unnatural or its frosted effect among other trees a landscape disfigurement? Watch the purple beech bursting into a cloud of soft coppery color in springtime, then gradually maturing to bronzy

Massachusetts' place

At the Panama Pacific Exposition the State of Massachusetts has once more demonstrated to the world her unrivalled industrial and educational resources and her ability to maintain her position of supremacy among her sister states. We learn from the report of the chairman of the Board of Managers that more first-class awards have been made at the Exposition to Massachusetts official exhibits and to the exhibits of Massachusetts industrial concerns than to any other state in the country—a fact which is all the more impressive when it is remembered that, with the exception of two of her neighboring New England states, Massachusetts is the most remote from the Exposition at the Golden Gate. Horticulturally as well as otherwise Massachusetts fares well. The first-class awards in that section are given as follows:

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Cutting Roses

It is very important that all roses should be cut properly, with attention paid to the leaving of eyes on the stems from which the flowers are cut. So early in the season, if the roses are cut carelessly, the plants will show the effects before the season is over. Leave two good eyes wherever possible, going down to one eye only in cutting a short rose that can be turned into a "number one" if cut a little lower. If the plant is well cut off it will pay to cut the bud out with one leaf, allowing the rest of the stem to remain. This will give the plant more foliage and give it a better chance to grow. This applies to plants that are surrounded by plants with plenty of growth especially; if all are pretty well cut off they have more show as all are about to start even for another crop and can be treated accordingly. The idea is to keep the plants as nearly even as possible so that water, feed, etc., can then be applied to the whole bench and all the plants will be in condition to take it. Although the roses can be left on a little longer, and so increase the size of the buds, care should be taken not to allow them to open too much. According to market reports there are many coming in that are far too open and therefore nearly given away. Even with ice boxes and iced shipments it is best to have the buds a little tight rather than too open.

Sand

On many places propagation begins very early, in fact as soon as it is cool enough to insure control of heat in the houses. For this reason it will be wise to secure a good supply of sand and have it on hand when it is wanted. There are sections of the country where sand is hard to get, and this applies to those places in particular. Where a good gravel pit is right on the place there is no better place to store sand than to leave it where nature put it. Protection from frost should be provided later; not too early, for if a heap of sand should be covered with leaves, straw, etc., from now on, fungus is liable to work into it and thus render it useless. In storing sand select a nice clean place where it will be fairly dry and where it will not be flooded every time it rains. Surface water collects impurities as it runs over the earth and these are not wanted in the sand.

purple, when as if regretting its sombreness it decks itself with innumerable tips of young growth of bright red; then in the fall—away into November, when other deciduous trees are bare, when it takes on its dress of golden russet and luminous orange in the sunlight—is it not a charm to all rational beholders? Is the indiscriminate denunciation of such objects anything more than the whim of a biased mind grown into an unreasoning prejudice? Noting the exquisite transitions of color in the spring foliage as it breaks out in deep rose, or dusky gray, when the swamps are aflame with red maples, or speeding through country roads on an autumn afternoon entranced by the radiant coloring of crimson, gold and bronze, one wonders why it is that the slightest reproduction of these dashes of color

A manure shed with a concrete floor is an ideal place as there is little danger of getting foreign matter into it from the bottom.

The Propagating House

If this holds last season's sand it should be removed at once allowing the air and light to sweeten the benches and the space under the benches before the new sand is applied. In cleaning this house do it even more thoroughly than when cleaning other greenhouses as it is very important to have everything clean and free from last year's soil and sand. Wash out the benches well and whitewash them at once. Then clean out once more under the benches and scatter some airslacked lime over the surface under the benches. This will help sweeten it and kill a good many germs and fungi that would otherwise winter over under there.

Watch for Spider

With the wet summer we are very apt to have a dark fall, and perhaps winter, and conditions may be such that the plants will not be syringed for two or three weeks at a time. Therefore, it will be well to go through the houses carefully taking note and marking all places that indicate that spider is present. These "nests," as they may be called, should receive a dose of good insecticide and an extra careful syringing whenever there is opportunity to do so. If there are none to be found so much the better but as a rule there will be a spot or two where spider can be found even with the most careful grower. Mark these spots and see that they are all clean before the season advances much more. It is especially necessary to see that all plants from which cuttings will be taken later are free from spider as well as other pests or diseases. If this is done far less trouble will be experienced with the cuttings and young stock later.

Ventilation in Cloudy Weather

Ventilation on cloudy or rainy days will have to receive more attention now and after than ever before as the plants are apt to get very soft if allowed to have too much heat on cloudy days. Keep the houses as cool as possible, not letting them go below 66 or 68, however. Keep air on at all times and give heat if necessary.

in a landscape picture at any other season of the year should be adjudged a violation of the principles of correct art or an affront to good taste. We overheard a lady, recently, condemning a well-placed clump of purple beeches on a certain estate as an evidence of faulty taste and we could not but notice the incongruous jumble of colors in her headgear and wonder how the lady's perceptions happened to be so esthetic as to gardens and so savagely crude as to hat adornment! In the selection of other than green trees, as in the matter of planting Hydrangea, Spiraea and other "too common" things on which adverse criticism is so often heard, "the eternal fitness of things" from all view points would, we think, be a good basis on which to rely. "A place for everything and everything in its place."

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

NEW YORK STATE FEDERATION OF HORTICULTURAL SOCIETIES AND FLORAL CLUBS.

The annual meeting of this organization was held at the office of Commissioner Wilson at the State Fair Grounds, Syracuse, on Thursday, September 16th. There were present President W. F. Kasting, Vice-President Erl A. Bates, Secretary John Young, Treasurer W. A. Adams, and Messrs. F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown; C. H. Vick, Rochester; Prof. Lumsden, Ithaca, N. Y.; Messrs. Youell, Thorp, Bultman, Sheeran, Baker, Workman and Bard, all of Syracuse; Dr. Mills, president of the Syracuse Rose Society; Messrs. Moeller and Fall of Eastwood, and Maguire of Auburn; Prof. E. A. White, Ithaca. President W. F. Kasting occupied the chair.

The report of the committee appointed to consider the question of whether a State society would be more beneficial than the federation was received and discussed. The committee was of the opinion that a State federation of organized interests would accomplish more than a society made up of individual interests. The delegates present sharing the same opinion, the suggestion was adopted, and the committee discharged with thanks.

Some discussion ensued as to the advisability of changing the name of organization, so that it included "Horticultural Societies," and thus become better descriptive of the federation, and on motion of Mr. Pierson seconded by Dr. Bates, it was resolved that the name be changed to read "New York Federation of Horticultural Societies and Floral Clubs."

The subject of the movement to obtain an appropriation of $60,000 from the State for the erection of greenhouses for the purpose of carrying on experimental work with flowers and vegetables came up for discussion. President Kasting reported the vetoing of the bill passed by both houses, and expressed his opinion that the only course was to have the bill introduced again. After discussion it was resolved that a committee of three be appointed to meet with the trustees of Cornell University, and determine if possible upon the most adequate framing of a new bill. It was the consensus of opinion that the trustees of the university should add to their regular budget for State appropriations an amount sufficient to cover the cost of the proposed buildings. If this were not feasible, it was understood that a bill should be introduced as before. The president appointed Messrs. Pierson and Vick, with himself, as such committee.

The next subject for discussion was the necessity of a building at the State Fair embodying means for taking proper care of exhibits of plants, flowers, fruits and vegetables, the quarters now in use not being suitable for the necessary preservation of exhibits during the fair period. Many suggestions as to the best way to secure the required facilities were offered. It was very generally agreed upon that if a suitable horticultural building were erected at the head of Empire Court the florists would see that a very creditable planting of flower beds around it was carried out, stock to be donated, and the only cost to be defrayed being the labor of planting and taking care of the beds. Such a planting would give this section of the grounds a park-like appearance, and render them pleasing to visitors, in striking contrast to their present appearance which was practically offensive. It was resolved that a committee of two be appointed to confer with the Western New York State Horticultural Society, the New York State Fruit Growers' Association, and the New York State Vegetable Growers' Association, and solicit their co-operation in an effort to evolve ways and means for getting an appropriation for the erection of a suitable building. Dr. Bates and Mr. Kasting were chosen as such committee. The discussion lasted some time, and much enthusiasm was evident.

Election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, Wm. F. Kasting, Buffalo; first vice-president, Dr. Erl A. Bates, Syracuse; second vice-president, Chas. H. Vick, Rochester; third vice-president, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown; secretary, John Young, New York; treasurer, W. A. Adams, Buffalo. The chair appointed F. R. Pierson, chairman of the legislative committee, and George Thorp chairman of the State Fair committee, and they were given power to select their own committees.

The report of the treasurer showed a substantial balance in the treasury. The meeting adjourned until next February, when there will be a meeting in Ithaca, during Farmers' Week. It was the most interesting meeting held since the organization of the Federation.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS' CLUB.

Sept. 16th, about 5 P. M., a telephone message notified the writer that Richard Vincent, Jr., and son Robert and two of their foremen were at the Brunswick, in response to a request from the writer also that they give us a talk on dahlias for this meeting of the club. It is characteristic of this firm that they never do anything by halves and we not only had a paper that was a gem from every point of view but we also had some 125 varieties of dahlias from White Marsh, Md., on exhibition, all correctly labeled and a revelation to some of our local people. Robert Vincent read the paper and told us the history of the dahlia from its earliest record down to the present day, with cultural notes and suggestions. Richard Vincent, Jr., told some of his experiences at the convention and invited us all to join the National Dahlia Society and come to the show in New York and also to their own show at White Marsh, Md., which unfortunately comes in the same week as our own show.

In addition to the flowers exhibited by our visitors we had a fine vase of dahlia blooms by David Rose, an amateur, who does not hesitate to pay the price for new varieties. Rudolph Nagle exhibited a very fine vase of chrysanthemums, Smith's Advance and a yellow sport from the same.

The Dahlia Show committee reported progress in all lines and asking for volunteers received the offer of the services of at least a dozen of the club members. Wild smilax was ordered for the decoration of the tables, vases contributed by several of the members and offers received from members having machines to collect these vases and help us in any other way, so that with such a unanimity of helpfulness it will not be our fault if the show is not a success.

The programme committee reported having a promise from Robert Pyle, of West Grove, Pa., for a talk for the October meeting and this report met with the enthusiasm that it deserved. The visiting committee reported as having nothing arranged but would probably make the first visiting trip of the season one to Reading during the week of their show.

The Vincents were given an unanimous vote of thanks for their generosity in coming all the way to Lancaster by automobile with such a fine exhibit of flowers and such a valuable paper, and we trust they recognized the fact that it was a real vote and not merely a perfunctory one.

ALBERT M. HERR.

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club had its initial meeting for the season at Horticultural Hall, on Tuesday evening, September 21. The attendance was moderate, but as large as could reasonably be expected for the first of the season. It had been announced that M. C. Ebel, of Madison, N. J., would address the club, but a communication from that gentleman stated that his health would not permit of his being present. It had been expected also that President P. Welch would tell the club some interesting things about the recent convention in San Francisco and his experiences in the transcontinental trip, but he was obliged to be out of town for several days, so the meeting had to provide its own entertainment from among the members present—not a difficult matter considering the oratorical abilities of some of the regular attendants.

Reports were made showing that the annual picnic had been a success, with a surplus to turn into the treasury, that the field day, so-called, at Newport had been a revelation in many ways to those who had participated and that the visit to the Breck-Robinson Nurseries at Lexington had been a very enjoyable outing. Votes of thanks was unanimously extended to the Breck-Robinson Co. and the Newport Horticultural Society. A communication from the Nassau County (N. Y.) Horticultural Society suggesting a plan of blanket membership in the various societies was referred to the executive committee, as was also a proposition that the club provide a special premium to be awarded at one of the big shows of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in 1916. The proposed renewal of the landscape gardening classes for the coming season was discussed and a report of last year's committee will be called for at the next meeting. It was voted to have the annual club banquet in February, 1916.

Eber Holmes, representing W. A. Manda, staged a number of dahlias, including Mrs. Minnie Burgess, scarlet, Albert Mande, lemon and pink, Veronica Manda, rose pink, Josef Manda, crimson, Gertrude Manda, rose, Mrs. A. I. Dupont, ruby red, South Orange Surprise, changeable bronze, salmon and white, and some ten seedling dahlias; also Rudbeckia Mandianum and Salvia Greggii. Unfortunately Mr. Manda's exhibit had suffered badly in transit. W. N. Craig exhibited from Faulkner Farm some beautiful hardy asters and a superb vase of Buddleia variabilis magnifica.

by 2 P. M. on examination days to receive attention from the committee. Must be prepaid to destination and an entry fee of $2.00 should be forwarded to the Secretary not later than Tuesday of the week they are to be examined, or it may accompany the blooms.

Seedlings and sports are both eligible to be shown before these committees, provided the raiser has given them two years trial to determine their true character. Special attention is called to the rule that sports to receive a certificate must pass at least three of the five committees.

The committees will be in session to examine such exhibits as may be submitted on each Saturday during October and November, the dates of which will be October 2, 9, 16, 23, 30 and November 6, 13, 20, 27.

Secretary Beneke reports an officers' meeting at the home of President Bourdet on Thursday night of last week for the purpose of laying plans for fall and winter. A nice lunch was provided by the host. As the next meeting is to be held on the grounds of the Bourdet Floral Co., they will be in shape to tell of the interesting things provided for the next few months. These monthly officers' meetings will continue throughout the winter, a week before each meeting.

LADIES' SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

To the Members of the Ladies' Society of American Florists:

My report and paper which I was to send to the convention was forwarded by registered mail to San Francisco and reached there on Aug. 15. They were returned to me on Aug. 29. I mailed them to the president that she would understand I had kept faith with her and was not responsible for my report not being at the meeting. I feel that it is only right and proper that all should at least see the report and I have asked HORTICULTURE to print the same.

NEW HAVEN COUNTY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The New Haven County Horticultural Society held its annual exhibition Thursday and Friday of last week in Harmonie Hall, New Haven. At 8 A. M., Thursday, everything was ready for the admission of entries, and they came thick and fast. John Lewis Childs, Inc., of Flowerfield, N. Y., sent 78 vases of gladioli, each vase a different variety.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., sent phloxes and five large vases of roses. P. W. Popp, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., showed dahlias and gladioli—a very artistic exhibit. The city of New Haven made an especially attractive display, through Gustave X. Amrhn, superintendent of the park department. There were many beautiful dahlias, lilies, phloxes, tuberose, pampas grass and myriads of polyantha roses. The finest and largest display, however, was by John H. Slocombe, the veteran dahlia specialist. He has served his day and generation and he has served it well. His exhibit occupied the whole of the stage and towered fifteen feet high in the rear. It comprised dahlias, gladioli, phlox, shasta daisies and cosmos.

For "collection of named gladioli," John Lewis Childs was 1st. P. W. Popp, 2nd. For "ten named varieties of gladioli," a special prize was awarded P. W. Popp.

The Lord & Burnham gold medal was awarded C. Louis Alling, of West Haven, for greatest number of points won in exhibits throughout the year at the bi-weekly meetings. The competition was very keen. C. Louis Alling is a young man who has made an enviable record as a dahlia grower. His dahlia winnings were five 1st prizes and six 2nd prizes.

W. F. Jost, who has six acres under dahlia cultivation in East Haven, won eight 1st and five 2nd. Mr. Jost's dahlia farm is up to date. He has about five hundred feet in length with patent sprinklers and other improvements. Alfred E. Doty, of Morris Cove, Conn., won three 1st and five 2nd in the dahlia class. Lester B. Linsley, of West Haven, won four 1st, one 2nd, and an Award of Recognition for a Dahlia Seedling of Merit, from seed in 1915. F. W. Dewhurst, of Milford, Conn., won four 1st for asters.

Others who were prize winners in the dahlia class were Joseph E. Wehner, Derby, Conn.; Herbert H. Clark, West Haven, Conn.; P. W. Popp, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; John Madzen, New Haven; A. W. Davidson, Ansonia, Conn.; Hubert R. Allen, West Haven; Nathan A. Miller, Branford, Conn.; Chas. C. Barnes, Fair Haven; W. J. Myers and Otto C. Unger, both of New Haven.

John H. Slocombe entered but few classes, preferring to rest on the laurels he obtained in former years. He took two first for yellow and pink dahlias respectively, 1st for cosmos, and a certificate of merit for a superior new dahlia. He also received an award of recognition for a meritorious dahlia seedling, from seed in 1915. He gained the Sanderson prize for the largest and best display of dahlias of

This new Euonymus appears to be a sport from the well-known old species, radicans, but it is far superior on account of the large and more glossy foliage. It seems also to adhere better to smooth surfaces, such as frame buildings and brick walls, than the old variety. The handsome foliage is attractive winter and summer, and is not injured in the least by our rather severe winters; but the main attractions are the holly red berries which cover the plant from top to bottom after frost. The berries form in August and color in November, but have generally fallen before first of April. The vine has become unusually popular among those that know it, and in the near future will be demanded as freely

American origin. He also captured the Elm City Nursery Co.'s prize of twenty dollars for the "best vase of fifteen blooms, showing stem and foliage of an American seedling, not yet in commerce."

RHODE ISLAND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Rhode Island Horticultural Society held its annual September exhibition of fruits and flowers on Thursday and Friday, Sept. 16-17, in the ballroom of the Narragansett Hotel, Providence. Exhibitors from all over the State had sent choice blooms and garden products, with the result that the ballroom was a mass of color.

The dahlias formed the largest part of the collection and they were arranged down the center of the room on a long stand. Many asters and gladioli were to be seen, the Judiculus display of A. P. Lenzen and the Carmicheal Orchards being especially beautiful. Although many blooms of a fine quality were staged, the hot weather had affected the flowers so that the exhibition was not quite up to the standard of last year. The fruit classes were not all filled, but the exhibits entered were of the first order. The display of bees, wax and honey was unusually good. One of the features of the exhibition was the large number of entries of fruit and flowers received from school children.

The officers of the society are: Dr. H. H. York, president; Harold L. Madison, treasurer; Ernest K. Thomas, secretary. The exhibition committee are Eugene A. Appleton (chairman), Joshua Vose, Arthur Sellew, Cornelius Hartstra, Dr. H. W. Heaton, the president and secretary. The judges were William Gray of Newport and Henry C. Neubrand, of Cromwell, Conn.

DREER'S ARAUCARIAS

Only partial imports of Araucarias were received from Belgium the past spring, not sufficient to cover the usual season's requirements, and even if shipments should come through this fall (which at present does not appear likely) newly imported stock would not be available for this season's sales as it takes fully three months for this stock to become established and be fit to sell after its trip across the Atlantic.

We are pleased to state that we have a splendid stock, not sufficient to last the season out, but we offer as long as the stock lasts exceptional values as below.

The prize for the best greenhouse collection went to State Senator Rowland Hazard, of Peace Dale. DIPLADENIA SPLENDENS PROFUSA.

The illustration which appears on the cover of HORTICULTURE this week shows a plant of Dipladenia profusa, which was grown from a cutting about eighteen years ago. At the time the picture was taken, there were about two hundred open flowers upon the plant. It is one of a pair that we have used many times in decorative work during the last dozen years. This Dipladenia is in flower from June until Christmas. It has been potted once every two years, during the last twelve years, but has been fed liberally with manure water during the year that it did not receive a shift. The potting compost has been equal parts of fibre of loam, osmunda fern root, sphagnum moss, sand, charcoal, with about a third of sheep manure, and a good sprinkling of chicken bone. This has been used in as rough a state as could be conveniently worked around the ball of the plant. Plenty of good drainage is essential, so that the water may pass off freely. We rest the plants from December until February and prune back the weak wood to strong eyes, before starting into growth in the spring. We find that it is a good plan to pinch the points of the shoots after the flowers are set. This check makes the belated eyes start away, and catch up to the others. Stove temperature is advised for these plants in nearly all books on plants that I have read, but I find that they do far better when treated as a greenhouse plant. We have wintered them as low as forty and forty-five degrees and find that they do not require water so often, and start into stronger growth when the resting period is over. In summer we never shade them but give all the ventilation possible. The individual blooms are useful for cut flower work, and make very pretty centerpieces. Their lasting qualities are good, the lovely pink flowers keeping in good condition for a week.

A number of additional committees were suggested which will be announced as soon as completed.

CLEVELAND SHOW TO SHARE PROFITS WITH EXHIBITORS.

The enterprising florists and growers of Cleveland are not to be outdone by the much advertised citizen of a sister Lake City in the matter of profit sharing. For the first time in the history of floral exhibitions the exhibitors are to reap a double reward from their part in the show. All trade exhibitors in the Cleveland Flower Show to be held at the Coliseum, November 10 to 15, will have returned to them twenty-five per cent. of the net profits of the show.

This action was taken by the executive committee, all Cleveland growers and dealers, when it appeared that the success of their venture was guaranteed. Not being interested in the show from a profit standpoint and being assured that their cash guarantee was safe from the sale of space, they decided to make the event truly co-operative, and to share the profits with the trade exhibitors who have responded so liberally in the matter of taking space in the show.

Widespread interest in the coming Cleveland Show indicates a record-breaking attendance. The prospect of good returns from admissions added to the large proportion of the Coliseum space already sold makes it certain that there will be a considerable sum in the fund to be returned to the trade exhibitors.

At an executive committee meeting of the Cleveland Flower Show, held in the Hollenden Hotel, Friday evening, September 17, the following important action was taken because the three associations—Ohio Horticultural Society, Cleveland Florists' Club and the Garden Club of Cleveland, guaranteeing the $12,500 expense of the Cleveland Flower Show—are not in the show business for an enormous financial gain, the trade exhibitors will receive an equal share of the possible total net profits likewise with the three associations, 25 per cent. of the net profits to be divided pro rata with all trade exhibitors. The share of each one, however, is not to exceed 50 per cent. of the total amount of cost of space occupied by each exhibitor.

This action was passed unanimously after financial report made by Chairman H. P. Knoble, who is directing the work of ten sub-committees in charge of the various details of the show.

The following were in attendance:

H. P. Merrick of Lord & Burnham Co.; C. U. Russell, Jones-Russell Co.; Geo. Bate, Cleveland Cut Flower Co.; Herbert Bate, Cleveland Cut Flower Co.; F. C. W. Brown, J. M. Gasser Co.; Timothy Smith, Smith & Feters Co.

The executive committee was represented by Chairman S. Prentiss Baldwin of Gates Mills, O.; Wm. G. Mather, president of the Ohio Horticultural Society; H. P. Knoble, general chairman of all committees, and F. A. Friedley, secretary of the James Eadie Co.

It was predicted at the meeting, which was a very enthusiastic one, that the few remaining spaces would be taken immediately. When all the space is sold it will leave the committees free to devote all their time in developing the artistic side of the show and in spreading the publicity throughout the country among the trade.

THAT RHODODENDRON PEST.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

Dear Sir—I notice in your paper of Sept. 4th an item headed "A pest of the Rhododendron," in which Mr. Pauls, from Palisade Parks, N. J., complains that he has trouble with what we call in Holland "Mobiums," which come from Holland. That does not mean that Holland is the only place where this bug exists as I have seen places here which had more of the bugs on the square foot than we have in Holland on the square acre. Mr. Hatfield says it is caused by a little white grub about the size of a grain of wheat. They must have large grains of wheat in Massachusetts as when the larvae are full grown they are about an inch in length and live in winter time as larvae in the ground and prefer Taxus above anything else to feed on. In the summer they grow to black bugs of the size of peas and during the night attack the leaves of the Rhododendron and other plants, hiding themselves during the day time under the leaves on the surface of the ground. If the gentlemen will keep the ground clean of leaves and put a few small boards on the ground under the Rhododendrons or Taxus, they will find in the morning many bugs on the underside of the board and it is easy to get rid of this pest by a little trouble and attention.

Your respectfully,

P. OUWERKERK.

Weehawken, N. J.

FOURTH NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Preparations for the Fourth National Flower Show, to be held in Philadelphia, March 25th to April 2d next, are in active progress. Space in the areas set apart for the trade exhibits is being freely reserved, and at present the bookings amount to over $4,000 in the aggregate. One exhibitor who had engaged a liberal space recently increased his booking to 1,200 sq. ft. equivalent to a $1,200 stand.

Chairman George Asmus, of the National Flower Show Committee, will call a meeting of his committee shortly, at which the second preliminary schedule will be settled. The schedule will include the American Carnation Society's premiums and the Carnation section; this section will, it is expected, have more than usual prominence for the reason that the A. C. S. is to celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary or Silver Jubilee at this show.

The Rose Society and American Sweet Pea Society premiums, with the sectional premiums, will also appear in the new schedule. Special prizes offered by H. A. Dreer, Inc., H. F. Michell Co., John Cook, Zanberger Bros. of Holland, and others will also be announced.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society has decided to abandon its customary Spring Show for 1916 and to throw its influence into the work of the National Flower Show, and to this end has appointed W. F. Therkildsen, Robt. Craig and David Rust a committee to act in conjunction with the National Flower Show Committee.

J. Otto Thilow, chairman of the lecture committee has the work of his committee well in hand and the lectures will be an important feature of the show. The Committee on special features and the other local committees are all making good progress and have their plans well on the way to completion.

Much favorable comment by the trade has been passed upon the two plantings outside the exhibition hall which have been very conspicuous this summer and have helped considerably to attract attention to the forthcoming show. H. A. Dreer, Inc., and H. F. Michell Co., who provided these plantings are to be commended for their interest and forethought.

Treasurer F. R. Newbold of the Horticultural Society of New York, who is taking a very active and kindly interest in the show, has obtained promises of assistance from the members of several ladies' garden clubs and societies, and he reports that all seem ambitious to even outdo the efforts of the ladies whose excellent assistance was such an important feature of the success of the 1915 New York Show.

That the show has the interest and attention of the trade in all its branches throughout the country is evident from the letters received at the secretary's office, and there is every prospect that the National Exhibition of 1916 will eclipse all preceding flower shows.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

MASS. AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE NOTES.

The Mass. Agri. College began its new year last Wednesday. Classes began on Thursday. There have been some radical changes in the Horticultural Department. C. H. Thompson, formerly of the Missouri Botanical Gardens at St. Louis, has taken charge of the work in plant propagation and plant materials. This relieves Prof. Nehrling of considerable work and allows him to divert his entire attention to floriculture. Several new courses have also been introduced in the department of floriculture. The work in greenhouse construction which formerly came in Floriculture 1 (Greenhouse Management), has been placed in a separate course known as Floriculture 5. Floriculture 7, is a new course in palms and decorative plants while Floriculture 6, is also a new course in hardy perennials, annuals, and bedding plants. The department is better equipped than ever and looks forward to a very successful year.

Twenty-three students are enrolled in the floriculture courses. Mr. Thurston is back to continue graduate work in horticulture and will assist in the department as before.

In the market gardening department H. F. Thompson of Arlington has been promoted to head of the department, while A. S. Thomson, of Pennsylvania, has been engaged to assist in the work.

In the department of Botany some changes have been made. Botany 7, formerly known as Plant Pathology, has been changed to a course in the classification of the different fungi and economic fungi. The scope of Botany

5 (Plant Diseases), has been increased to meet the requirements of the individual student.

P. H. Elwood, hitherto engaged in extension work in Landscape Gardening, has accepted a position as head of the department of Landscape Gardening at the University of Ohio.

The flower show section of the annual Country Fair at Lincoln Park, New Bedford, Mass., last week was in the theatre building in charge of James Garthley, ex-gardener at the Rogers estate in Fairhaven, assisted by James Armstrong, gardener at the Converse estate at Marion.

Thomas W. Head, recently of Bergenfield, N. J., has accepted the position of superintendent of the J. Ogden Armour estate at Lake Forest, Ill.

Seed Corn.

Continued warm weather up to this date, much of it the warmest of the entire season, has probably saved the corn crop. This, at least, is the message from one of the leading seed corn growers. It may be well to add that the corn has a long line of vicissitudes to encounter before it is cured and becomes seed for planting. This applies particularly to sweet corn and especially if any considerable percentage is soft or "in the milk." A rainy, cold autumn will ruin a large percentage of such corn, causing it to mould, unless cured by artificial heat, which most of the progressive growers are now prepared to employ. However, the condition of the crop is vastly more satisfactory than appeared probable a month ago.

Beans.

There is nothing more definite to report regarding the bean crop than contained in Seed Trade Notes of two weeks ago. We are still hoping despite the pessimistic reports of the growers that conditions are really not as bad as they fear.

Peas.

No further particulars can be given of the pea crop. There are still fears of some shortage of the late long pod sorts, but this will probably prove a blessing to the dealers. We are advised that growers of green peas for the market realized very unsatisfactory prices this season, which, as in the case of beans, will probably have a restraining influence on demand. So far as we have ascertained either seed crops remain in status quo as last reported.

Garden Beets.

A large acreage of garden beets was grown for seed the past season. One grower estimated that more than 100,000 pounds more were grown in this country this year. We have no means of knowing how good this guess is. Possibly some of our readers can make a better estimate. So far as we can learn, dealers generally are not worrying about their supplies of beet or other biennials. Perhaps they have assured themselves on this point. The situation will doubtless develop within the next sixty days. We hope to give a general summary of the season's crops in a near issue of HORTICULTURE.

Notes.

The Door County Seed Co. have now occupied their new quarters on St. John street.

Black's Seeds is the title of a new company at Albert Lea, Minn., which succeeds Robert H. Black.

The value of horticultural imports at the port of New York, for week ending September 11, is given as follows: Clover seed, $13,000; grass seed, $10,420; fertilizer, $11,022; trees, plants and shrubs, $110,965.

Charles Johnson, American agent for Denaiffe & Son, La Menitre, France, has changed his main office address from Marietta, Pa., to 1905 Virginia street, Berkeley, Cal. His New York address, up to Oct. 10, will be Charles Johnson, Hotel Brevoort, New York. After that date it will be in care of American Express, 65 Broadway, New York. He is now on his annual business tour. Denaiffe & Son having resumed their business which was suddenly suspended a year ago by the calling into the French army of more than 600 employees, including every active head of the company.

NEWS NOTES.

Beacon, N. Y.—Benjamin Hammond advertises that ten per cent of all sales made of Hammond's Cottage Colors for use on property located in the city of Beacon will be turned over to the treasurer of Highland Hospital.

Hartford, Conn.—A contract for 1,400 potted geraniums has been awarded to E. S. Drake of Fairfield avenue, by Charles A. Stedman Camp, Sons of Veterans, to be furnished for decoration of the graves of the veterans of the Civil War next Memorial Day. Because it has grown increasingly more difficult to secure flowers by the methods which have long been pursued in this city, the society, which now has charge of the Memorial Day celebration, decided to make a change last summer, and after much deliberation decided to buy potted plants next year.

The big conservatory in course of construction by Lord & Burnham in the Missouri Botanic Garden is nearing completion. Here the chrysanthemum show will be staged in November.

day for the opening has not yet been set, but that named will be one which will least interfere with other attrac-

The three-story building occupied by the Raedlein Basket Co. is being remodeled and the changes will include a fine new front with suitable show windows.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Fisk are now on their way home from a six-weeks' trip through the west, with California and their daughter's home as the objective point. Mr. Fisk is so pleased with the Pacific coast that he will likely make that country his permanent home.

Fritz Bahr, opened a fine new store at Highland Park on Sept. 18th. The store is located in the down town district about four blocks from the green-houses, and is equipped with high-class furnishings suitable to the trade he enjoys there. Many remembrances were sent by his numerous friends in the trade. An unique feature of the new store is the service room which is in the form of a cottage and occupies the middle portion of the store which is very deep. This cottage affords excellent opportunity for showing window boxes, etc.

NEW YORK.

The Dahlia Show at the Museum of Natural History on September 25, 26, 29 is expected to bring a great many horticultural visitors from out of town.

Geo. E. M. Stumpp reports a very successful season at Southampton and predicts that Southampton will before long outclass Newport as a summer resort. Mr. Stumpp is taking a great deal of interest in the New York Spring Flower Show and has signed up for almost one thousand dollars' worth of space.

The first meeting of the schedule committee of the New York Spring Show was held in the office of Secretary John Young and a good beginning made on the serious preparatory work. The re-election of the old officers and manager gives assurance of the ultimate success of the undertaking, financially and otherwise.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

George Field is beginning to cut some very fine Cattleya labiata and his Dendrobium formosum are due in the first of the coming week. The rose houses are taking on fine form.

Leapley & Meyer are dressing up their store and expect to have it take on a most attractive appearance prior to the Grand Army celebration next week. The outside of the store has been painted a rich chocolate brown, while the interior has been decorated in several harmonizing shades of green. New cork linoleum which closely resembles a mottled stone flooring, has recently been laid and numerous other improvements have been made.

Mrs. J. A. Phillips, who conducts the flower store at the corner of Fourteenth and Harvard streets, is being congratulated on having won the distinction of being the most popular lady in the Mt. Pleasant and Columbia Heights districts and as a result being awarded a trip to California. 29,680 votes were cast in her favor. With her husband, Mrs. Phillips has been in the florist business in the neighborhood of their present location for the past twelve years.

A number of the local florists and growers are again complaining of the worms which are stripping the fronds of their ferns and doing their work so quickly that a whole house may be cleaned out in short order unless prompt action is taken. These worms closely resemble cut worms and range in size from a quarter of an inch to an inch and a quarter. One florist states that he has obtained good results through the use of Persian insect powder. This can be put on the ferns in large quantities without injuring them and later washed off with a hose.

The second annual flower show under the auspices of the Falls Church, Va., Civic League is to be held October 1 and 2. Competition for prizes is open only to amateurs and no entrance fee is to be charged; nor will there be any admission fee charged to the exhibition. The purpose of the show is to encourage the beautification of homes. A large number of special prizes are offered by florists, nurserymen and seedmen of Washington, Philadelphia and other cities. George W. Hess, of the Botanic Gardens, and George A. Comley, a Washington florist, have consented to act as judges; the third judge will be announced later.

BOSTON.

Ruane florist, Waltham, celebrated his fifth anniversary on September 15, by presenting a rose to every caller at his store.

The daily papers are praising Henry Penn for his philanthropy in sending to the hospitals as a gift on Wednesday, September 22, thirty-five thousand roses. Generosity of this kind is commendable as well as enterprising.

The annual meeting of the Boston Flower Exchange will be held on Saturday evening, October 23, at Young's Hotel. The annual banquet will be enjoyed at the same time by the stockholders and invited guests and will be, as usual, one of the "red-letter" events of the floricultural year in the Hub.

W. C. Ward of Quincy has sold out his business and is going down in Maine to lead the simple life and seek some return in comfort and recreation for his years of arduous work. We hope he will find it to be all he anticipates. The purchasers are W. Cahill, formerly employed by Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., and Charles Beasley, recently of New Jersey. The sale was dated September 1, but Mr. Ward agreed to stay a little while to "break them in." We are told that their first job in the breaking-in process was that of wheeling manure. Just imagine! But there's nothing like starting at "the bottom of the ladder" and the young firm may yet have occasion to thank Mr. Ward for his practical lesson in the fundamentals of successful floriculture.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Clifton W. Loveland, Assistant State Entomologist and Secretary of the Rhode Island League of Improvement Societies, has resigned his posts here and gone to Florida, where he is to take up the work.

William E. Chappell, a well-known florist of this city, has sufficiently recovered from his long illness to get back on the job. Last spring he suffered a severe nervous breakdown and for five months gave up business entirely. His trip to Florida was the most beneficial of all. Mr. Chappell looks for a busy season and is getting back into the harness to keep up with the procession.

The Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island will hold its first meeting following the summer recess next Monday evening, in Swart's Lodge Hall, 96 Westminster street, when matters of business will come up and plans for the winter work will be discussed. A report of the committee on the annual outing of the club will be submitted and there will also be reports from members bearing on the vacation period.

PHILADELPHIA.

The "Old Guard" will hold their annual reunion at Commodore Westcott's bungalow, Waretown, N. J., week end of Oct. 1.

The sympathy of the many friends of Victor I. Ridenour the well known retail florist of Ridge Ave. and 32nd street goes out to him on the death of his father which occurred in Washington, D. C. on the 19th inst.

Growers about here are speaking enthusiastically of the new rose Mrs. Moorfield Storey which is already showing great promise. One of the largest plantings is that of William Munro at Garrettford. His stock looks very fine but he is not going to send any to market just yet. We may expect some about mid-October.

There were two dahlia shows here on Tuesday, 21st—one at Horticultural Hall, the other at Michells'. Both were quite interesting and instructive from a local standpoint. The society idea is the best to our mind as it keeps the commercial idea in the background and is therefore more convincing to the public.

Our attention has been called to a slip of the types and the proof reader on an item in last week's notes. For Fordbrook Farms read Fordhook Farms. The Phila. Ledger man may not have known any better but Horticulture did, and Mr. Burpee will please accept our apology. Fordhook has a very interesting history in connection with the family forebears of the Burpees. We may tell the story some day.

John Deutscher, late local salesman for the Thomas Young establishment at Bound Brook, N. J., will start business on his own account at 1625 Ransstead street on or about the 25th of Sept. He will do a general wholesale commission business and will handle a full line in addition to the Bound Brook specialties. The title of the concern will be The Philadelphia Wholesale Cut Flower Exchange. A Mr. Glaser will be associated with Mr. Deutscher and is reported to be the financial backer of the new venture. Mr. Deutscher is well-known and well liked in the local trade here and has excellent prospects of making a good success. He had the advantage of several years experience in the New York wholesale market before striking Philadelphia and this, added to his local experience, will be of distinct benefit in carving a foothold for himself here.

Condensed, up-to-date, thorough, may be truly said of the 450 page text-book or Commercial Floriculture by Professor White of Cornell, just published by the MacMillan Co., and editorially noticed in HORTICULTURE recently. We have had the pleasure of glancing through a copy and it is a monument of learning, accuracy and comprehensiveness. The professor has depended not only on his own profound knowledge of his subject, but he has also gone right to the recognized experts in every branch of the business and tells their story in their own words. The grower, the commission man, the retailer; all receive their proper share of treatment in every phase of their operations. This book should be in the hands of everyone connected with the business, young or old; but especially the younger element. The fine work of pioneers in this line, such as Henderson, Hunt, Scott and others are all retained where valuable; but all matter now superseded has been eliminated, so that the student may grasp the essentials of his particular branch in a nutshell. The price of the volume is $1.75 net. Copies can be supplied from the office of HORTICULTURE.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Podesta & Baldocchi are showing a fine lot of Irish Elegance roses, the first that have come in for some time.

John R. Fotheringham, who represents the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Company and several other houses on the Coast, is making a visit to the East.

Arthur Cann, who has conducted a flower shop at San Jose, Cal., for the last 19 years, and has been for five years at 51 S. First street, has just moved into a new store at S. First and San Antonio streets. Here he has a store about twice as large as the old one, and a large basement suitable for storage of supplies, in connection with his extensive seed business. The store is beautifully fitted up and conveniently arranged, with an office and basket-display room on the balcony and a comfortable writing-room on the ground floor.

Flower Market Reports

Seasonably cool weather BOSTON gives renewed courage to a dispirited market and a cheerful buoyant air is noticed in the wholesale district. Values are still at lowest point on everything but quality is improving and quantity on some things that have encumbered the market is materially reduced. As soon as outdoor flowers have been finished up, by frost or otherwise, conditions will brace up, but until then not much permanent advancement can be expected. Cattleyas have suddenly become very plentiful and prices have been cut down fifty per cent.

Trade was on the quiet BUFFALO side up to last Friday, when things improved slightly, especially in the aster and gladiolus lines, which are gradually coming nearer to the end daily. The let up on supply caused the prices to build up. Roses are good. Excellent color is seen in Killarney, and there are some fine Maryland, Scott, Key and Ophelia, all of which have had a fair sale. Lilies are shortening up and prices are gradually getting better. There has been a call for yellow and white chrysanthemum, lily of the valley, white roses and orchids. Carnations are coming on in excellent shape. Shipping trade has been good and the outlook is for a good autumn business.

Trade in general has CHICAGO been fairly good the past week. There was a good supply of flowers and they cleared up well, especially all stock that was of first-class quality. The hot weather at the end of the week diminished the supply and at this writing good roses are not easy to get in large quantities. The number of telegrams coming into this market show the supply is short outside also. Asters are now about gone and as usual they are more in demand as they disappear. Early chrysanthemums are about all cut and the supply has not been large. All kinds of roses have been in sufficient supply till now and the present shortage is only for a few days. American Beauties are rather below demand. There is a scant supply of cattleyas and they are bringing good prices. Outdoor flowers are represented now by tritoma, larkspur, hardy phlox, gailardia, etc. Fine smilax is now seen in the market but demand is slow.

The change to cooler CINCINNATI weather will probably bring about better market conditions for it will undoubtedly cut down the quantity of stock coming in and cause the supply to more nearly equal the demand. Roses are in large quantities and all seasonable varieties may be had. Carnations are coming in somewhat stronger and are of a much better quality. Both longiflorum and rubrum lilies are plentiful. Asters are in a heavy supply and good gladioli may still be had. Cosmos and dahlias are both excellent and plentiful. Wild smilax is meeting with a strong demand, caused by many fall opening decorations.

The wholesale business had been moving along very satisfactorily when its progress was interrupted by the very warm spell, then it went all to pieces and thus far has not recovered. Roses are now being sold in most cases in bulk—$1.00 a box, and so on. Dahlias have been very plentiful and cheap, with quality excellent. Gladiolus also good, although the recent storm put a good many of them out of commission. Carnations are getting more plentiful. The supply of Cattleya labiata already exceeds the demand and prices have fallen away down, blooms of indifferent quality being offered as low as 10 cents and the very best stopping at 25c. Gigas, of course, commands a better figure. Oncidiums are meeting with a good demand at $2.00 to $3.00 per 100. Southern asparagus, which has been coming in heavily all summer, has been received in bad condition of late on account of the hot weather. Asters less plentiful and not so good as they were.

The two weeks' PHILADELPHIA heat-wave broke here on the 17th and this week quite an improvement can be seen in the quality of the dahlias as to substance and finish. Other flowers also show the same effect although in lesser degree. The aster crop is on the wane, the local supplies being the final cuts from the field and not high-grade. There are some nice asters arriving, however, from greenhouse-grown plants and a limited quantity of field-grown from northern points which are also very good. Gladioli are nearly over. White roses sold well last week, also Russells and Scott Key. Beauties are rather draggy. Cosmos, tuberose and tritomas are very plentiful—about three times as many as the market can absorb. Carnations are showing up a little better and there is no trouble in selling the few arriving with good stems, but the short-stemmed ones are hard to dispose of. Orchids are more plentiful and prices have eased up considerably. In chrysanthemums the Golden Glow seems to be the only one in sight in any quantity. Very few of the early white varieties are to be seen.

While the rush SAN FRANCISCO experienced early in the month has passed, the florists are still getting a lively business. It is now getting to the hot, dry time of year before the fall rains, and much of the outside stock is going off, both in quantity and quality, while little new is coming in, aside from chrysanthemums, of which there is now considerable variety, yellow predominating. Shipments to state points are increasing rapidly, but the heavy movement will not start till next month. Roses show little improvement. The best of the daily cut is spoken for in advance, and everything cleans up early in the day. The carnation market is still unsatisfactory, with very little stock and most of that poor. Good violets still command high prices, and it will be several weeks before much stock will appear. Asters are scarce and poor, and a week or so more will finish them. There are still a good many sunflowers, marigolds, gypsophilas, scabiosas, etc., but not so much as a few weeks ago. A few scattered lots of gladioli are still coming in. Dahlias are offered in abundance, the average quality good. Lilies, except cold storage stock, are about gone. There is all the amaryllis the market will absorb. The cut of gardenias is improving a little both in quality and quantity and finds a very good demand. Orchids are extremely scarce; there is practically nothing beyond an occasional spray of phalaenopsis, though a fine cut of cattleyas is expected within a few weeks. Some very fine cyclamen plants are coming on, but so far no great number have been brought to market. Greens are in strong demand. There is plenty of Asparagus plumosus, huckleberry is largely used, and some fine varieties of eucalyptus are receiving attention.

During the last week ST. LOUIS this market was demoralized; there was so much stock coming in and the demand being so slow that the bulk of the consignments were dumped or sold at so low a price that it about paid express charges to outside consignors. There is entirely too much second-grade stock coming in, while the extra fancy grades are very scarce at present.

A change in the temperature seems to bid well for an increased business during this week. Last week showed something of an improvement with some few society events calling for decorations. The aster season is about over and the continued hot weather has had its effect upon dahlias. Chrysanthemums are coming in increased quantities and Golden Glow, with heavy heads and fairly long stems, are being offered. Gladioli are slowly leaving the market. In carnations an improvement is noted in the varieties now to be had and they are very good considering the season. Lily of the valley is selling better and the supply has increased slightly. Lilies are less plentiful and falling off in demand. Orchids are again to be had in small quantities.

Waltham, Mass.—Peirce Brothers donated 5,000 roses last week to be sold on Thursday afternoon and evening in the lobbies of the theatres and other public places for the benefit of the G. A. R. encampment.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Harry Krider.

Mrs. Harry Krider, better known perhaps to the New York trade under her maiden name of Miss Smedley died on September 10, of heart failure. As bookkeeper and cashier for J. K. Allen for a number of years previous to her marriage, Miss Smedley was deservedly popular with the trade because of her fidelity and agreeable personality.

Mrs. Johanna Barth.

Mrs. Johanna Barth, who for the past fifty-two years had conducted a flower shop at the entrance to the Mt. Olivet Cemetery in Bloomfield, N. J., died on September 11, at her home, 38 Division place, from a complication of ailments. She was the widow of Michael Barth and was seventy-four years old. Surviving her are four sons and two daughters.

Charles F. Hoffmeister.

Chas. F. Hoffmeister died at his home on September 17, after an illness that lasted for some months. He was in his 56th year. Mr. Hoffmeister had been connected with the florist business in Cincinnati, Ohio, for more than a score of years. First he was in the employ of his brother and sisters in the Hoffmeister Floral Co., and later had his own business in a retail store and later had a greenhouse plant of his own at Ft. Thomas, Ky. His wife, a daughter, Miss Marie A. Hoffmeister, and two sons, Chas. H. and Otto H. survive him.

Alvin Burrows.

While swimming in the Eastern Branch, near the Anacostia Bridge, Washington, D. C., last week, Alvin Burrows, 20 years of age, of 1915 Good Hope Road, Anacostia, lost his life and nearly carried a companion, Norman Padgett, with him. These two and Clifton J. Smith all reside at the Good Hope Road address. Burrows was an employee of Fred H. Kramer. Padgett was employed at the Gude Bros. greenhouses, while Smith works at the steel plant. Burrows was seized with cramps and Padgett went to his rescue but was borne down by the drowning man. Smith soon arrived where the two youths were fighting for their lives and separating them towed Padgett to safety and then went back after Burrows but he could do nothing and the body was found later on at the foot of Eleventh street. Burrows was very popular among the younger employees of the various Anacostia greenhouses and was held in high esteem by his employers.

F. W. Harvey.

It is with great regret that we learn of the sudden death, following an operation, of Mr. F. W. Harvey, the editor of our contemporary, The Garden. Mr. Harvey had been suffering from an abscess on the brain, for which he underwent an operation. He was removed to the London Temperance Hospital on the 23rd ult., but succumbed early in the morning of the 31st. Early in life Mr. Harvey engaged in the business of market gardening, and later studied horticulture at the County School of Horticulture, Chelmsford, under Mr. C. Wakely. He was afterwards a member of the garden staff at Kew, where he remained until 1905, leaving to take up the position of sub-editor of The Gardener, under Mr. W. P. Wright, who was at that time editor. Here he stayed for about three years, and left to take up a similar position on The Garden, under the late E. T. Cook. He made the best use of the experience thus gained, and when, about four years ago, Mr. Cook left for America, Mr. Harvey was able to take up the position of editor thus vacated. Under his editorship The Garden has more than maintained its standard, and his loss will be deeply felt by the staff, with whom he worked in amity and harmony. Although his duties were onerous, Mr. Harvey found time to interest himself in matters connected with horticulture. He was chairman of the Sweet Pea Society in 1914, a member of the Floral Committee of the R. H. S., and a member of the Council of the National Rose Society. Mr. Harvey leaves a widow and one son.

Portland, Me.—Members of the Portland Florists' Association enjoyed a delightful time with Alexander Skillin at his home, Falmouth Foreside, Wednesday afternoon and evening, Sept. 15. There were 36 florists who accepted the invitation and during the afternoon tennis, base ball and races were enjoyed. At 4 o'clock on the spacious lawn a delicious clam-bake was served. Sports were participated in afterwards until evening, when music and cards afforded entertainment inside. The affair was a very successful one and a vote of thanks was extended Mr. and Mrs. Skillin for their delightful entertainment and excellent supper.

The florists represented were Frank L. Minott, Dennett's, Portland Flower Shop, Talbot's, Conant of Westbrook, Goddard of Deering Centre, Sawyer, Clark, Nelson of South Portland and Peterson of Scarborough.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

Bulletin of Peony News, No. 1, together with the Proceedings of the American Peony Society for 1914 and 1915. This is a 36-page pamphlet of much interest and practical value to the peony grower and dealer. Contains some excellent cultural notes on the peony from widely known specialists.

Proceedings of the Wisconsin State Horticultural Society.—This is the Annual Report for 1915, by F. Cranefield, secretary. A well-bound volume of 106 pages with several full page plates. A very useful feature is a careful descriptive list of trees and shrubs recommended as hardy and desirable for planting in Wisconsin, together with a "black list" of shrubs which have been tested on the grounds of the Experiment Station at Madison and found unsatisfactory.

Our Little Carthaginian Cousin and Our Little Norman Cousin of Long Ago, are two books especially designed for boys and girls, just sent out by The Page Company, Boston. These books are uniform with those previously published in the Little Cousin Series all of which have had a wide popularity as interesting and authentic accounts of the children and their manners, customs and surroundings in other countries in the olden time. The first named is The Story of Hanno, a Boy of Carthage, by Clara Vostrovsky Winlow, the time being about 2,000 years ago. The second is a Story of Normandy in the time of William the Conqueror, by Evalein Stein. Both are splendidly illustrated by John Goss with six full page plates in tints and expressive frontispiece in colors. The low price at which these instructive and entertaining books are sold—60 cents a volume—should insure a very large sale.

Sander's List of Orchid Hybrids—by Sander & Sons, St. Albans, England. This new and up-to-date issue of this work so indispensable to the orchid enthusiast, will be welcomed in all parts of the world where orchids are cultivated. It contains a complete list of the names and parentages of all the known Hybrid Orchids, whether introduced or artificially raised. The lists are arranged in tabular form so that all hybrids, derived from each species or hybrid, may be ascertained at a glance. The premier position so long held by Messrs Sander in the orchid world is the best guarantee of the exactness and reliability of the contents of this work, which must have entailed much pains-taking labor and zealous research. It comprises 158 pages and blank leaves are inserted to enable those who wish to do so to add new records from time to time. The price of the volume is 21 shillings in England. Parties wanting copies can get them through the office of HORTICULTURE, or by application direct to Sander & Sons, St. Albans, England.

Manual on the Iris. By C. S. Harrison, York, Neb. Giving directions for their propagation and care, how to enlarge a wide field of profit and pleasure. Mr. Harrison is known far and wide for his devotion to the Iris, the Phlox and the Peony—indeed to any plant that will make itself at home and adorn the gardens in the semiarid regions. Mr. Harrison's attachment for these things finds vent in a command of beautiful sentiments, an almost poetic fervor and contagious enthusiasm. He believes in "something more than dollar chasing" and is in the business of nurseryman not alone for its emoluments but also because he loves the goods he handles and he has given freely of his time and ability to the missionary work of teaching others to love them. This iris book is very attractively illustrated with portraits of many of the finest varieties and an excellent picture of the author forms an appropriate frontispiece. The manual will fill a good and useful place.

The Holy Earth. By Dr. L. H. Bailey.—In this volume one of the foremost living authorities on rural life and agriculture presents his personal views, formed by many years of thought, study and contact, of man's relations to the soil, both physical and spiritual. In it he reveals rare poetic gifts of wisdom and expression. His style is captivating, his philosophy convincing, his enthusiasm infectious. The reader's mental vision is focussed upon himself as one of the teeming, tense and aspiring human race, as a factor in Nature's great plan and a participator in some far-reaching destiny. The Neighbor's Access to the Earth, The Sub-dividing of the Land, The Struggle for Existence, The Keeping of The Beautiful Earth, The Democratic Basis in Agriculture, A forest Background, The Open Fields, The Habit of Destruction—these are the titles of a few of the twenty-nine chapters which make up this literary gem. After reading it we realize more than ever before the responsibility which has been placed upon man to act rightly towards the earth and our obligations "to react and to partake, to keep, to cherish, and to co-operate" in every way possible to conserve the beauty and the utility of this Earth once pronounced "Good" by the Creator. "The Holy Earth" is published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. Price $1.00. HORTICULTURE can supply copies. If to be sent by mail add postage, 10c.

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

The Heating Problem Solved

Judging strictly according to mechanical merits it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel, and less attention than any other boilers on the market.

The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.

Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—

Smooth, perfect finished castings.
Push nipple connections.

Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals.

Deep ash pits, making the removal of ashes a slight task.

Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean.

Grates that are made for hard usage and long service.

And above all, they are Fuel Saving.
Not Fuel Wasting.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50% in coal.

PUT YOUR HEATING PROBLEMS UP TO US.

WE'VE BEEN AT IT FOR 44 YEARS.

Some Won'ts and Wills

A mule that won't kick and will work, has the two important things you and I would demand in a mule if we were buying one. For the same reasons; when you buy a boiler it's quite as important to know what it won't do as what it will do. Here are the Burnham Won'ts and Wills.

Burnham Won'ts

WON'T have any dead "spots" in the fire. The draft is even over entire grate surface.

Won't let the gases collect in the center or pass at once to back of combustion chamber, making some of the sections hotter than others. Each is equally hot.

Won't let the gases reach smoke pipe without three times traveling the length of the boiler.

Won't let any gases escape, unharnessed.

Won't vary in water line.

Won't prime.

Won't let operating rod bolts on grate burn off—can't—hasn't any bolts.

Won't let volumes of gases escape when cleaning flues—there's a door to each flue—how can it?

Won't poke along when you want a "quick as a wink fire."

Won't have to change grates when you want to change fuel.

Won't have to buy new long tie bolts when you add sections; when you add to your house. Tie bolts furnished with each section.

Burnhams are made in over 80 sizes and will economically heat ranges of glass up to 30,000 square feet.

Burnham Wills

WILL draw all gases up the side flues, making distribution of heat even, resulting in each section being equally efficient.

Will burn ten hours without attention, and keep satisfactory heat up.

Will hold a slumber fire twenty-four hours.

Will wake up; and heat up; in a surprisingly short time.

Will burn all kinds of coal with perfect success.

Will circulate the water rapidly, because it takes so much heat from the fire and quickly puts it into the water.

Will shake half again as easy as other boilers, because grates shake half at a time.

Will economically carry only half a fire because you can bank back half and run front half. Will smash clinkers that would wedge other grates. Burnham grates act like big nut crackers and break up the clinkers.

Will do exactly what we say it will do, if properly put in and rightly run. We guarantee it.

The one style fitting is used both to clamp the column to the purlin and to clamp the cross tie to the column. They are made to fit all the usual sizes of pipe.

Note how the faces of the fitting are slanted to give both an extra clamping grip, and make the edge dig into the pipe, giving a never-slip-grip.

Outside and Inside view. All bolt holes are square so they will hold without turning when being tightened up. The bolts are sheradized.

New Design Malleable Fittings For Pipe Frame Houses

WITH half the weight of iron, these new design Malleable Fittings of ours are twice as strong as the cast iron ones.

There is such a "give" to these fittings, that you can draw the bolts up to the very last turn without the danger of snapping the casting.

They are made with a slanting face so that when the bolts are drawn up, the fittings not only hold the pipe in a pinching grip, but the edges of the fitting bite into the pipe, giving a dig-in-grip.

Malleable split cross fitting taken apart.

Split cross fitting clamped to ridge column and cross ties.

Both of the two parts of the fitting are exactly alike. There is none of that bothersome chance of getting sides mixed.

Send for prices and any further facts you want.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Chrysanthemums

Keep everything clean. A little lime spread below the benches, especially in damp or cold houses, is of the greatest benefit at the time the flowers begin to open. This and plenty of ventilation prevents the petals from damping off. A moist atmosphere is not beneficial to the expanding flowers and to prevent this and yet supply sufficient moisture to keep the plants in good condition should be the object. Watering the benches should be attended to in the forenoon so as to give the foliage a chance to dry off properly before the close of the day. And always start the disbudding on top of the plant. If through carelessness or by accident you should break off the top of the plant there is a chance of getting a side shoot or bud to take the place of the one which was to be selected.

Christmas Cyclamen

In order to have well flowered plants for Christmas they should be well supplied with buds that can be readily seen by the 10th of October. Place all those wanted for the holidays on a light bench well up to the glass. Do not keep the atmosphere too moist as they will come along better with bud when the air is dryer. Give a night temperature of from 50 to 55 degrees with a rise of from 10 to 15 degrees with sunshine, but during dark weather about 5 degrees of a rise will be enough. Keep giving the pots more room from time to time so they will get the air and sun to each plant. Don't crowd them. Spray in the morning but not in the late afternoon as the foliage should be dry by night.

Carnations

No crop under glass is more impatient of neglect than this queen of flowers and any grower who fails to put his soul energy and skill into the subject had better be out of it. He must become an ardent and careful observer, noting every failure and trying to trace its cause. The act of searching for a cause will be the means of obtaining additional knowledge regarding the wants and character of each variety and also lead to a systematic study of the diseases to which they are liable and the most effectual method of combating such. A thorough knowledge of the theory of ventilation is also necessary to the carnation grower and the reduction to an exact science should be practiced as there is great danger to even the finest crops if indiscriminate ventilation is resorted to.

Christmas Lilies

The earliest Bermuda lilies should now be removed from the cold frame to a warm house. Some of them will have formed sufficient roots by this time. No actual forcing is necessary. If given an average temperature of 60 degrees they should be in plenty of time for Christmas. Water carefully so as not to sour the compost. Let them show signs of dryness first and then give enough water to soak the whole ball through. Frequent and slight waterings are dangerous. Syringe regularly. The grower can employ any degree from 55 to 75 degrees at night as he may see fit in order to get his lilies in at the right moment. Fumigating frequently, say about once a week, will keep the plants free of the pest. When the plants are from 15 to 20 inches high they ought to be staked and kept neatly but not tightly tied.

Planting Trees and Shrubs

At this season the nurseries are not overcrowded with orders and the stock will be freshly dug and not taken from storage sheds where it has been packed in sand for several months. The ground is usually more moist at this season than in spring and there is more time to do planting properly. Nearly all deciduous trees and shrubs can be just as well or better planted in fall than in spring. The roots, also, are far less likely to get dried up now than in spring. People are so much in the habit, however, of leaving all planting until spring that they rarely think of doing any now. Possible exceptions to the success of fall planting might be due to too dry a condition of the soil at planting time and the freezing up of the ground while the roots were inadequately supplied with moisture. Artificial watering would be necessary in such cases. Such shrubs as spiraeas, philadelphus, syringas, most of the viburnums, etc., do much better if planted in the fall.

Wasted Bench Space

Keep the greenhouse benches from end to end constantly in use. Wasted bench space is the direct cause of thousands of dollars loss annually in the florists' business. The grower who produces the largest amount in cut flowers and plants per annum in a given space is the best grower.

that the public exhibiting of flowers and other horticultural products has taken a tremendous jump far and away beyond former methods and scope as an institution. Indeed, modern promotion methods have practically remodelled and revolutionized the whole business of creating and managing a metropolitan horticultural exhibition. The splendid enthusiasm developed among the best people of the city of Cleveland, the harmony with which the commercial and amateur elements are working together and the able manner in which plans have been perfected command admiration and furnish a most hopeful augury for a successful outcome.

The American Dahlia Society made quite a spectacular start in New York last week, as recorded in our news columns. The Dahlia is as well entitled to a special society as most of the flowers so honored and evidently needs the attention of the nomenclature surgeon even more than some of them and we hope that this new "drive," so auspiciously launched in the interest of the popular garden flower may meet with a full measure of success. President Vincent's recommendation of a series of consecutive shows in different cities in the same year certainly has the merit of ambitious originality and while it surely would entail a lot of executive work to carry it out yet it is well worth considering. It should not take long under such high pressure tactics to place the Dahlia Society numerically at the head of all special floral organizations in this country. Good team work is the main requirement now and this seems to be well assured.

One of the New York daily newspapers, in commenting on the Dahlia Show at the Museum of National History last week, made a deprecatory criticism on the name which the flower bears and expressed regret that some more pleasing name could not have been given to it than that of Dahlia. To our mind there are plenty of plants that have to go through life with much homelier and less appropriate generic names than the Dahlia. The name was given in honor of Andrew Dahl, a Swedist botonist and pupil of Linnæus, we are told, but it may not be generally known that this genus was first known among continental botanists as Georgina, a name which possibly might better suit the taste of the New York critic. In fact, the flowers were shown as Georginas at some of the earlier exhibitions of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. We might mention here, also, that the Massachusetts Horticultural Society gave its first "Grand Dahlia Show" on September 23-26, 1840, on which occasion it is recorded that over 3,000 blooms were staged. So great was the interest manifested on that occasion that another prize show was given on October 10th of the same year, the premium list being financed from the entry receipts and it recorded that there were ten entries in each class.

Our Chicago representative writes that the section at Marshall Field's big department store, formerly devoted to fresh flowers, is now filled up entirely with artificial flowers and that all the accessories which are usually found in a florist shop may be obtained at this store as well as at several others of similar character. The question arises as to what extent, if any, and in what manner this will affect the florist trade. Some retail store florists will rejoice, no doubt, at any sign of the abandonment by the department stores of the fresh flower field. Growers of flowers for market, however, will not be so keen in their approval. The sale of artificial flowers and, more especially, of artificial foliage plants, un-

The extensive preparations being made for the big joint exhibition in Cleveland next month and the really stupendous operations in connection with the National Flower Show at Philadelphia next spring cannot fail to impress the observer with the fact

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

The Night Temperature

As the days and nights grow colder it will be necessary to lower the heat in the houses at night, until it is down to the regular night temperature. Up to recently the houses were better off with the thermometers up to 61 or 65 at night but now it will be better to drop it down to 62, especially for the varieties of roses that are to be grown a little cooler than the rest. Keep air on all night, even if this does mean a little more coal burned. The plants will be much better off for it and will make it up before the season is over. An inch of air is about the least that the houses should have until frost comes, and then it will be safe to put them down to a crack unless it freezes quite hard, and then only should the vents be closed altogether.

Keeping Even Temperature

If the house was never tested for evenness of temperature and the roses do not seem to grow evenly, apply this test at once. Place several thermometers at different points, first making sure that these will all register the same, and then see just how the house does run. It may be necessary to cover pipes here and there, or else uncover some on the extreme end, but it will pay to see that the whole house runs as nearly even as it is possible to get it. It is not the fault of the greenhouse as a rule but of the conditions surrounding it. These differ as much as one place does from another and therefore each grower has to study his own situation before applying any remedy. If the houses suffer from heavy winds on the north, a wind-break of some quick-growing evergreen trees will prove very effective and will help save a little coal in the winter, and at the same time make the first house on the north run more evenly. This windbreak should not be planted too close to the houses as it will make them run much hotter in the summer. Avoid much trees on the east and west, as these will throw shade and that is not wanted, for the sooner the sun hits the plants in the morning and the longer at night the better for them.

Tying

Keep right after this and try to get over the plants weekly and tie them up. It is better to do this oftener as it will not take very long, but if the work is let go for a while it will be quite a proposition to tie the plants properly, especially if they are growing real good. Avoid tying the shoots too tight to the stake. There is no benefit in it and the chances are they will lose a good many leaves if they are bunched too much. In tying Beauties make sure that the shoots are on the same side of the wires on the bottom as well as on top. Should they be tied on one side on the bottom and on the other side on top trouble will be experienced should it be necessary to bend down the tall breaks later. Take care to distribute the wood well, so that the plants get as much light and sun as possible. Needless to say, when tying to the wires the string should always be wrapped around the wire once before tying the knot, otherwise the shoots will slide from place to place when syringing, and will likely come to harm.

Picking Dead Leaves

There should not be very many of these as yet, but here and there there will be some. As soon as they are knocked off they should be picked up as time will permit. It is best to keep the benches clean until the season is half over at least, although the plants will do better if they receive good care right up to replanting time. This applies to plants that will be run another year especially as they will do much better the second year if they are properly cared for all through the first season. It will not take very long to pick up all these dead leaves, also watching for spot, and picking off any diseased leaves that may be found.

The Sod Heaps

Although there are a good many places where the sod heaps are not put up until spring it is much better to have them up in the fall. The spring generally brings a great deal of work and then too the sod is generally soaked and much heavier to handle. Just now, the sod is fairly dry and easily handled and if it lays over the winter composted with good manure it will be in fine condition for using next spring. Do not allow the men to use shovels to load the sod. It is better for the roses and better for the field to plow it up and then pick up what can be taken with the fork. The sod should not be plowed deeply, three or four inches being plenty. If done deeper it will take years to establish another turf over the field, and this takes time and costs money. It is best to use about half sod and half manure, as the latter will decay rapidly and by spring will be just about right. Avoid piling the sod in layers too thick. It is best to use about six inches of each, with about a foot of sod for the bottom layer. This method will insure the leachings from the manure going through all the sod and it will be far better for the roses than if the sod is piled in layers a foot and a half to two feet thick. If this is done only some of the sod will have a chance to absorb liquids, and the result will be that the soil resulting will be very uneven in fertility, which will cause trouble with the plants later.

questionably cuts into the fresh flower and plant business. But there is no industry known which has not competition of some sort to struggle against. Every one will not agree with us, we know, but it is our belief that the undertaker, for instance, is fully as heavy a handicap on the flower business as the artificial material dealer can possibly be. We have always felt that it was very unfortunate for the future welfare of the flower trade in its younger days that so many of the florists established themselves adjacent to a cemetery gate and adopted as their almost universal style of sign-board "Wreaths, Crosses, Anchors, Bouquets."

AMERICAN DAHLIA SOCIETY

The first annual meeting of this young society was held according to schedule in the Museum of Natural History, New York City, on September 24 at 8 P. M. There was a good attendance. President R. Vincent, Jr., made a few introductory remarks explaining the purpose of the organization and read a paper on pertinent matters concerning its future activities. In referring to the several cities which had extended invitations for the Society to hold its exhibition with them next year, he advanced the proposition that the show be held in Rochester next year, another show in Philadelphia the following week and a third in New York the week after that. He believed that this would give great publicity to the Dahlia and would not be impossible of accomplishment.

Secretary Joseph J. Lane presented an informal report, showing a rapid growth in membership which, later on, he supplemented by the announcement that the list had now passed the two hundred mark. He reported good results from the sending out of double postal cards soliciting new members and said that 75 per cent. of the members consisted of amateurs.

Treasurer F. R. Austin also reported informally, showing a healthy balance in his hands. Quite a discussion followed on the question of issuing a regular bulletin and it was announced that No. 1 of Vol. 1 would be sent out this week, the edition to consist of 5000 copies, of which President Vincent and Mr. Stillman agreed to distribute one thousand each.

Election of officers resulted as follows:

President, R. Vincent, Jr.; secretary, J. J. Lane, of the Garden Magazine; treasurer, F. R. Austin; vice-presidents, W. W. Wilmore, Prof. Norton, Geo. L. Stillman, E. S. Brown; executive committee, Geo. W. Kerr, Jos. Duthie, I. S. Hendrickson, P. W. Popp, J. Harrison Dick.

Prof. F. H. Hall reported for the nomenclature committee that he had made an examination of dahlia catalogues and had listed in alphabetical order over 4500 names, all grown in America with few exceptions. Some were listed under four or five names and the situation appeared to be a bad one. On his suggestion a classification committee was elected as follows:

R. VINCENT, JR.

President American Dahlia Society.

Prof. F. H. Hall, George Fraser, James Kirby, L. K. Peacock, Leonard Barron. The selection of location for the exhibition of 1916 was by vote left to the executive committee. There will be a meeting of the executive committee in New York at the time of the Chrysanthemum Show. A telegram of congratulation and good wishes was received from Mrs. Francis King.

Secretary Lane expects to cover the entire list of dahlia growers, amateur and commercial, in the distribution of the bulletin. The time limit for the admission of charter members has been extended to October 15.

THE EXHIBITION.

The exhibition at the Museum of Natural History was a genuine surprise in its extent and the public attendance, as well as the quality and interest of the exhibits which had suffered a severe handicap in the weather of the week preceding the show. The big foyer of the Museum building was devoted to the special exhibits by retail florists, of large vases, baskets, plaques, etc., and presented a brilliant picture, the various possible uses of the dahlia in decorative work being well demonstrated. W. A. Manda was one of the largest exhibitors, filling practically the entire space of one of the long corridors. President Vincent, of course, was a very large exhibitor as was also Geo. H. Stillman. W. Atlee Burpee's big display arranged for effect was one of the features of the exhibition.

Seedlings that attracted attention were Mrs. H. R. Allen, a deep pink, closely resembling Antoine Rivoire, and Gold Fish, an orange and salmon decorative, by H. R. Allen, and Sunshine by C. H. Stout, a beautiful cream and salmon combination. W. A. Finger's collection was also very fine.

The judges were J. C. Clark of Dreer's, Phila.; Leonard Barron, Editor Garden Magazine; Prof. F. H. Hall, Geneva; G. W. Kerr, of Burpee's, Phila.; J. Harrison Dick, New York; Prof. J. B. Norton, Md. State Agricultural College; James Duthie, Oyster Bay; Prof. Geo. Fraser, Connecticut Agricultural College.

The attendance was 8,000 each day, Friday and Saturday, and 13,000 on Sunday.

DAHLIA SHOW AT SAN FRANCISCO.

One of the most successful flower shows ever arranged here was the Dahlia Show held September 18 and 19 under the auspices of the California State Floral Society and the Alameda County Floral Society in conjunction with the Department of Horticulture of the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Exposition visitors swarmed the building during the show, and much interest was shown in the awarding of the prizes, all of which, whether medals or cash, were given by the P. I. E. About 25 awards were made in the class open to growers. CLEVELAND FLOWER SHOW

The final premium list of the Cleveland Flower Show to be held at the Coliseum, Cleveland, Ohio, November 10 to 14, 1905, Wednesday to Sunday, inclusive, has been completed. This list includes the special prizes for the annual exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, for the fall exhibition of the American Rose Society, and for a special exhibition of carnations, all to be held under the joint direction and supervision of the Ohio Horticultural Society, Cleveland Florists' Club and Garden Club of Cleveland.

In connection with this great event will be held the annual exhibition and convention of the Chrysanthemum Society of America; fall exhibition and meeting of the American Rose Society; meeting of executive committee of the American Carnation Society; adjourned meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association; adjourned meeting of the Gladiolus Society of Ohio.

The Chrysanthemum Society list of special prizes comprises 80 classes, the premiums offered being very liberal and including cups, medals and cash contributed by Hitchings & Co., H. A. Dreer, E. G. Hill Co., Wells and Totty, H. E. Converse, Lord & Burnham Co., Wm. Kleinheinz, Julius Roehrs Co., National Association of Gardeners, Alpine Mfg. Co., A. N. Pierson, Inc., Elmer D. Smith & Co., Michell's Seed House, John C. Moninger Co., Vaughan's Seed Store and a long list of Cleveland patrons of horticulture, also the Society of American Florists' medals for meritorious seedlings. Chrysanthemum prizes will be awarded on Wednesday, November 10.

The rose section, under the auspices of the American Rose Society, includes the premiums as listed from No. 81 to 117A, in which are represented as donors, Benj. Hammond; A. N. Pierson, Inc., Robt. Scott & Son, Lamborn Floral Co., Cleveland Cut Flower Co., W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Storrs & Harrison Co., and a large number of Cleveland firms and individuals, with munificent contributions. The rose awards will be made on Thursday, November 11.

The carnation section comprises classes 118 to 154A and these will be judged on Friday, November 12. The premiums are offered by such gentlemen of national prominence as Jos. H. Hill, president of the American Carnation Society, John D. Rockefeller, etc., and there is a tempting list of certificates of merit to be striven for, under the section of seedlings and sports.

In the general classes, stove and greenhouse plants, violets, cyclamen, antirrhinum, lilies, begonias, orchids, ferns, etc., are well provided for with liberal special premiums, up to a $100 silver cup for group of orchids. These classes are to be staged Wednesday.

An item of much local interest is the Corrigan Cup, valued at $500, to be competed for by private growers of Ohio only. This is class 263, 36 chrysanthemum blooms, 6 varieties, 6 blooms each, to be staged in two vases. Exhibitors may furnish their own vases.

Any accessories and greens allowed. Arrangement to be considered. This cup is to become the temporary property of the winner for one year, to be returned to the Cleveland Flower Show Committee one month before the date of their next show. Before the cup becomes the permanent property of any private grower, he must win it three times at the Cleveland Flower Show.

One of the important and interesting features will be the non-competitive exhibit of table decorations, bride and bridesmaid bouquets, corsages and basket arrangements by the leading retail florists of Cleveland and a number from New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Rochester, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and other leading cities.

Announcement for 100 Special Prizes.

The star (*) that precedes nearly 100 classes in the premium list signifies that in the classes so marked, $5.00 in gold will be given to the section man or actual grower of the stock taking first prize in that class.

In the non-commercial classes, a medal will be given instead of a cash prize. After the awards are made the exhibitors winning classes with stars (*) attached should register their growers' name or names with the exhibition committee as soon as possible to assist in the prompt distribution of these special prizes.

Prizes of this nature have never been offered in connection with any previous flower show to the knowledge of the committee.

The list of judges is as follows:

Chrysanthemums, J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.; Michael Bloy, Detroit, Mich.

Roses, Emil Buettner, Park Ridge, Ill.; John H. Dunlop, Toronto, Can.

Carnations, Eugene Dailedouze, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Wm. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass.

Bowling.

The following letter has been sent by C. J. Graham, chairman of the bowling tournament to the secretaries of all the Florists' Clubs in the country.

Dear Sir: During the week of our big Cleveland Flower Show we intend to hold a "Florists' National Bowling Tournament." As the S. A. F. Tournament this year was not well attended by the florists from the eastern and central states, we believe our Tournament will be more than welcomed by the bowlers of the trade.

We extend a cordial invitation to you to enter one five-man team, as well as singles, in this Tournament. Members of teams are not eligible to bowl in singles.

Local prizes will be offered. Prize list will be mailed within a few days. The high man on each team and the five men in the singles are to bowl off for a special trophy, the nature of which will be announced later.

Please bring this before your members as soon as possible and let us hear from you on the subject. Also please call your members' attention to the number of national meetings to be held here.

Kennicott as chairman of the press committee is at work with his assistants preparing material for an elaborate publicity campaign in the local newspapers. Guy W. NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW NEWS.

Special Prize lists have been offered by Henry A. Dreer and Henry F. Michell Company for the National Flower Show. This is in addition to the regular prizes offered and there will no doubt be several other additional lists in the near future. W. Atlee Burpee & Co., expect to offer a list on sweet peas, but this is not yet made up.

There was a meeting of the Press and Publicity Committee in Mr. Therkildson's office last Thursday afternoon, the 23rd, and the plan for publicity was agreed upon. This committee is made up of a representative from each of the Philadelphia papers. By this means they expect to get some extraordinary publicity.

Poster stamps were agreed upon to be furnished to the several local firms for use in their correspondence prior to the Flower Show, as well as the design for the premium list cover. It was also decided that a design should be worked up for window cards, posters and programs, this design to be the same so as to get the cumulative value of keeping one design continually before the public.

The special prize list by H. A. Dreer, above referred to comprises 23 classes and amounting to about $250. It provides for hardy perennials, H. T. roses, amaryllis, ferns, hyacinths, tulips, narcissi, cornflower, lupines, nemesis, schizanthus, stocks and pansies. These are open to private growers only. Michell's list is also open only to private gardeners. It comprises no less than 46 gold, silver and bronze medals and cups, for various flowering plants, bulbs, sweet peas and other cut flowers, miniature lawns and gardens, etc., also cash prizes amounting to nearly $400

ADIANTUM CROWEANUM, grand 4 in. pot stock, $15.00 per 100.
ASPARAGUS PLUMOSUS, bushy, 2½ in., $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.

"BRINGING UP FATHER."

"The Commodore," (Mr. John Westcott of Philadelphia), is seventy-four, your scribe fifty-four years of age, so the thing looked easy three months ago, and was cheerfully tackled. But as the days roll by, this job of bringing up father begins to take on a different aspect.

To our mild admonitions the kid is pert. When we become a little stern, it becomes even impudent. When we really put our foot down, it offers to take its coat off and lick us.

For instance: Today we had made up our mind to take in the Dreer Dahlia Show at Riverton. So we invited the child to Dooner's for lunch at noon, thinking that we could educate him a little in what was going on in the world. Instead of being modest as every young gentleman should be on the bill of fare, he ordered right and left and tucked his napkin under his chin with a wolfish grin and the most utter abandon. You can imagine how a thrifty person like ourselves would feel under such circumstances. But we could not say anything, on account of the waiter.

Well, we finally got to the ferry and there met ambassadors from the Dreer establishment—James Karins and John Ruppert. We greeted them with dignity and all would have been well but the kid had to run off on some side issue—some friend at the ticket office who had handed him candy about twenty years ago. Nearly lost train.

The youngster behaved pretty well until we got to Riverview. We got to the exhibition hall and threaded our way through—then out and in again, among immense crowds—and of course he had to get lost.

We finally came up to him hobnobbing with Patrick O'Mara, young Peter Henderson and Jacob Eisele. We thought we were all right then, but as there were some myriads of automobiles and other conveyances coming and going, he got lost again, and it was only through the generalship of J. Otto Thilow and Emil Michel, (the latter the big chief of the show) that we finally caught up with the stray sheep and started in an automobile for Riverton.

After a visit to Mr. Ruppert's home at Riverton, all seemed well. But, across the street were the Dreer nurseries again, and we had to take a look through. The first thing here—well, that kid had to go crazy over James Davidson whom he seems to have known in a previous incarnation in Brooklyn N. Y. We had to drag sonny away by main force.

Then, having only twenty minutes left, we started for the new operations—three buildings for perennials, a new bulb warehouse, a new garage, and several other new things. But on the way who should pop up but James Taplin. Whew! such a gladness! such a handshaking and the minutes flying. However we finally caught the train and got back to Philadelphia safe and sound for which we are truly thankful.

One of the worst features of this case of bringing up father is that the kid insists on having the last word, will never admit he is wrong, and absolutely refuses to apologize.

We have a sheaf of notes about the best dahlias at this Dreer show, but that will have to wait. Sorry!

Gentlemen: It may interest you to know that I never really appreciated the value of Horticulture until last week's number failed to show up. Believe me I made quite a few extra trips to the P. O. without results. I was just in the act of mailing you a letter when I received your notice that another dollar is due, or, to be right, past due, which I did not know. Enclosed please find a dollar and please see that I get last week's issue.

Wishing you unlimited success I remain

Practical Sympathy.

The Royal Horticultural Society Council has decided to send to Serbia seeds to the value of £500 (pounds) which have been supplied by Hurst & Son, of London. The consignment has been shipped to the Co-operative Union in Serbia for distribution. It is largely owing to the secretary of the society (Rev. W. Wilks), to Mr. Arthur Sutton and other members of the subcommittee appointed to deal with the immediate needs of Serbia that the task of discovering exactly what these needs were and of contributing toward their satisfaction has been discharged so promptly.

Extension at Kew.

A new laboratory of plant pathology has been opened at the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, and will form a valuable addition to that institution. Mr. A. D. Cotton, assistant in the herbarium, has been promoted to a first-class assistantship in the new laboratory, and W. B. Brierley, of Manchester University, has been appointed a first-class assistant.

The War and the Nursery Trade.

With a view to inducing the public to act upon the motto of "business as usual" as regards their gardens, the secretary to the Royal Horticultural Society has addressed another letter to the press, following one published on the same subject a few months ago. It is pointed out that the nursery and seed trade is very seriously depressed. The entire cessation of gardening will not only cause financial loss, but an irretrievable sacrifice of many years' labor spent in introducing new and improved varieties of fruits, vegetables and flowers. "They (the trade), rightly feel," the letter states, "that as they have catered for our highest happiness in times past, it is hardly right that they should now be brought to a position in which they can no longer even retain their employees' services. Most of their younger men have enlisted, and they ask not for the usual trade, but for just sufficient support to keep them going, and to meet current expenses, which cannot be suspended. The president and council feel that in drawing the attention of fellows to this trade aspect of the question they are but again advising that medium policy which in the long run is always the wisest, and fellows are urged not to forget this when framing their economies."

Dahlia Novelties.

A batch of dahlias has lately received awards of merit from the Floral Committee of the Royal Horticultural Society, acting conjointly with the National Dahlia Society. Stredwick & Sons, have added Herald, a variable collarette, deep pink with white collar. Miss Judd, cactus, lemon yellow, and Washington, cactus, with incurved florets of deep crimson. The name of Warneford, has been given to a pure white decorative flower, exhibited by J. West. Cheal & Sons, obtained awards for Primrose Queen, light yellow petals, and straw tinted collar, and for Yellow Star. Other varieties gaining awards were Caprice, from A. Turner—a decorative single, with white petals, tinted with maroon, and Scarlet Queen, from Dobbie & Co., a brilliant collarette.

MASS. AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE NOTES.

The Florists' and Gardeners' Club of M. A. C. held its first meeting of the year last Thursday. At that time the following officers were elected: C. E. Wildon, Melrose, president; H. H. Walkden, Westford, vice-president; Miss E. H. Chase, Holden, secretary-treasurer. The members of the program committee are H. H. Walkden, Westford; E. J. Cardarelli, Boston; W. P. Lyford, Natick.

A. S. Thurston has been spending a few days in the Arnold Arboretum during the past week in checking up a key to vines for Prof. R. W. Curtis of the Landscape Art Dept. at Cornell.

A perennial collection of 300 varieties and species has been begun at the college and will be added to extensively in the future. This perennial collection is a new feature inaugurated by Prof. A. H. Nehrling and bids fair to become one of the most attractive features in the Floriculture Dept. It will give an excellent opportunity for the study of perennials to which so much attention is being directed of late. Each species and variety is labeled with an aluminum label. The lettering was done by means of acid. Much of this lettering was done by W. H. Hatfield, '15, Brookline.

Merchantville, N. J.—J. A. Smith served as judge at the Annual Fall Show of the Merchantville Horticultural Society, on Friday, October 1, 1915. The Henry F. Michell Co. had a very fine exhibit of perennials from their nurseries, at Andalusia, Pa.

Shipments of Belgian Goods.

Horticulture Publishing Co.

I am in receipt of the following from The Merchants' Association of New York:

"I have to inform you that the Department has received from the American Ambassador at London the following telegram, supplementing that dated September 8:

"I have today received the following note from Sir Edward Grey, dated September 16:

"With reference to my note of the 7th ultimo, regarding the conditions on which His Majesty's Government are prepared to issue permits for the exports of goods of Belgian origin to neutral countries, I have the honor to inform Your Excellency that an agreement has now been reached with the Belgian Government by which the deposit of documents covering the sale and shipment of such goods with a bank in the United Kingdom will be accepted in lieu of the deposit of the purchase money itself, in cases where the latter condition is not practicable."

I am also in receipt of the following: "The Department of State has sent word to the Merchants' Association that formal notification has come to the Department from the British government to the effect that applications for the release of goods of German or Austrian origin, contracted for by the American importer prior to March 1st, last, would henceforth be received at the British Embassy at Washington when filed by the Foreign Trade Advisers of the Department of State. That Department is now, therefore, filing applications with the British Embassy for the release of such shipments. The assumption of liability to pay for the goods before March 1st by the American importer is now the basis on which such permits are issued by the British government. Hereafter, all applications for the release of these goods are to be filed at the British Embassy in Washington and not in London.

"Applications should be addressed to Hon. W. B. Fleming, Foreign Trade Adviser, Department of State, Washington, D. C., who will transmit them to the British Embassy."

CHAS. A. DARDS.

The HORTICULTURE Publishing Co.

With regard to Fall shipments of Azaleas and other plants from Belgium, we have been in constant cable communication with our connections in Belgium, Holland and London, but the arrangements have been made and upset so often that we feared to make any definite statement. Now we can say definitely that Fall shipments will come. We review briefly the changes as follows:

1. From June to August the shipments were included with the British "Order in Council" goods and shipments were embargoed by the British authorities and could not leave.

2. During August, all arrangements were made with the British authorities, the embargo was lifted, permits were given to individual Belgium shippers on the understanding that payments for the shipments be made in England before the shipments left Belgium.

3. Early in September—when shipments were ready to leave, the German authorities—learning that proceeds would not go directly into Belgium—prevented shipments from leaving Belgium.

4. Now arrangements have been made with both the German and British authorities and shipments are now leaving Belgium.

The above refers exclusively to our own shipments—we cannot speak for all Belgium shippers, or all American consignees. Within a few days we expect to be able to advise you what Belgium shipments have already left Rotterdam. Yours truly, McHUTCHISON & Co.

Value of imports of horticultural merchandise at the Port of New York for week ending September 18 is given as follows: Clover seed, $43; grass seed, $326; palm seed, $300; trees, plants and bulbs, $163,740.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

The Bay State Nurseries of North Abington, Mass., have just sent out a little folder, "Why You Should Plant in the Fall," being a reprint of an article by A. E. Wilkinson, of Cornell University, which appeared in the Garden Magazine. It is a very convincing little document on lines on which it would pay every nurseryman to push.

Sixty-Second Annual Report of the Secretary of the Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture for 1914.—A splendid volume of 700 pages, containing reports of meetings, lectures and essays of much practical value, agricultural legislation, and reports of State officials, including Nursery Inspector, Ornithologist, Dairy Bureau, Apiary Inspector, Boys' and Girls' Club Work, State Forester and Incorporated Agricultural Societies, all finely illustrated with insert plates. Secretary Wheeler has in this volume given the people of the State the best agricultural report ever presented in Massachusetts.

PERTINENT ADVICE ON THE ASTER QUESTION.

There is no one connected with the flower business who sees the question from all sides as does the wholesale commission man. To get the best flowers to sell to the trade and to get the best prices for those flowers he must know a lot on the subject. A recent discussion of the aster question took place in one of Chicago's largest wholesale commission houses and a man long in the business of turning flowers into money said that a few things only were needed to turn the growing of asters from a poor proposition to a paying one. When asked what they were, he said that, first of all, the grower must get away from the idea of quantity to that of quality, because people buy garden flowers from a florist only when they can get better ones than they can grow themselves. Next, loose types of asters produce, in proportion, more imperfect flowers and the grower should study to have his proportion of imperfect flowers reduced to a minimum. Then there are too many dark asters for the demand and more light tints should take their places. Center buds should be picked out as soon as they form and not more than six blooms should be allowed on any aster plant. Imperfect flowers should not be sent into the market but should be destroyed, as they bring down the price by competing with good stock. Aster foliage should be stripped from six to eight inches of the stems. Asters should be bunched with heads put even so customers can readily see the quality of the flowers. He ended by remarking that it is easier to sell good asters at a good price than to sell poor ones at any price.

Bloomfield, N. J.—J. J. Brozat, who has a commodious flower store with semi-conservatory glass front at 554 Bloomfield avenue, has seen seriously ill for several weeks, but is now on the road to recovery and expects to be soon out again.

The name of the Providence Horticultural Company got incorrectly into our column of New Flower Stores last week. The business of this company, of which Edward Mora Pope is proprietor is that of landscape gardening, forestry, agricultural blasting and similar work, and the addresses at 107 Westminster street, Providence, R. I., is their office and not a flower store.

Of Interest to Retail FloristsROUGH USAGE OF FUNERAL TRIBUTES.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

May I trespass inside of your valuable paper to offer a protest as to the handling of funeral flowers by undertakers and I regret to say by some florists, when they are taken from house or church after the funeral services. The usual practice is to throw them promiscuously into a vehicle, helter-skelter as quickly as possible and so that they will occupy as small a space as possible. The feeling seems to be that the show is over, the florist has done his work and the undertaker is in a hurry to complete his. Does the florist ever stop to consider the feelings of the mourners who have sent those flowers, some of whom frequently see the way their offerings are treated, or do they ever take a moment to consider the effect it is likely to have upon people who have sent or would send floral tributes to the departed when they see costly flowers treated like so much rubbish, the moment they have served their purpose? Is it good business to show so little regard for the flowers from which we florists get our living? Do they think that a customer who has given perhaps fifty dollars for a design and sees it treated with such carelessness will be likely to repeat an experience of this kind, or is he not more likely to say to himself, —I will send a letter of sympathy or just a few loose flowers, if that is the way my tribute is treated.

In these days when flowers are produced in great quantity and are placed before the public in a large measure by vendors who are neither florists by profession or by instinct, it is more than ever necessary for the florists who have stores with all the attendant heavy expenses, to be particularly watchful to keep up the veneration sentiment and love of flowers by the wealthy classes upon whom they have to rely for their support.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

CHICAGO.

George Perdikas underwent an operation for appendicitis at the German Hospital this week.

Bassett & Washburn take possession this week of their new home in the new La Moyne Bldg., at the corner of Wabash avenue and Lake street.

The Red Bud Flower and Sweet Shop is the name of a flower and candy shop to be opened October 2, at 155 N. State street. The proprietor is C. Lampas formerly with Geo. Perdikas.

The openings of some of the big State street stores are taking place this week and some orders for flowers were the result. One order for one thousand chrysanthemums helped clear the market on Monday.

Mrs. Frank Oechslein is at St. Joseph's Hospital where an operation was performed on the jaw bone, September 23. She is doing as well as could be expected following such a painful operation.

Ernest Farley cannot overcome his love of Chicago and is back again looking for a position here. Theodore Vogel has also returned and has his old place with Wm. J. Smythe at Michigan avenue and 31st street.

The many wholesale florists in the Atlas Block are house-cleaning this week and the building is being overhauled by the owners also. The result is spotless wood work and a general "ready for inspection" air prevails.

Robt. Huehnchen was run down by an automobile and severely bruised and cut about the head and body, on September 25. Mr. Huehnchen is father of Mrs. Meyers the Humboldt Park Florist and assists in buying for the store.

The first cuts of the George Elgar rose are being received by F. F. Bentley who handles the stock of F. J. Bentley of Newcastle, Ind., at Kennicott Bros. It is a very attractive little yellow rose, about the size of Cecil Brunner.

The Chicago Florists' Club will hold an amalgamation banquet, Oct. 7 at 8 P. M. This is the final ceremony in the welding together of the two clubs and the trade in general is glad that a spirit of good fellowship now exists and that one united club takes the place of two. The banquet is free to members and $2.00 per plate to others.

Harry H. Conn who has been connected with the flower business here for several years, has bought the C. V. Abele greenhouses at 61st and Throop street. Mr. Abele will go to Europe to try and locate his two brothers, whom he has not heard from since the outbreak of the war. The new name of the store will be the Englewood Florist.

Phil Schupp says he made no mistake in growing double white Killarney roses and discarding the single ones. He has some magnificent stock to back up his opinion and with not a trace of color. The foliage is very heavy and rich in color. Mr. Schupp who is manager for J. A. Budlong, who is an extensive grower of lily of the valley, says he has had no advice yet concerning the lily of the valley shipments due to arrive here in November.

The Coliseum, so well known over the country as the home of the Chicago Flower Shows and which is booked again for this fall, had a narrow escape from destruction early Sunday morning. Buildings directly north were destroyed in a fire which cost half a million dollars and Grace church built in 1868 and for so many years adjoining the Coliseum came near carrying that building down with it. The north wall is injured but not seriously. Only the fact that the wind was to the north saved the building that means so much to Chicago florists.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club is scheduled to be held Tuesday evening, October 5. A special entertainment will be provided following the close of the business meeting.

Miss Nellie Brueninger, of Gude Bros. Co., has returned from a two weeks' vacation at Atlantic City. Mrs. Supper, also with that concern, is again on duty after an absence from the store.

A number of the local florists entered in the window display contest held under the auspices of the Retail Merchants' Association during the encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, but none were so fortunate as to secure a prize.

Harry Kennelly, one of the chauffeurs for Gude Bros. Co. was badly injured recently when the automobile which he was driving was struck by a trolley car, necessitating his removal to the Emergency Hospital. It was found that his shoulder was dislocated and he will be confined to his home for some time.

The Takoma Park Horticultural Association was last week organized for the purpose of beautifying generally that section of the city. It will have the close co-operation of the Citizens' Association and will number among its members many of the officials of the Department of Agriculture who live in that suburb. The association will begin immediately upon a program to stimulate interest in horticulture and plans will be made for a flower show next week. Homer Skeels, a landscape gardener, and Ben Y. Morrison were appointed members of the committee which will have the latter event in charge.

S. S. Pennock, Admiral Aaron Ward, and Robert Pyle, last week came to Washington to make an inspection of the rose garden at Arlington. While in Washington they were the guests of William F. Gude, who accompanied them on their trip. An appeal will shortly be made to rose growers to furnish the necessary plants to complete this place. An automobile trip was taken through Arlington cemetery, the grounds of the Department of Agriculture, and the private rose garden of Mrs. Charles J. Bell, where they were the personal guests of Mrs. Bell who conducted them through the famous rose arbor.

PHILADELPHIA.

Jno. H. Dodds is reported out again after a two weeks' illness which threatened typhoid in its early stages.

Mrs. Edwin Lonsdale writes—Sept. 16—from Lompoc, Cal., thanking the Florists' Club for their telegram and tokens of sympathy.

Rear Admiral Aaron Ward, a noted amateur rosarian of New York, and Robert Pyle, of West Grove, Pa., were the guests of Pres. S. S. Pennock on September 23rd. An auto visit among the rose growers was a feature.

The Henry F. Michell Co. had a very excellent display of perennials on Friday, September 24, 1915, at the Annual Fall Show of the Ridley Park Civic Association at Ridley Park, Pa. Frank B. Michell was in charge of the exhibit.

Mr. Woodward of the Philadelphia force of the Lord & Burnham Co., left on a two weeks' business trip south. On his return he expects to go down New England way on his vacation. He is a yankee and loves his native stamping ground. There are many worse places.

Among the roses to be seen the past week or two, Prince d' Arenberg and Hoosier Beauty are receiving a welcome reception from the up-to-date buyers, always on the look-out for something finer and newer. As a cut flower they rank in size and form with Hadley—which is proving such a favorite in the crimson section.

The Henry A. Dreer Co. have doubled their office capacity on the second floor, 714-716 Chestnut street. All departments now have much needed room for rapidly increasing business. The latest devices for labor saving, filing, etc., are all there. Smiles are on the department chiefs now, as they enjoy their extra elbow room.

Arthur H. Lanser and Frank Alter have purchased the Krueger interest of the Reading Terminal Flower stand and will conduct same under the name of the Charles F. Krueger Co. Mr. Lanser is well known locally, having conducted a growing and retailing business at Wayne for years. Mr. Alter was the late Mr. Krueger's assistant.

The "Old Guards' Reunion" has been postponed to Oct. 8th (instead of Oct. 1st) to suit the convenience of such national characters and busy men as Wm. F. Gude of Washington, Dennis T. Connor and Daniel C. Donoghue of Philadelphia. Men who stand with President Woodrow Wilson on the platform receiving guests—and things like that—have to be given some consideration.

Edward Towill had on exhibition at Pennock-Meehan's on Sept 29th, three of his new seedling roses. The white one with the dark center appealed to us. Magnificent stem and beautiful foliage. Robert Craig thought the yellow one the best. The pink one is fine also. Mr. Towill says all three are great producers and on that account alone some of our present standbys will have to "sit up and take notice."

their Philadelphia headquarters at 1526 Ransstead street on September 21st. Carl Corts, the manager, reports very good business for their first week of the new season. All the Heacock products, cut roses and other flowers, palms, ferns and foliage plants, are up to the usual high quality which has made them justly famous. This is what, combined with courteous and efficient service, keeps their old friends firmly with them—and is constantly making new.

The auto truck value was well illustrated last week when a load of sixty-four hundred pounds left Dreer's at Riverton, N. J., at 3 A. M., for New York City, arriving there at 3 P. M. and getting back to Riverton by 2 A. M. next morning. Time and labor at both ends, packing and unpacking, cartage, freight and other incidentals all saved and the goods got there in better shape. But the railroads will not welcome that sort of thing. There are more loads to go yet, if one may judge from the "set-aside" blocks at the Riverton Nurseries.

NEW YORK.

Myer Othile, formerly of Badgley, Riedel & Myer is about to start in the wholesale florist business for himself.

Thomas F. Galvin's flower window on Fifth avenue was devoted exclusively to dahlias and notices of the dahlia show for two days last week. It was a compliment fully appreciated by the dahlia show people.

The general committee of the New York Spring Flower Show met at the office of Secretary John Young on Monday afternoon, September 27 and practically completed the work on the schedule, which Mr. Young will now push along for early distribution.

M. A. Vinson, publicity manager for the Cleveland Flower Show has been in New York in the interest of that enterprise, especially to arrange details for shipping the gigantic bush chrysanthemum plants grown by John Canning of Ardsley. If this exhibit can be safely transported to Cleveland it will prove a strong attraction. Mr

PRIZE WINNING FLOAT.

Floral Float by Ross Bros., Worcester, Mass.

The auto float shown in the accompanying picture was fully described in a description of the "battle of flowers" at Worcester, Mass., which we published in our issue of September 18.

Canning's plants shown at the exhibition here last fall were fifteen or sixteen feet in diameter and railroad transportation of such is quite a problem.

John Young is one of the busiest men we know of. What with the secretaryship of the Society of American Florists and the New York Florists' Club, the work connected with the National Flower Show at Philadelphia and the New York Flower Show for next spring and the Dahlia Show just closed and a multitude of committee meetings, there is no idle moment in Mr. Young's day—yet he never fails to find a few leisure minutes to devote to members who call on him. John H. Pepper is temporarily assisting him at present in the clerical work.

There are dahlias and dahlias. Possibly they may be equally attractive at the time they are cut from the plants—after that it's all in the packing. Dahlia growers who are disappointed over the prices obtained for their flowers in the wholesale market should take a trip to the city and see how their competitors pack their flowers and it will soon dawn upon them why it is that some growers get $2.00 or $3.00 per 100 while others don't realize that much per 1000. We saw some of L. K. Peacock's shipments at Langjahr's. They were packed like eggs and—well, such goods almost sell themselves.

It was entered by W. D. Ross and won first prize among sixteen competitors, amounting to $170, in addition to which it won a pair of Sterling tires valued at $100 and a silver cup from the Cadillac people.

Much favoring comment is heard among the florist trade of Boston and vicinity on the very entertaining talk given by Henry Penn before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston last week, giving his experiences and observations on his recent trip to California.

Flower Market Reports

Market conditions have BOSTON greatly improved within the past few days. It is quite an encouraging sign to find the tables in the wholesale markets at last free from accumulated surplus flowers and to learn that everything of acceptable quality finds a ready sale at a fixed price. This means two or three hundred per cent of an advance on gross receipts for many of the local growers. Chrysanthemums are increasing in number but not fast enough to fill the vacancy left by the retreating asters and gladioli. Of dahlias there are never very many seen in the wholesale markets here and so they are not interfering with the monopoly of the situation by the standard florist crops.

Trade is noticeably on BUFFALO the upward course and this, no doubt, is due to the shortening up and poor quality of the outdoor flowers. There are still asters, gladioli, marigolds, cosmos and other stock, but it is gradually becoming lighter each day. Roses have arrived in better shape since cooler weather set in and the demand has fallen on carnations and these are not coming in in quantity. Lilies, too, have had a better sale and everything indoor grown has had more sales. There are chrysanthemums, Golden Glow, Smith's Advance, and some dahlias of eastern consignments, which have taken well. There has never been a September month in which roses were finer than at present; double white Killarney good, pink Killarney grand color and excellent stems. Sunburst very choice, Ward, Maryland, Bon-silene all good, Scott, Key, Russell, Ophelia, beautiful color and excellent stems and the sales have been satisfactory throughout the week. Conditions are satisfactory to all and it is hoped that things will improve daily.

September closes with CHICAGO nearly all outdoor flowers gone and no surplus of any kind in the market. Out-of-town trade is very good and local sales have been better the past week. While there is no marked increase, the tendency has been to a good amount of steady business which has used up all the good stock at a fair price. Just at this writing carnations are scarce. Cold rain has prevented the opening of buds but stems are lengthening and when the sun comes out again regular cold weather stock will be seen. While asters locally grown are considered out of the race some are coming now from New York which, though short, are of good quality and size. Gladioli are nearing the close of the outdoor season and it has been a poor one financially, excepting for those who had a good early stock. American Beauty roses are coming of good quality, and stems are now reaching the four-foot mark. Other roses are about equal to the demand. Chrysanthemums are having an unusual experience, the early ones being badly hampered by the heat and the late ones held back by the dark days. The large number of weddings is using up all of the lily of the valley and making white orchids much in demand. Social events are starting early this fall, making an earlier revival of the flower business and of course meeting the approval of all in the trade. The supply of all kinds of green is excellent.

Toward the end of CINCINNATI last week the supply began to shorten rapidly but the first days of this week opened with receipts that were more than adequate for present needs. Roses are in a very large supply and generally are of a high quality. Carnations are fairly plentiful. The supply of lilies is about equal to the demand. Dahlias are very fine and there are many of them. Gladioli and asters have about run their course. Greens are plentiful. Wild smilax is enjoying a pretty good demand.

The impression one NEW YORK gets from a tour of the wholesale flower district this week is of a very uncertain character. Dealers are expectant rather than sanguine and the degrees of expectancy vary according to the man and his environment. Growers are gradually bringing their standard fall and winter crops forward so that estimates and forecasts as to quality and quantity can be made and the question of selling agencies is now to the front with some important changes in alignment already settled or soon to be. The fall end of the outdoor summer season supply still hangs on—asters, gladioli, hydrangeas, gypsophila, with odds and ends in variety, and lastly the dahlias which are seen in abundance but not always in salable shape—but a good frost will quickly wipe these off the boards and we shall then be down once again to the old standbys. Of the latter, roses are in moderate supply, stems and flowers small but buds well colored, uniform and indicating good culture and care.

ful handling; carnations are very poor indeed; lilies are of higher quality than at any time during the summer and there are lots of them; lily of the valley is of regal quality from some growers but there is plenty of the other kind; cattleyas are of varying quality and are moving with exasperating slowness; oncidiums, Dendrobium phalaenopsis, D. formosum giganteum help out on the variety of orchids; chrysanthemums are gradually asserting themselves and already show signs of accumulation which will seriously affect the returns if the asters and dahlias delay their exit much longer. There are quite a few changes, removals and new firms in the wholesale market district, mention of which will be found from time to time in our reading columns or in the advertising pages.

Business con-

PHILADELPHIA continues to improve slowly here, as was to be expected with the advent of cooler weather. Stocks of all kinds have decreased in quantity and as a rule have bettered in quality. There is an air of activity all around and a much better tone and feeling everywhere. In roses, American Beauty is back to its old place as leader and moves off nicely at about same prices as last year. Close seconds in the running are Ophelia and Russell. We have never seen Ophelia in finer form than it is at present. Crimson Queen and Hoosier Beauty are among the new ones that are attracting attention. Carnations are coming in better and selling right well. Orchids were plentiful; fine quality; demand not brisk. There is much more activity in the dahlia market since the cool weather set in. Asters and gladioli are practically over, although there are a few stragglers here and there. No change in the chrysanthemum situation—just a few of the early yellows and whites. The supply of lily of the valley and lilies has shortened up and the demand remains excellent. Tritomas are selling better, although it is still a little early for them.

After an unprece-

PITTSBURGH dented season of cold weather and rain, followed by a fortnight of dry weather and torrid heat, autumnal growing conditions are well-nigh perfect. Chrysanthemums have just started to come in, and as the early varieties go, are of exceptional good quality. Considering the early season, business is fine and the supply very heavy, with the disposal in proportion. Asters and gladioli have nearly run their course, but dahlias continue "Queen of the Day," both as to quality, quantity and favor. The McCallum Company which makes a specialty of these flowers is averaging 4,500 daily. All are specimen varieties, their dahlia man having made their growth almost a religion, saying nothing of science.

ness keeping up nicely the supply is practically cleaned up from day to day. Several large decorations of a social nature took many flowers the past week, and a great deal of less desirable stock was used on floats in the big I. O. O. F. parade. Carnations are coming in a little better, but the supply is still limited and the offerings are readily absorbed notwithstanding rather poor quality. The supply of chrysanthemums is increasing rapidly and they meet with excellent demand. October Frost is getting scarce, but there are plenty other varieties to take its place. Queens are beginning to appear and show excellent quality. Rose Pink and Unaka are arriving freely and pompons are plentiful. The latter are very popular and bring top prices. Dahlias continue very satisfactory both in quantity and quality, and the demand shows no inclination to weaken. Gladiolus is holding out fairly well, and asters are still offered in considerable quantity, while the supply of amaryllis is abundant. Violets are coming in more freely, but the demand exceeds the supply by a large margin and heavier arrivals will be welcome to the trade. The rose market shows little change, summer roses being off crop and winter roses just beginning to appear. The quality is a little better this week, but there is not enough good stock to fill the demand. Gardenias are scarce, and the limited supply is readily absorbed. The same is true of orchids, although cattleyas promise to be plentiful in another week or two. The supply of small outdoor stock is gradually decreasing, after a very successful summer season.

ST. LOUIS

The market is still overcrowded and has been so all week and with the retail business slow, the wholesalers have a hard time cleaning up their stock. Chrysanthemums of the white and yellow sorts are coming in more freely and sell better. Roses are most plentiful and down in price and only the fancy sorts sell with any degree of regularity. Carnations are looking better; still the quality is shy, also the stems. Outdoor stock is still coming in.

A marked drop in the temperature last week created a scarcity of stock of all kinds. It is stated that not more than one-tenth of the number of dahlias generally to be had at this time of the year are now obtainable. Carnations are not as yet very plentiful, nor is the stock anything to boast of. Cattleyas are more plentiful and are bringing lower prices. Spray orchids are not in any great demand. There have not been nearly enough good white roses to go around for the past ten days. Funeral work has been quite heavy and the demand for white roses was greater than it has been for some time. Pink roses are more plentiful. American Beauty roses are very good and in fair demand. Lily of the valley is more plentiful but has been selling quite well.

PERSONAL.

Daniel J. Leary, florist, Baldwin street, Waterbury, Ct., and Miss Sadie V. Dougherty will be married Oct. 12.

John M. Hunter, the veteran gardener, of Englewood, N. J., has gone to California hoping to improve his health.

Irvington, N. J. E. W. Fengar has two happy finds among his chrysanthemums. One is a bronze sport from Unaka and the other a pure white sport from Well's Late pink.

Lawrence Cotter, manager of Lakeview Rose Gardens at Jamestown, N. Y., has recently returned from a sanitarium, having been ill all summer. We hope the improvement now indicated will continue uninterrupted.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

CONNECTICUT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

This society held its Annual Dahlia Show on September 22-23, in Unity Hall, Pratt street, Hartford. The entries were larger than usual and the dimensions of the hall were hardly equal to the occasion. Vice-President G. H. Hollister acted as superintendent of the exhibition. J. F. Huss decorated the stage, for which he received the prize for the exhibit of most general merit. He also got the Stumpp & Walter cup for best display of annu-als. From New Haven we had as exhibitors Alfred E. Doty and John H. Slocombe; from West Haven, C. Louis Alling; and from Taunton, Mass., Henry F. Burt. There were also a number of growers for private estates around Hartford, among whom might be mentioned Niel Nelson and Nathaniel Slocombe, the latter of Farmington. The vegetable exhibit was unusually fine, J. F. Huss carrying off first money for the largest display. There was also a fine display of fruit, Warren S. Mason, of Farmington, having things his own way in this department and also carrying off the silver cup for perennials, valued at $25.

John H. Slocombe and Niel Nelson were 1st and 2nd on seedling dahlias. Mr. Nelson 1st for floral piece. Most of the regular dahlia prizes were taken by the parties above mentioned. There were galadioli, cosmos, asters, etc., in good quantity, from East Hartford Dahlia Gardens, A. Righenzi, H. L. Metcalfe, N. Slocombe, N. Nelson, W. S. Mason and J. F. Huss.

MAPLEWOOD DAHLIA SOCIETY.

The first annual show of the Maplewood Dahlia Society took place in the elegant hall of the Maplewood Field Club, Maplewood, N. J., from 1 P. M. till 10 P. M., followed by two hours of dancing and was favored with every success, good weather, good exhibits and plenty of them and from miles around, the judging being very hard owing to the good quality of flowers. The attendance was far beyond expectations. We have the list of winners in the 28 classes but unfortunately have no copy of the schedule and consequently are not able to tell what the awards represent. The list of winners, however, includes F. V. Braun, A. A. Earl, Mrs. W. F. Duel, Geo. Stevenson, Miss M. Commerford, Walter Lawrence, C. W. Groo, A. W. Pohlman, Mrs. A. G. Seymour, Frank E. Taylor, Mrs. C. W. Pollard, J. R. Le Count, J. H. Ayres, E. B. Phelps and Wm. Larbig.

The premiums which included 19 silver medals were mostly specials contributed by friends of the Society, including J. M. Thorburn & Co., Mrs. J. R. Le Count, Henry A. Dreer, H. F. Michell Co., H. B. Fraentzel, Walter Lawrence, John Le Count, F. & F. Nurseries, Geo. G. Salmon Co., Samuel H. Ross, Wm. H. Kemp, Mrs. F. F. Durand, Wm. H. Solph, C. Kessinger & Co., Chas. M. Decker & Bro., L. I. Dahlia Gardens, S. G. Memory, Mrs. W. M. Gray and Mrs. W. F. Deuel.

The special Manda prizes were won by Hugo Volkening, Orange, N. J. The judges were William Reid, John Garvin and Dietrich and Kinsgrab.

LENOX HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The annual exhibition of fruit, flowers and vegetables will be held in the Town Hall, Lenox, Mass., October 26 and 27. The schedule of prizes has been issued and copies may be had on application to the secretary, John Carman, Lenox, Mass. The following individuals and firms appear as donors of special prizes:

W. E. S. Griswold, silver cup, for collection of eighteen kinds of vegetables; W. H. Walker, silver cup, for six blooms of the new chrysanthemum Mrs. W. H. Walker; R. & J. Farquhar & Co., silver cup, for best collection of twelve kinds of vegetables; Hitchings & Co., silver cup, for best two bunches of grapes; Lenox Horticultural Society, silver cup, for best ten blooms of chrysanthemums, one variety; C. H. Totty, The Wells gold and bronze medals, for two blooms of Adele Griswold.

Cash prizes are offered by A. H. Hews Co., Frank Howard, Bon Arbor Chemical Co., H. A. Dreer, A. N. Pierson Co., W. E. Marshall, Scott Bros., Lord & Burnham Co., Peter Henderson & Co., Carter's Tested Seeds and John Wilk.

OYSTER BAY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the monthly meeting of the Oyster Bay (N. Y.) Horticultural Society, the exhibition tables were well filled with fruit, flowers and vegetables. The society's prizes were awarded to Chas. Milburn for tomatoes, and to James Duthie for dahlias and apples. Honorable mention was given John Sorosik and Jos. Robinson for dahlias; Chas. Milburn for marigolds; Alfred Walker for gladioli; A. Yanuchi for celery. David Hothersall received a cultural certificate for roses and Chas. Milburn received the thanks of the society for antirrhinums. Prizes were received from I. Hicks & Son, Frost & Bartlett Co. and Vaughan's Seed Store. At the next meeting prizes will be awarded for chrysanthemums, cauliflower and celery. The Dahlia Show, to be held on October 5 and 6, bids fair to be the best in the history of the Society. Schedules for the Dahlia and Chrysanthemum Shows, to be held on November 2, are now ready. A. R. KENNEDY, Sec.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The Cleveland Flower Show is progressing and it seems as though there is likely to be considerable of an exhibit there. The interest in the rose exhibit is developing. Two more special prizes have been offered, one from Storrs & Harrison of $25, and another of $10 for the prettiest vase of cut roses, the decision to be made by a vote of lady visitors. There will also be a meeting of the American Rose Society held at that time in the Coliseum. Also an Executive meeting of the Committee in New York City, October 11.

HOUSTON, TEXAS.

State Flower Show.

The Flower Show promises to exceed last year's show by one hundred per cent. About fifty per cent. of the florists of the state expect to make exhibits. They realize the value of this from last year's show, and are all coming in on this year's show. Aside from this, all of the out-of-the-state exhibitors of last year and a great many additional are planning exhibits for this year, which shows they find it worth while.

We feel that the S. A. F. Convention for Houston in 1916 has a great deal to do with the added interest in our Flower Show here.

The S. A. F. Convention Outlook.

William C. Gloeckner, of Albany, N. Y. writes that he will organize a party from his city for the Houston Convention. He says that the florists of his city expect to take advantage of this opportunity to visit the South. It is more than likely that this party will go by boat from New York to New Orleans or Galveston—this however, will be decided later.

Mr. Gloeckner says—"Houston is a long way from home but I am going to do everything in my power to attend the Convention next year and I will try to get every florist in Albany to accompany me on this trip."

The indications are, plans being formed so early, that this is going to be a record-breaking convention.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Donald McLaren has returned from a business trip in the northwestern part of the state.

C. Kooyman has on display this week a new seedling dahlia from Burns & Co., a clear white color and in form much like Minnie Burtle.

Daniel MacRorie expects to take a trip to the southern part of the state shortly with his sister who is visiting here from South Orange, N. J.

MacRorie, McLaren & Co. have just completed the renovation of the Hawaiian state building at the Exposition, supplying many tropical plants, palms, etc.

Gustave A. Navlet, who for many years conducted a florist shop in Sacramento, Cal., prior to moving to Eureka about seven years ago, died in that city on September 16. The deceased was a brother of Charles C. Navlet, who conducts the flower and seed department in the Emporium of this city.

PITTSBURGH.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius W. Ludwig have returned from a three-weeks' visit with relatives in Milwaukee, Wis.

The E. C. Ludwig Company has just begun the building of an additional greenhouse, 25 by 200, at Mars, Pa.

Miss Abby Fuhr, the bookkeeper for the E. C. Ludwig Co., has been spending a two weeks' vacation on the Great Lakes.

William Lowe, the Diamond St. florist, and his brother, have returned from a trip to the Pacific Coast including the two Expositions.

Harvey C. Sheaff, manager for Mrs. E. A. Williams, is spending a month in visiting the cities of the Western Slope, returning home on October 6.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Bergman, the former of Friedman & Bergman of Chicago, have returned home after spending a month with Mrs. Bergman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Ludwig.

The branch house of the Zieger Company is soon to be removed from Penn avenue to North Highland avenue adjoining the Dovenshire market. Meanwhile important improvements and changes are being made in the branch house-to-be.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. McGrath, the former manager of the Blind Floral Co., have returned from a visit in Cleveland, O. The firm is adding materially to the appearance of its store room by two additional display cases, repainting and handsome new draperies.

S. J. or "Jack" Frampton, as he is more familiarly known to his friends, has left the G. P. Weaklin & Co., for the Zieger Co., where he has assumed the responsibilities of "outside man." Francis Smith formerly with O. R. Cramer of Uniontown succeeds Mr. Frampton at Weaklin's.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company is beautifying its station and the approaches at Glencairn, Pa., following up the plan it adopted a few years ago. The banks where the road runs through a deep cut, have been sodded and flower beds added. Grass and flowers also adorn the walks in and about the station grounds. This work was done under the supervision of Nicholas Cassalucia, who has charge of the horticultural features of the railroad for sixty miles east of Pittsburgh.

Anthony W. Smith, Jr., has returned to business, following a week's illness. The A. W. Smith Company are known as extensive advertisers as "America's Largest Florists." Among their flowerers the Smiths have on sale some attractive Bombay and brass cages containing Brazilian cardinals, paroquets and Tyrolese canaries.

Malden, Mass.—Bids have been called for by John G. Tilden, secretary of the Park Commissioners of Malden, for the erection of a comfort station and shelter on Ferryway Green, one of the fine playgrounds of which the city boasts. McNaughton & Robinson of Boston are the architects.

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:

William Murphy, the well-known florist, of Cincinnati, Ohio, passed away on last Monday morning at his home at the age of 57. He had been seriously ill for the greater part of a year but at times rallied so that his family and many friends thought he would recover his health and be like his former self.

Mr. Murphy has been in the florist business for a period covering more than 33 years, first as a grower and for the last fifteen years as a wholesale commission florist. He was very successful in these enterprises. During this time he took a very active interest in the trade and its various organizations and functions in this vicinity, and he held positions of trust and responsibility in the Cincinnati Florist Society, local exhibitions, etc.

The deceased's wife, four daughters and his son W. Ray Murphy, who will continue his father's business, survive him.

Gentlemen:

Last July, 1914, I purchased from you material for a greenhouse 165 x 30 ft., and erected same according to your plans and specifications. I am more than pleased with the house, and the treatment I received from your firm. And, if I ever build another house, it will be of your material and your construction.

Very truly yours,

The Jacobson Floral Co. Build Two Half Iron Framers

This column fitting is not simply clamped to it; but the bolt goes through the pipe. To our notion its the only safe way to overcome the danger of its slipping off, as you and I know has happened with other fittings.

HAVE you ever gone carefully into the Iron Frame House?
Of course, if you are contemplating building a full iron frame one, you will want to know about our Reconstructed Construction with its wide space between the rafters, wide glass and many distinctive features.

If you are not, we would like to point out to you, item by item, exactly what goes into our half-iron frame construction to make it so entirely different from the usual pipe frame house. Some make the mistake of comparing our house with such houses, when comparing prices.
You remember we learned in our early school boy days that you can compare only things alike. One rose with another for instance. But surely not a rose with a snapdragon.
We can't go into all the particulars of our house right here; but lets take the question of just purlins.

We use only angle iron purlins.
If angle irons are best for the full iron frame house; they are best for our half-iron frame.

If it is an advantage to have each bar screwed fast to the angle purlin in one; it is an advantage in the other.

If we use bolted-through-and-through column fittings to securely screw our old purlins to the purlins in one, there is every reason why we should use it in the other. These houses of the Jacobson Floral Company at Springfield, N. J., are 35 ft. 8 in. x 284 ft., and 17 ft. 8 in. x 101 ft.

They are certainly a couple of fine houses. Can't you arrange to come to Elizabeth some day soon, and we will meet you with a car and take a ride over and see them?
We can make a day of it and visit half a dozen or so places.
What you do that very thing?
Will you do that very thing?

This view shows the special clip that catches over the purlin and is screwed to the bar. Then it is also screwed to a fitting on the other side. Here is a sure enough strong structural point.

Three "Superfine" New Spencers for 1916

"Fiery Cross"

"FIERY CROSS" is a most appropriate name for a most unusual novelty. During the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, when Scotland was continually at war, the method employed by the chiefs to gather the clans to repel invaders was by means of a fiery cross, which was taken from hamlet to hamlet by the speediest man available. The fiery cross was simply a blazing pine branch.

"FIERY CROSS" has all the appearance of live fire, the color being a scorching fire-red, or scarlet, without any shading and which scintillates and glitters in bright sunlight, thus adding a glowing, fire-like sheen which radiates over the flower. Unlike most of the orange-scarlet varieties, it does not scorch or burn even during extended periods of intense sunshine, therefore it can be grown in all soils without shading. The beautifully waved and fluted flowers are borne freely in threes and fours, well placed on long stout stems.

"FIERY CROSS" was recommended for the Silver Medal variety of National Sweet Pea Society of England, July, 1914, which was awarded July, 1915. It received an Award of Merit at the exhibition held by the American Sweet Pea Society at the San Francisco Fair, June 10, 1915, as being the outstanding variety in the Show. Also Certificate of Merit at the Sweet Pea Exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, June 23, 1915; and Silver Medal at the Seventh Annual Exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society, Newport, R. I., July 15, 1915.

An Average Spray of "FIERY CROSS" Reproduced from a Fordhook Photograph.

Seventh Annual Exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society, Newport, R. I., July 15, 1915.

Prices for "Fiery Cross" Sweet Pea

In sealed packets containing ten seeds each: Per pkt. 25 cts.; $2.00 per dozen pkts.; $13.75 per 100 pkts. In lots of 500 packets or more, $12.50 per 100 pkts.

If 500 or more packets are ordered at one time and it is so requested, we shall print on the packets the name and address of the purchaser and supply free an electrotype of either the spray or single flower.

1878 "The President" *

This will compete with "Fiery Cross" as the greatest novelty of the year. It is wonderfully brilliant, in fact, it might be termed a glowing scarlet self. The flowers are of largest size, carried on a glowing scarlet self. The flowers are of largest size, carried on a glowing scarlet self. The flowers are of largest size, carried on a glowing scarlet self. It is head and shoulders above anything of a similar color, and probably will never be surpassed in the orange-scarlet section. We were awarded Certificate of Merit for The President by the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, June 23, 1915, also by the American Sweet Pea Society Newport, R. I., July 15, 1915, and have pleasure now in introducing this unusual novelty, simultaneously with our friends Messrs. Alex. Dickson & Son, the celebrated Rosarians, of Belfast, Ireland.

Prices for "The President" Sweet Pea

In sealed packets containing ten seeds each: Pkt., 25 cts.; 5 pkts. for $1.00; $2.00 per dozen pkts.; $13.75 per 100 pkts. In lots of 500 packets or more, $12.50 per 100 pkts.

New Spencer Hilary Christy

We were much pleased with this beautiful and distinct novelty in 1914 in the Essex cultures of our friend, Mr. Hugh Dickson, then President of the National Sweet Pea Society of Great Britain. The trial at Fordhook the past season has also been most satisfactory and we have great pleasure in now first offering the seed in connection with the originator. The plants grow strongly, bloom profusely, bearing flowers of good size and true Spencer type. The standard is frosted orange-cream with crenulated fiery edge; wings, rosy carmine; keel, delicate fawny lemon. Its rich though subdued colorings are very chaste and refined.

In sealed packets containing ten seeds each: Per pkt., 15 cts.; 2 pkts. for 25 cts.; $1.00 per dozen pkts.; $7.00 per 100 pkts. In lots of 500 packets or more, $6.25 per 100 pkts.

In sealed packets containing twenty seeds each: Per pkt., 25 cts.; 5 pkts. for $1.00; $2.00 per dozen pkts.; $13.75 per 100 pkts. In lots of 500 packets or more, $12.50 per 100 pkts.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If rain our toll, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Mignonette

See that the plants are well supported to keep the stems upright. Keep all unnecessary side growths removed to throw the full strength into the flowering spike. Where the plants have been started early the bench will in most cases be filled with roots so now is a good time to give them a mulch of equal parts of soil and well rotted cow manure. This can be put on about half an inch deep. Don't put it on too heavy but follow with another mulch in five or six weeks. It will do them more good this way. On bright mornings they can be syringed. Look the beds over often for the dry spots and water them. Give light fumigation every week and plenty of ventilation when possible.

Double Tulips for Easter

Double tulips, such as Murillo, Salvator Rosa and Couronne d'Or are particularly good for pot and pan culture. 6 to 10-inch pans seem to be the best sellers. Any good compost will do. See that each pan or pot has good drainage. It is well to have quite a number in 4 and 5-inch pots, three bulbs in the former and five in the latter. These pans or pots can be placed in a deep frame and plunged and with some protection will do until about five weeks before Easter.

Ericas

These old favorites are coming to the front more and more as pot plants. For the Christmas holidays there is nothing better than Erica melanthera. Give them the coolest house as they will not require much pushing to be in on that date. Anywhere from 45 to 48 degrees night temperature will hold them in good shape. If there is any plant that likes lot of air it is the Erica. Give ventilation on all possible occasions, and remember to keep the compost in the pots in an even state of moisture all the time. If they do not soak through, which is often the case, plunge them in a tub of water and leave them there for a while.

Next Week:—Bouvardias; Crops to Take Place of Chrysanthemums; Bulbs for Outdoors; Forcing Gladioli; Preparing Sweet Pea Ground; Shamrocks for St. Patrick's Day.

Lilium longiflorum

Longiflorums for Easter can now be potted into 6-inch pots which will be large enough for the trade. Use good new soil, three parts, well rotted cow or horse manure one part, and see that each pot has plenty of drainage. Put in some cool place until they have made lots of roots; a cellar or a deep frame will suit them. Sometime before January they can be placed in a house that stands about 50 degrees at night. If there is not room in cellar or frame they can be placed on a high piece of ground and covered with about six inches of soil. When cold weather sets in they can have some long manure put over them for protection.

Phlox

From now on up to the end of October is the best time to make new borders or divide and replant old ones. When phloxes are grown commercially it is essential that the soil be spaded deep—or still better, trenched. Then apply a generous amount of well rotted manure. Any extra labor and fertilizer put into the preparation of the border will be repaid for some years afterward in results. It pays to trench the ground well for this perennial and have plenty of well decomposed manure thoroughly incorporated with the soil. Good varieties to plant are Nettie Stuart white shaded pink, White Swan, pure white and Rosy Gem clear rose. A few specially good forms of P. decussata are Independence, Le Cygne, Albatre, Jeanne D'Arc, all pure white; Le Soleil rose, Coquelicot, orange scarlet; General Chanzy scarlet; R. P. Struthers, salmon pink.

Temperature

We are now coming to the season when we can keep a more even temperature in our several departments. The cool house can be kept at from 45 to 50 for night with a rise during sunshine to 55 to 60 degrees. Intermediate house 55 to 60 at night, day 65 to 70 degrees. Warm house 60 to 65 degrees night temperature, day 70 to 75 degrees. This temperature is meant for a general run of florists' stock only.

PERENNIAL DELPHINIUMS

The Larkspur is among the most beautiful and useful of our hardy perennial plants, and as a material for planting has for some few years been receiving ever increasing attention. Many beautiful hybrids have been raised varying in height and color and affording material for almost any color or height combination desired, either in the garden border or rockery.

The culture of Delphiniums is simple, in fact more simple than many of our herbaceous plants. Good cultivation of the soil around their roots will be found to be all that is necessary. The plants should not be overfed, being well satisfied with a good garden soil. A mulch of manure should never be put over or around them as they will merely rot away, or produce inferior flowers. If necessary to mulch in winter a few dry leaves will suit the purpose admirably.

Propagation of Delphiniums is accomplished best by seed. Of course in some of the hybrid varieties all plants will not come true, but the majority will. Seed should be sown as soon as ripe, for only a small percentage of seed will germinate after being kept a year. If sown as soon as ready plants will be produced before winter that can be planted out and will flower finely the following summer. Other means of propagation are by division or by cuttings of the young shoots in spring or autumn, potted separately and placed in a cold frame. These cuttings will make good plants by spring and will flower at the same time as the divisions. This is probably the best and safest way to propagate any particular variety.

In glancing through nurserymen's catalogues one will see many fine varieties listed, but there are a great many even more beautiful ones which have not as yet found their way into the United States in commercial quantities. The following is a small list of some of the most desirable varieties from the standpoint of the planter, including some of the species which are seldom grown in gardens, giving notes as to color, height, etc. This list, as will be seen is far from complete, but I trust may be helpful to some of my readers.

Delphinium cashmirianum, pale blue with flowers one to two inches across. Ht. 12-18 in.

Delphinium nudicaule, red; petals clear yellow, long spurred, a Californian species growing from 10-18 in. high.

Delphinium formosum, the old-fashioned garden Larkspur, of which a great many varieties exist.

Delphinium belladonna, another old variety with a profusion of transparent sky-blue flowers. This species does not often set fertile seed, although I notice some seedsmen offering it and claiming that they have managed to procure fertile seeds.

The following are all hybrids—some of belladonna, some of formosum type, and while a great many of them are offered in this country they are not procurable in any great quantity.

Antigone—Bright blue, lilac centre, fine for grouping.

Bleu Tendre—Silvery white single flowers flushed very light blue and carried on long spike. Ht. 4-5 ft.

King of Delphiniums—Enormous semi-double flowers on tall spikes to a height of 5 ft. Deep indigo blue with inner petals plum color; large white centre tipped purple.

Lizzie van Veen—Long spikes and unusually large single flowers; Cambridge blue with a white eye.

Mme. Violet Geslin—Large round flowers, blue, with lavender centre and white eye, semi-double.

Polar Star—Ivory white, semi-double on dwarf spikes of branching habit.

Mrs. Creighton—Semi-double; Oxford blue, dark plum colored centre and brown eye.

Queen Wilhelmina—Sky-blue, slightly veined rose, white eye.

Turquoise—Semi-double; turquoise blue slightly tinged rose.

Queen of the Blues—Gentian blue; 18 in.

Capri—Sky-blue, blooming over long period. 5 ft.

Lamartine—Prussian blue, with white eye.

Moerheimi—White; from June to frost. 5 ft.

Mr. J. S. Brunton—An improved belladonna with larger flowers in great quantity throughout the summer. 3 to 4 ft.

Persimmon—Sky-blue, of the belladonna type.

Mrs. Thompson—Belladonna hybrid; deep blue flowers with a brown bell.

Christine Kellway—Sky-blue and white eye.

Langport Blue—Five feet or more in height; bright blue.

Sir Walter Scott—Blue flushed violet with conspicuous black centre, 4½ ft.

Althos—Purple and violet with white centre, 5-6 ft.

True-Blue—Perhaps the richest colored of all; strong constitution, 5-6 ft.

General Baden Powell—Lavender tinted rose, with a brownish black eye. 4½ ft.

James Kellway—Violet blue; white eye. 5-6 ft.

Princess Maud—Sky-blue, veined rose, with white eye. Semi-double. 5½ ft.

Sir Trevor Lawrence—Sky-blue with inner petals flushed rose pink, white eye. 6 ft.

Rev. E. Lascelles—Of recent introduction. Violet-blue with white eye.

Statuaire Rude—Soft lavender with slight flush of rose. Semi-double and very large.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be promptly received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the Editor of HORTICULTURE.

Asparagus and Smilax

These two greens are so common on a rose growing establishment that a word or two on them will not be out of place in these columns. Where there is enough headroom in the cross houses smilax is usually grown, the remainder of the space being devoted to asparagus. If a little attention is given these greens the returns will be found a good deal more than if they are merely planted and watered once in a while. In the first place, these greens will thrive better if allowed a little more heat, then more moisture, not at the roots so much as in the air, so it will be well to damp down in the cross houses that are hot and dry as a rule. This should not be allowed to get into the rose houses, however, as roses have different habits and the wet warm atmosphere will not be beneficial to them. For fertilizer horse manure will be found better for asparagus and smilax than cow manure would be, and the greens will make a quicker growth if this is used. A little nitrate of soda every now and then as the plants need it will also hasten their growth. As a rule asparagus is not planted every year, but kept going as long as it will produce greens for cutting, and if this is the case with yours it will be well to use a little lime now while the chrysanthemums will be in season and greens will not sell so well. If the greens have been forced all summer it will be necessary to dry them off a little now applying a dose of lime to sweeten the soil and to kill what earth worms there may be in it. If there are too many of these they will be largely responsible for the plants not drying out well, as they fill the bottom layer of soil with slime and stop up the pores, thus preventing air from getting in much, and this will keep the soil wet and soggy. When applying the lime make sure that the greens are dry so that none of the lime will stick to the tops and thus render it useless for market. Lime can also be slacked and used in the form of liquid manure and if made strong enough will be even more effective in ridding the soil of worms. Sow bugs and thrips also bother asparagus and smilax, but these can be killed with Slug Shot for the first, and any good insecticide advertised in HORTICULTURE. The work of thrips on smilax can be noticed by the small white marks all over the bottom leaves, and often it is possible to catch the thrips at work.

Mildew

A little sulphur applied to pipes will generally rid the houses of this disease, but should the plants have become very soft because of being forced too much or for any other reason, mildew will set in the very first opportunity it gets and will be hard to eradicate for a while. In a case like that sulphur fumes would have to be made quite strong to kill the disease, and a continued use of this would be apt to bleach the flowers to a certain degree, depending on how long the plants are exposed to the fumes. In cases that promise to be bad at all, and with buds nearly showing color we would not use sulphur for the reasons stated but would spray the plants with Fungine, advertised elsewhere. Many growers use it regularly as a preventive, and where this can be done it is better than the sulphur treatment although a trifle more expensive. However, with careful attention paid to the ventilators and to the feeding of the plants there should be little trouble with mildew. Roses enjoy plenty of air so it is best to keep the air in the houses fresh and sweet, even though it does take a little coal to do it. Keep air on all night except in severe storms or when the temperature outside falls below 26.

Cover Crops

The proper preparation of soil for the roses before planting is playing a more important part in the growing every year, for, with keen competition, low prices for roses grown, high cost of labor and raw materials, growers cannot afford to let go anything that can be done to give them better roses and sooner, for the sooner the plants start cutting after planting the better. To have proper soil for the plants it will be necessary to look after the fields well, even if this does seem to be out of our line. The ground that is to be seeded to grass to grow sod in the future, should be plowed up as soon as possible and seeded to rye or wheat. It would have been better to have done this earlier as then a little winter vetch could be added, and this would enrich the soil a good deal by storing nitrogen which the bacteria on its roots take from the air. In the spring this can be plowed under and the field seeded to grass, or to some cover crop to be plowed under later, and the grass seeded in late summer. If the ground is weedy it would be well to let the weeds grow up and plow them under before they go to seed, repeating this operation until the soil is nearly free from weeds. Avoid using old greenhouse soil on lots where the sod is to be taken for the heaps in the near future. There are certain insects and fungi that take several years to die so it will be best to use the soil for fields where farm or garden crops are to be grown. Never allow any soil to lay exposed to the weather over winter. A large amount of plant food is wasted in this way every year, especially on sloping ground where the soil is bound to wash. All growers know the important part played by good soil in successful rose growing, and the ideal soil can seldom be had from natural fields. Most of the soil has to be made, so if this end has not been looked after in the past it can be turned into profit to look after the sod growing fields, and beginning right now.

try, and very dispiriting has been the tardy coming of the longed-for revival. Just to what extent the disappearance of the outdoor flowers and light cut of the indoor product at the present moment is responsible for the better conditions we can only conjecture but the hopeful activity which seems to be developing in all the commercial centres, in every line of trade, should and probably will include all the horticultural industries in its refreshing influence. HORTICULTURE hopes to see the flower people—growers and dealers, and those in all related lines come now into the enjoyment of a season of uninterrupted prosperity.

Ways and methods

Flower growers for the wholesale markets will now be considering the ways and means for disposing of their products to the best advantage during the coming season. Each has the right to conduct his business in such manner as pleases him best but we have always regarded the custom of a certain class of growers of shifting repeatedly during the season from one wholesale house to another for the purpose of playing the wholesale men against one another in the hope of extracting from them larger returns, as an unfortunate thing for the business, in which, however, not all the wholesalers themselves are entirely blameless. Any course which tends to stability and harmony now will help all around, and all should work hand in hand to place the business, as a whole, upon a more substantial basis than ever before. A long step to that end would be a closer personal relationship and acquaintance between growers, wholesalers and retailers in the same community. Their interests are closely interlocked and what makes for real permanent welfare for one makes for the prosperity of all.

Dahlia progress

After attending a few of the dahlia exhibitions this season one finds it increasingly difficult to distinguish between the various classes as hitherto defined. Even the expert finds it next to impossible to draw the line between "decorative" and "peony flowered" as represented by the new varieties constantly coming forward. We understand the Dahlia Society proposes to tackle this class problem, among its other ambitious aims, and see if something cannot be done to segregate the varieties under such distinguishing characteristics that the puzzling problems which judges and others have had to contend with will be eliminated. Our present system of classification is largely an inheritance from the time when regularity of outline, arrangement of petals, etc., was the supreme test by which a variety was approved or condemned—when a pointed petal was regarded as a fatal blemish and any suggestion of an open centre was almost a crime. The formalists of a generation or more ago would stand aghast could they see what are now regarded as worthy of admiration and honor among dahlias. "The world do move," and insofar as this applies to the dahlia, we think it is moving in the right direction.

Are the "good times" really here once more? It seems almost too good to be true. The improved tone of the flower market reports from practically all sections is very pleasing. The period of depression has been a long one, particularly in the eastern part of the coun-

HARDY VINES

We are indebted to The Garden Magazine, Garden City, N. Y., for the use of the accompanying cut, which shows so effectively the characteristics of some of the hardy vines which are worth growing for flower or foliage effects. Several of the vines shown are among the new species collected by E. H. Wilson in China and the cut is used as one of the illustrations in an article contributed by that gentleman to The Garden Magazine which appears in the September issue and which we commend to our readers as very interesting and instructive and well worth careful perusal.

Of Clematis montana rubens, Mr. Wilson says:

"The white flowered C. montana from Eastern Asia is an old favorite. A variety of this (C. montana var. rubens) with rose-colored flowers 2¼-3 inches across and dark foliage, which I had the pleasure of introducing to cultivation in 1900, is acclaimed by garden lovers to be one of the most beautiful of all the clematis. Around Boston it has not proved completely hardy but at Newport, R. I., some good examples may be seen."

It will not be out of place here to recall the fact that the first public mention of these new hardy vines in this country was made by Mr. Wilson in our issues of March 12 and 19, 1910, in a series of articles which he wrote for HORTICULTURE at that time. The several new species of Clematis, Rubus, Vitis and Actinidia which are now recognized as introductions of superior merit were there described and illustrations were shown of a number of them. On March 12 Mr. Wilson contributed some very interesting and hopeful notes on Clematis, stating that not fewer than sixty-five species occur in China, and mentioning Armandi and montana in its varieties rubens, Wilsoni and sericia as among the most promising.

ASPIDISTRA.

The aspidistra is one of the best of decorative foliage plants. Its value as a house plant lies in the fact that it is indifferent to neglect. It seems to be able to withstand hot air, gas and all the hard usage possible. Twenty years ago aspidistras were to be found in nearly every collection. They were familiar plants of our grandmothers. Today we see very few. One use, however, has been found for it and that is for renting purposes. It is also used to some extent in window boxes and vases in the city. It will thrive in dark places such as halls, etc.

China is the original home of this plant. The commonest species are A. lurida and a variegated form A. lurida variegata. The variegated form is more attractive and grown to a larger extent.

The plants may be propagated by division in early spring. They may also be propagated by cutting up the rhizomes into pieces one inch to an inch and a half long and planting in flats.

They will thrive in any fairly rich soil and are not particular as to temperature. A house kept at about 60 degrees is, however, best.

CLEVELAND FLOWER SHOW

All the nine committees in charge of the various branches of work in connection with the Cleveland Flower Show are each holding meetings of their own and beginning to get busy.

At a meeting of the general committees made up of the various chairmen, held at the Hollenden Hotel, October 1st, M. A. Vinson, secretary to the committees made a detailed report of his recent eastern trip. He explained the many details that were necessary to complete the arrangement with the New York Central R. R. for them to handle one of the large plants grown by Mr. John Canning, on the estate of Mr. Adolph Lewisohn, at Ardsley, N. Y. A definite decision regarding this shipment will be made this week upon the return of Mr. Lewisohn.

At the present time there are 46 representative firms included in our list of trade exhibitors, as follows:

F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; Standard Pump & Engine Co., Cleveland; Fowler Mfg. Co., Cleveland; Hitchings & Co., Elizabeth, N. The committees are most enthusiastic over the bright outlook for the success of the largest undertaking the Cleveland florists have ever handled. The out-of-town attendance of commercial and private growers is expected to be in the neighborhood of 600.

The following letter has been mailed to the secretaries of 115 Florists' Clubs and Societies in the United States and Canada:

39 Days Before the BIG SHOW.
To Members of Every Florists' Club and Horticultural Society in the United States. Ladies and Gentlemen:

We wish to extend an invitation to the members of your Club, to attend our big Flower Show to be held November 10th to 14th.

Your members can look upon this as a business trip because of the fact that they will see the exhibits of some fifty "live" growers, manufacturers and dealers in supplies of all kinds, and in that way they will get in touch with the newest things on the market.

Please do not get an impression, however, that there will be no pleasure for your members coming to Cleveland. We just followed the old saying and placed business before pleasure, but assure you we have a good entertainment committee on the job.

We suggest that you appoint an "official chaperone" together with a transportation committee to work together and secure a large enough party to make a special car or several cars possible from your city to Cleveland.

The enclosed slip will tell you of five important meetings to be held during the Show. Thanking you for prompt action on this subject, we remain

Yours, for a big Cleveland Flower Show,
H. P. KNOBLE,
Chairman, General Committee.

CHICAGO GRAND FLORAL FESTIVAL.

At the regular meeting of the Chicago Grand Floral Festival executive committee, held at the Morrison Hotel, September 30, much progress was made with flower show business, those in attendance being A. Henderson, W. N. Rudd, W. J. Keimel, August Poehlmann, Peter Reinberg, N. P. Miller, Geo. Asmus, H. B. Kennicott, August Koch and Robert Brenton.

Nic. Wietor was elected vice-chairman of the ways, means and audit committee, E. F. Kurowski, chairman of the reception committee, Payne Jennings, chairman retail florists' committee, Robert Brenton, chairman special features committee, and A. Henderson, Geo. Asmus and N. P. Miller, committee of management. Guy W. French has been appointed manager.

Chairman Brenton has many novel attractions in preparation for this exhibition and it now seems certain these special features will draw large audiences.

Chairman Keimel promises an unusually interesting series of lectures, along popular lines with stereopticon pictures.

Chairman Vaughan, of the poster committee, reports the fine poster in the hands of the lithographer will be ready in good season.

August Koch, of the west side parks, was elected chief of the information bureau.

GRAND NATIONAL FALL FLOWER SHOW.

Preparations for the Grand National Fall Flower Show to be held at the Palace of Horticulture Exposition grounds, San Francisco, October 21st to 26th, under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society in conjunction with the Chrysanthemum Society of America and the Department of Horticulture of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition are in active progress, and much interest is being shown in the event. H. Plath is manager and John R. Fotheringham, assistant manager, while the exhibition committee is composed as follows: Daniel MacRorie, T. Taylor, F. Pelicano, E. James, Angelo J. Rossi, D. Raymond, W. A. Hofinghof, Donald McLaren, Wm. Kettlewell, Wm. Munro, John R. Fotheringham, P. Ellings and M. Poss. A large number of prizes are offered, including many exposition medals and cash prizes donated by the Panama-Pacific Exposition Co., as well as various special prizes contributed by members of the trade associations, etc. Awards will be made for eight classes of exhibits, including 112 different numbers. Principal attention is given to chrysanthemums, but other flowers will be entered for awards also. Several prizes are offered for roses, carnations, dahlias, orchids, etc. Competition is open to all in all classes, with two or three exceptions, and plants and flowers displayed do not necessarily have to be grown by the exhibitor. Among the special features four awards are to be made for the best table decoration to be competed for five successive days, chrysanthemums to be the principal feature the first day, roses the second, dahlias the third any other flower the fourth and growing plants the fifth. From present indications the approaching show will be about the finest held here this year, —and there have been more shows than usual on account of the exposition.

INTERNATIONAL FLOWER SHOW NEW YORK.

The schedule of premiums to be offered at the International Flower Show to be held in the Grand Central Palace, New York, April 5th to 12th next, has been issued and copies may be obtained on application to the secretary.

The premiums offered are again on a very liberal scale, and there are some notable additions to the classes. In the section for commercial growers covering roses in pots and tubs, there are three prizes offered for a display of rose plants arranged as a rose garden covering 500 sq. ft., respectively $500, $300 and $200. In this class last year, there were but two prizes, $300 and $200.

Some important additions have been made to the classes covering bulbous plants. There is a class devoted to private growers covering a display of bulbs in flower to occupy 200 sq. ft., arranged for effect, prizes $150 and $100. There is also a class for dealers and seedsmen calling for a display of bulbs, etc., arranged as a Dutch bulb garden, covering 500 sq. ft., appropriate accessories permitted, prizes $250, $150 and $100, respectively.

In the commercial class covering a display of cut roses covering 200 sq. ft., the first prize is increased to $250 and the second prize in the new schedule is increased to $200. Bougainvilleas are to be features so as to form a distinct attraction among the groups of flowering plants, prizes of $75 and $50 being offered for a group arranged for effect covering 100 sq. ft.

A new feature is a class for a collection of new Holland plants covering 100 sq. ft., with prizes $50 and $25.

Rock gardens are to be another important feature, a commercial class for such gardens covering a space 10 ft. by 30 ft., suitable accessories permitted, having been introduced with prizes $250 and $150.

A very full and complete exhibition in the trade section is practically assured, the contracts already accepted aggregate in value upward of $10,000.

The entertainment features of the show will, it is expected be of the usual high standard and fully in accord with the purposes of the show.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

MASSACHUSETTS HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The October show of fruits and vegetables held at Horticultural Hall, Boston, on October 2 and 3 was one of the most elegant displays of really high class products of the fruit and vegetable garden ever staged by the Boston growers. The entire list was splendidly represented. We have never seen so fine peaches of local production and Jennison's Floral Garden scored a sensation with the Ideal strawberry, which we had occasion to mention two weeks ago. The collections of vegetables were arranged with much taste and the exhibits of salad plants were eagerly inspected by a throng of visitors. Dr. F. S. DeLuc won honorable mention for Improved Golden Bantam sweet corn and Jas. S. Bache's Golden Eagle sweet corn was accorded a vote of thanks.

Blue Hill Nurseries was the only exhibitor gaining recognition in the cut flower line. Honorable mention was accorded their seedling Phlox, Mrs. James Wheeler, a pale lavender rose flower. An attractive hardy hybrid aster shown by this exhibitor showed up well—A. Blue Hills (A. laevis X A. turbinellus).

The nominating committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society announces the following list of candidates for the various offices of the Society for the ensuing year, to be filled at the annual meeting November 13.

President, Richard M. Saltonstall; vice-president, Walter Hunnewell; trustees for 3 years, George E. Barnard, William C. Endicott, Arthur F. Estabrook, John K. M. L. Farquhar; nominating committee, Arthur F. Estabrook, Richard Hittinger, John G. Jack, Thomas Roland, John L. Smith.

In accordance with the By-laws of the Society two weeks are allowed for further nominations should any be desired.

WM. P. RICH, Secretary.

NEW JERSEY FLORICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The 10th Annual Dahlia, Fruit and Vegetable Show was held in Orange, N. J., on Monday, Oct. 4th. The show was the greatest success ever held by the society. That the blooms were larger and quite surpassed the N. Y. show was the opinion of many present. W. A. Manda staged a wonderful collection of dahlias and carried off many of the prizes. P. W. Popp, gardener to H. Darlington, Marmaroneck, N. Y., took seven 1st prizes in all the large classes. A fine collection of fruit which took 1st prize was staged by William Reid, gardener to Sidney and A. M. Colgate, Orange, N. J. A close second for an equally fine collection was awarded to Wm. Shillaber, gard. J. P. Sorenson, of Essex Fells, N. J. The miniature gardens were quite a feature and caused quite some interest to the general public. A. J. Moulton was awarded first, gard. Alfred A. Thoma, and the Essex County Country Club, gard. Gustaf Christenson, second, although the competition was very close.

Peter Hauck, Jr., of East Orange won 1st with a fine centre piece of dahlias and on 25 show dahlias. Among the other winners were Wm. Barr, Llewellyn Park, Walter Lawrence, Mrs. C. H. Stout of Short Hills and Walter Gray.

A special silver medal was awarded to Sidney and Austin Colgate for a group of foliage and flowering plants. A fine display of annuals exhibited by Wm. Shillaber was awarded a first-class certificate. The vegetable classes were of extraordinary merit.

The judges were Peter Duff, Alex. Robertson and W. A. Manda.

LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS' CLUB DAHLIA SHOW.

This club supervised the floral exhibit for the Fair Association this season, featuring dahlias as their part of the exhibit. The McCallum Co., S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. and H. F. Michell Co. all sent liberal displays of dahlias and the Michell Co. sent an assortment of Phlox and other perennials that were much admired. It was due to these firms that we were enabled to fill the space assigned in the artistic manner in which we did. The table was eighty feet long by eight feet wide with a raised table of about eighteen inches in width and that height from the lower table. This was decorated with wild smilax by I. Landis and Thomas Fries in festoons and stringers and made a handsome table for staging the dahlias.

B. F. Barr added a few palms and a handsome basket of gladioli and chrysanthemums for the center. Frank Suter being the only one who grows dahlias as a commercial cut flower in this vicinity, made the best local exhibit and H. D. Rohrer had a very good collection. A. F. Strickler had some mixed bowls of short-stemmed flowers.

In the amateur class David Roar staged a mighty fine collection and secured all the prizes for this section. Adam Felsingier staged the best flowers of the show simply for exhibition. Frank Suter captured the cash prize for florists with the largest collection and the silver cup for sweepstake prize. Master Edward E. Rohrer, a grandson of H. D. Rohrer, captured 1st for three handsome baskets of straw flowers grown and arranged by himself. The judge was S. S. Pennock.

In competition with Barr's handsome basket was a design made of marigolds in a frame two inches deep and sixteen by sixteen in size, made up by using different colors in the style of a patchwork quilt and the wording of the schedule compelled it to have first prize and the basket second. This sort of thing we hope to be able to eliminate by another year if the Fair officials appreciate our efforts this season enough to let us have a real hand in running the flower end of the Fair.

ALBERT M. HERR.

FLORISTS' CLUB OF PHILADELPHIA.

Tuesday night, October 6, was "dahlia night" and Lawrence K. Peacock had just given a lecture. We challenged any of the rose, carnation or chrysanthemum growers to stand up in open meeting and defend the dahlia but no one responded. The dahlia has no more poetry in its make-up than a zinnia has—a turnip of a flower! That's the feeling it gives us. Mr. Manda's man made a good showing and Pennock Bros. made a decoration.

Last year's officers were re-elected. New committees were appointed for the coming year. A collation was furnished by the officers and everybody had a good time. Commodore Westcott did some talking; so did Adolph Farenwald. We don't think much of the new essay committee. Your scribe is one of this essay committee, so he ought to know. But seriously, it was a fine meeting. There was a good attendance and lots of vim and enthusiasm. The secretary reported 299 members. Let's root for 500. Under the able leadership of George Burton we can do lots in the next 12 months. Let's each bring in five more new ones and boost for Philly.

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

President Harry A. Bunyard has appointed A. M. Henshaw, C. H. Totty and Roman J. Irwin a committee on transportation to Cleveland of those desirous of attending the Flower Show in that city, to take place November 10 to 14 next.

We are the most extensive growers of Perennial Phlox in the world and the plants we offer are all strong one-year-old field grown plants.

Astrild. Dense trusses of medium-sized flowers of a brilliant cochineal-carmine, shading deeper towards the center. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Europa. A white variety with very decided crimson-carmine eye; the individual flowers as well as the trusses are very large, entirely distinct.

Elizabeth Campbell. Very bright salmon-pink, with lighter shadings and dark crimson eye; an entirely new and much-wanted shade in Phlox. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

Frau Anton Buchner. The finest white variety yet introduced, having the largest truss and individual flower; of dwarf habit.

Gehon. A new color in Phloxes, a tender peach-blossom pink with bright rose eye. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Girdeur. Ground color soft mauve rose, heavily suffused and overlaid with a lively deep shade of cerise, giving the whole a beautiful mottled appearance. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Rheinlander. A beautiful salmon-pink with flowers and trusses of immense size, the color of the flower is intensified by a very decided eye of a deep claret-red.

Riverton Jewel. One of our own introductions which it gives us great pleasure to recommend, a lively shade of mauve-rose illuminated by a carmine-red eye, a splendid improvement on the popular variety Asia. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Thor. A most beautiful and lively shade of deep salmon-pink suffused and overlaid with a scarlet glow and a light almost white halo around its aniline-red eye. This variety will undoubtedly hold the same place among deep salmon colors that Elizabeth Campbell holds among the light salmon-pinks. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

W. C. Egan. One of the finest Phloxes yet introduced, and while the individual flowers according to the color-chart are of a delicate lilac color illuminated by a large bright soiferino eye, the color effect as a whole is a delicate pleasing shade of soft pink.

Widar. A splendid improvement on Edmond Rostand; in color a light reddish-violet, with very large white centre, which intensifies the color.

FERTILE HOLLAND.

The whole area of Holland is 12,600 square miles (about the size of Maryland), which is occupied approximately as follows:

	Square Miles
Flowers and bulbs.....	30
Nurseries.....	85
Market gardens.....	195

Area most highly fertilized.....	310
Grain, potatoes and other field crops..	3,400

Total area fertilized.....	3,710
Meadows.....	4,750
Parks and trees.....	1,000
Buildings, roads, canals, moors.....	3,140

Total12,600

Considering the fertilized area of 3,710 square miles, or 2,374,400 acres, the commercial fertilizer used averages more than 1,270 pounds per acre, which is fully three or four times as much as the average—where employed at all—in the United States. When to this is added the considerable amount of home manures used, it is not difficult to understand the high agricultural productiveness of this little country.—U. S. Commerce Report.

PUBLICATION RECEIVED.

The Annual Report of the Public Parks Board of Winnipeg, Canada, is an attractive volume of 98 pages with several full page illustrations. The secretary's report shows receipts of $173,489.27, and expenditures $169,377.04. The detailed report of the superintendent, G. Champion, shows that Winnipeg's parks are well cared for horticulturally.

Dear Sir:—Enclosed please find check for $5.00 in payment for HORTICULTURE till April, 1920.

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS.

Eight new students have enrolled in the course given in Floriculture. One of the new members is doing graduate work in Floriculture and the others have registered for the regular undergraduate work. This makes a total of twenty-three floricultural students of which eight are seniors, two juniors, four sophomores, eight freshmen, and one a graduate student.

The courses given during the semester are as follows:

Greenhouse Construction, with an enrollment of 31.
Commercial Crops, with an enrollment of 5
Amateur Floriculture, " " " " 43
Garden Flowers, " " " " 31

Several changes were made in the staff this year. W. K. Palmer of Berwyn, Ill., has been appointed to succeed Mr. Hutchinson, who now has charge of a 350 acre farm recently acquired by the Department of Horticulture for nursery experiments. Mr. Palmer graduated with the class of 1913 when he received the degree of B. S. in Floriculture. Immediately after graduation he secured employment with F. Dorner & Sons Company of Lafayette, Ind., where he gained considerable knowledge of the work as carried on by them. From Lafayette Mr. Palmer went to Morton Grove, Ill., to work for Poehlmann Bros. From here he went to Fleischman of Chicago, where he received much experience in retail work. Besides having charge of the greenhouses, Mr. Palmer also has charge of the course in commercial crops.

E. G. Lauterbach of Bushnell, Illinois, has been appointed to succeed C. C. Rees as Assistant to Mr. Peltier in Plant Pathology.

F. L. Washburn, of Bloomington, visited the experimental greenhouses on Wednesday of last week.

CHICAGO.

Walter M. Rupp of J. C. Moninger Co., is receiving the congratulations of his many friends. The bride was Miss Dorothy M. Ashley.

Wm. Homberg, long connected with the Chicago trade and lately with J. A. Budlong, is now starting in the wholesale business for himself at 183 N. Wabash avenue.

At a meeting of the directors of the Grand Floral Festival to be held here in November, Guy French was appointed manager. Joe Biever will be assistant manager, which position he has acceptably filled on many former occasions. Two large silver cups are now displayed in the office of E. C. Ameling, which are to be awarded at the festival. They are given, one by W. J. Keimel, president of the Chicago Florists' Club and the other by the Chicago Florists' Club.

Allie Zech is receiving some fine late asters from Petosky, Michigan. They arrive in splendid condition, packed without bunching, after the manner of packing roses or chrysanthemums, one hundred in a box, such as is used by retailers. They were sold as soon as received and except for re-shipping were not taken from the boxes. This way of handling asters pays the shipper well for the extra time. Good flowers packed this way easily receive double the price that the bunched ones bring.

As usual the greenhouses have been filled all summer with young Boston ferns, and now that they must give way to make room for other stock, the market is flooded with them. The department stores are coming to the rescue of the growers, if not to the retailer, and large sales are taking place at sensational prices. There is the usual call for blooming plants and the usual dearth of these at this season. Small cyclamens are coming into bloom and eagerly bought up despite their size. These, with Primula obconica, cover the field at this time but the early pot chrysanthemums will be here in limited quantities in a short time.

The parks are rapidly getting ready for their fall chrysanthemum exhibits. These affairs grow in popularity each year and the attendance is a great encouragement to the management. At Garfield Park Supt. Aug. Koch, says another month will see the show in full swing. The shrubbery and bedding stock have both suffered from the rain this summer, particularly the latter. Geraniums reached a height of 30 inches, covered with foliage and until the few warm days near the close of the season were almost without blooms. The new venture of the West Side Park Board in placing half acre plots of land devoted to vegetables in Humboldt, Garfield and Douglas parks is regarded as satisfactory, especially in Douglas where both adults and pupils of the upper grades and of the High School were regular visitors. The plots were to show how different vegetables should be grown and in what succession.

NEW YORK.

The Florists' Club meeting on Monday evening, October 11, will be devoted especially to the chrysanthemum.

H. H. Burns, son of A. S. Burns, of Elmhurst, has opened a retail flower store at Madison avenue and 52nd street.

Myer Othile has acquired the store at 49 West 28th street, for his new wholesale venture and will open up shortly.

The Manda Floral Co., will have their first annual orchid show at 191 Valley Road, West Orange, N. J., on October 6 to 12 inclusive, from 8 A. M. to 5 P. M. daily.

The First Preliminary Schedule of the "International" Flower Show under the auspices of the Horticultural Society of New York and the N. Y. Florists' Club has been sent out. The show will be held at the Grand Central Palace, New York City, April 5 to 12, 1916. The prizes offered are very liberal, on a par with the prizes at previous spring shows under the same auspices. Complete schedule will be issued later. For additional schedules or information apply to John Young, Secretary, 53 West 28th street, New York City.

The first of a series of monthly flower shows and lectures on the subject of the cultivation of flowers will be held at the Country Life Permanent Exposition, Grand Central Terminal Building, on November 1 and 2.

The first show will consist of a chrysanthemum exhibit. Charles H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., will deliver a lecture on the first day on the "Cultivation of Hardy Chrysanthemums."

Full particulars of the flower show and schedule may be obtained by applying to Robert H. Sexton, care Country Life Permanent Exposition, Grand Central Terminal Building, New York, N. Y.

Suitable prizes will be offered to private and amateur gardeners in competition and trade exhibits will be invited but not for competition. An invitation is extended to all garden lovers to attend the show and lecture, to which there will be no charge. The Country Life Permanent Exposition is an institution devoted to the promoting of country life and it believes that these monthly shows will prove both interesting and instructive.

WASHINGTON.

Richard Vincent, Jr., lectured on the glories of the western trip incident to his attendance at the annual convention of the S. A. F. and O. H., before the Florists' Club at its October meeting. Mr. Vincent compared the retail stores of San Francisco with those of Washington, telling the members of the club that they will have to hustle considerably or they will find themselves surpassed by their brothers of the west coast. He spoke of the wonderful growth of dahlias, asters and sweet peas and of the great farms and ranches which he visited. William F. Gude also spoke of the beauties of the trip, and of the many entertainments provided for his party at the stops made en route. His experiences over the border line in Mexico and the Grand Canyon of Arizona were most interesting.

Following the business meeting there was an informal discussion on general trade and the condition of stock. Many complaints were heard of the poor quality at present in many lines. This, the florists stated, was due to the many and rapid changes of temperature. The members seemed agreed that the prospects for an increased fall and winter business were good. The growers severally reported that their houses were coming along in fine shape, giving promise of cuttings of exceptionally good stock at an early date.

SAN FRANCISCO.

A special feature at the next meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society will be a lantern slide lecture on "Wood Decay of Ornamental Plants" to be delivered by Prof. W. T. Horne of the University of California.

Jackson Dawson, of the Arnold Arboretum, celebrated his 74th birthday anniversary on October 5.

William Mix, well-known among the plant and flower fraternity of Boston, mourns the death of his father, which occurred at his home in Cambridge, on Monday, October 5. A handsome wreath of white chrysanthemums was sent by the Flower Exchange to the funeral on Thursday.

Obituary

Matthew Macnair.

Matthew Macnair of Providence, R. I., one of the city's leading and oldest florists, died very suddenly Sept. 29. Mr. Macnair had just left his store and was walking down the street with his son, Charles, when he suddenly collapsed and would have fallen headlong to the concrete walk had it not been for the protecting arm of his son. By an unusual coincidence, the funeral was held Saturday from the church in front of which Mr. Macnair died and the service was at 2.30, the same time that he was fatally stricken three days before. There was a large attendance of relatives, friends and former business associates present and many flowers were sent.

Mr. Macnair was widely known as a florist, having been in the business in this city for more than a quarter of a century. He was the founder and proprietor of the two stores that bore his name, one at 322 Weybosset and another at 2 Broad street. He was born in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1845, and came to New York in 1870. About 25 years ago he started in the flower business in Providence with a store on Westminster street, removing three years later to Weybosset street. This venture was a success and in 1900 he opened a second store on Broad street. He was a firm believer in window advertising and his show windows were said to be the most attractive in the city.

Of a cheerful disposition, Mr. Macnair made many friends in and out of his professional calling. He was a great lover of music and was well-known for his Scotch songs. He was a member of the Arion Club of Providence, and frequently referred with happy recollections to his associations with Beecher's Choir of Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Macnair had traveled extensively in Europe. He leaves a widow, two sons, Charles and Thomas; also five brothers and two sisters. S. A. G.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON A lively revival in flower trading is in progress here. Prices have taken on a "war baby" smile and the man who has anything to sell is happy to the limit. Unluckily for him, however, he hasn't very much to offer. Carnations have doubled in value since a week ago. Roses have taken a similar spurt. Chrysanthemums have not yet become plentiful enough to interfere and there will be no trouble until they do. The first violets have already appeared. The tables in the wholesale marts are bare, these days—quite an agreeable change for all, except the fellow who thrives on the surplus when there is any.

BUFFALO Heavy rain storms and frosty nights have ruined most all of the outdoor stock and there is at this time very little coming in, which has had a tendency to throw the demand toward carnations which are only coming in normal supply, the greater part being very short. Roses have been in fair quality and quantity and these too have moved more freely and at fair prices. Beauties have better sales also and lilies clean up well. Chrysanthemum sales are good. The market has improved wonderfully in the last week and business is still on the upward course.

CHICAGO October opens with a fair demand for flowers. Society events are taking place earlier than in former seasons and outdoor flowers are less in evidence than is frequently the case in the fall. The dearth of flowers in the surrounding country stimulates shipping trade and together the daily cut is used up. The supply is not large but compares well with that of average years. Carnations are coming in large quantities now but are still considered scarce. American Beauties from some of the growers are showing plenty of black spot, owing probably to the dark, damp days. An occasional bunch of violets reminds one that the season for that flower will soon be here. Some very good snapdragons are to be had. Roses of all kinds are coming and the quality is good but the best grades are not more than sufficient for regular trade. Of the smaller ones the supply is better. Some short-stemmed asters with rather large flowers are still coming and are sure to sell at sight. Chrysanthemums are still confined mostly to white and yellow, but a few pink are seen. A clear yellow known here as Yellow Frost, similar in size and form to October Frost, is taking well this week.

CINCINNATI With the end of the gladiolus and aster season the market shortened up very considerably and now there is just about enough stock to take care of the demand. The call for stock both locally and from out of town is very good. Prices are somewhat better than they were up to the end of last week. The rose cut is large and includes many excellent blooms. Carnations are in a fair supply and move nicely. Longiflorum lilies are not very plentiful. The cut of rubrums is ample. Dahlia receipts are some of the best we have ever had.

DAHLIAS

Nothing more showy nor better value than Dahlias, with all their brilliant colorings and varieties.

With 24 hours notice, orders can be packed in original boxes at the Dahlia farms, thus insuring the blooms reaching our customers in perfect condition. Try a sample shipment. Special inducements on regular orders.

Early chrysanthemums are now coming in regularly.

NEW YORK It is very refreshing, as it is decidedly unusual, to be able to record that flowers are really scarce in the New York market. The consequence of this rare situation is a stiff advance in values, from the bargain counter plane up to a reasonable and proper standard. The rose is the leading item at present, the small blooms from young plants lacking size and stem, as yet, but being very acceptable in the prevalent stringency. Lily of the valley is in very scant supply and is selling at a higher price than it has at any time in recent years. The probability is that we shall have a similar story to tell about lily of the valley more than once during the coming winter. Cattleyas are plentiful but selling better than of late. Carnations, of course, feel the impulse of the refreshing activity and have doubled in price. Even dahlias are selling well at present writing.

The improvement PHILADELPHIA noted in our last report has continued, the upward tendency still prevailing with highly gratifying speed—and at this writing everybody looks more cheerful. The gloomy and worried countenances that have greeted your observer for many months are replaced by glad some Polly Anna smiles. Long may this encouraging state of affairs continue. The rose market is in especially good shape. American Beauties are fine and Russells were never better for so early. Some of the latter brought as high as $2.00 per doz. (almost special Beauty price), which tells the tale as to their quality in few words. Jonkheer Mock is also in fine form; so is Ophelia and Hadley. Prices on carnations have stiffened up quite a little. Their big rival, the aster, is now out of the race. Besides that, there is improvement in the quality, and nothing in the shape of an oversupply. Dahlias continue a strong feature and large quantities of PANSIES. Fine stock, separate colors. Surplus $2.00 per 1000. CLARK-FLORIST, 124 Washington Ave., Scranton, Pa.

PANSIES—The Big Giant Flowering Kind—$3.00 per 1,000; $25.00 for 10,000. If I could only show the nice plants, hundred of testimonials and repeat orders, I would be flooded with new business. Cash. JAMES MOSS, Wholesale Grower, Johnsville, Pa.

PANSY PARK PERFECTION is the most thoroughbred strain of Giant Show and Fancy Pansies, the flowers of largest size and most perfect form. I have made growing of pansy seeds and plants a specialty for over 40 years, and it is the result of many years of breeding and selection. It also contains every variety introduced by foreign growers to date. Some of the reports: "The pansy plants all look like good, healthy, stocky plants, and we feel will come up to all expectations."—Henry J. Haas & Son, Newport, R. I. "I would like to get 4000 or 5000 of your pansy plants. I saw a house of pansies from your stock last winter and they were the finest I ever saw."—Harry W. Stewart, Rhinebeck, N. Y. An immense stock of fine field-grown plants from seed sown in August in sandy soil, thinly, broadcast, so that the plants grow short and stocky, with extra good roots. Over 75 varieties mixed, the reds, bronzes and best fancy sorts in large proportion. 1000, $3.00; 500, $1.75; 5000, $14.00; 10,000, $27.00. Delivery by express in good condition guaranteed. Cash. MAGIC

Manures for all Greenhouse Soils
Manufactured Exclusively for the Trade by the
CHICAGO FEED & FERTILIZER CO.
Union Stock Yards, CHICAGO, ILL.

A MODERN BUILT HOUSE.

Every grower who handles bulbs in quantity knows the trouble and expense of starting the bulbs and getting them ready for forcing. The methods of potting up the bulbs and placing in cold frames, covered with soil or litter or stable manure, which is the general practice in northern states, is usually very satisfactory in its results, but is very expensive and requires much labor only to be followed by more expense for labor in bringing them in, especially in cold weather when they often have to be dug out of snow and ice. Those who force bulbs in large quantities have long felt the want of a better way of handling them so as to reduce expense and labor of winter handling.

About three years ago, Frank Oesch-slin, of Chicago, who forces about 300,000 tulips, hyacinths and daffodils in pots and pans for wholesaling and none for cut flowers, began experimenting with bulb houses. Since then he has had so many letters of inquiry from all over the country as to his method of construction, that he has kindly consented to give a detailed description of his bulb house, which, as it now stands, is giving perfect satisfaction. The accompanying cut is made from a flash light of the interior of the house, which measures 20x115 feet on the inside and is 8½ feet high, one half being underground. A house of this size will accommodate about a quarter million bulbs in pots and pans. The side walls are made of solid concrete, twelve inches thick. The floor is well drained, having sewer connection, with cement walks and six or eight inches of sand over clay bottom. One half of the roof is formed by a cottage, the balance made of re-inforced concrete, supported by steel beams, making a very permanent structure. Ventilation is provided for by means of four-inch pipes running through the side walls near the top and also by means of small doors in the walls. The house is fitted with pecky cypress movable shelves, four feet wide on each side and eight feet wide in the center, resting upon galvanized iron pipes that are joined to iron posts by means of split T's. The posts are about four feet apart and the cross-pipes are about ten inches apart, giving eight shelves. The house is equipped with a small hot-water boiler, but it has never been used as sufficient heat is maintained by small gasoline stoves and these were used only in severe weather. The bulbs are planted in pots and pans, usually in October, and after being thoroughly watered are placed at once upon the shelves and root growth starts immediately. The temperature is kept as low as possible during the fall and just about freezing during the winter. Watering is done as required, usually three or four times during the season. The house is fitted with electric lights for working, otherwise is kept perfectly dark. Root action is excellent and the bulbs are in the best of condition for forcing. This house has been used for two years and proved successful.

NEWS NOTES.

Ludington, Mich.—Two greenhouses, with their tools and stock, owned by E. L. Brillhart, a bankrupt, and valued at $8,000, were sold to Martin Lunde for $1,000 by court order.

Bloomfield, N. J. — When you say Bloomfield you naturally think of Peter Hauck, who is one of those far-sighted florists who cannot be prevented from making money. Just now his place, recently enlarged by the purchase of the Brozat greenhouse property adjoining, is largely in chrysanthemums and tomatoes. The chrysanthemums are very promising and among them is a yellow sport from Timothy Eaton which is practically a Chadwick flower on an Eaton plant. It stands for late propagation and can be planted very close. It is to be introduced later on. After the chrysanthemums, geraniums, in which Mr. Hauck is a large operator, will fill the houses—100,000 or more plants for spring sales.

Mr. Hauck grows only one tomato, an English variety known as Early Dumpleton. The first fruit is being picked now and the heavy part of the six tons expected will come in December when tomatoes are worth big money. We counted five tiers of blossoms on plants less than two feet tall which is a pretty good showing for Early Dumpleton.

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

MASSACHUSETTS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE NOTES.

A greenhouse, 24x33 feet, has just been completed for the agronomy department. It is the first greenhouse that the agronomy department has had the use of. In it students will be able to carry on experiments with soils, fertilizers, hays and grains, etc. The house is to be heated from the college power plant. The construction was in charge of Hitchings & Co.

A Plymouth man has recently invented a sure cure for all diseases of fruit trees. The name of this medicine is "Dextrogermiform." The inventor is demonstrating on the young Clark orchard at the college. The experiment is creating considerable interest among fruit growers.

The Heating Problem Solved

Judging strictly according to mechanical merits, it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel, and less attention than any other boilers on the market. The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface. Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—

Smooth, perfect finished castings. Push nipple connections.

Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals.

Deep ash pits, making the removal of ashes a slight task.

Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean.

Grates that are made for hard usage and long service.

And above all, they are Fuel Saving, Not Fuel Wasting.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50% in coal.

PUT YOUR HEATING PROBLEMS UP TO US.

Some Ready Helps To Your Heating Problem

RIGHT now is the time when any delays in getting just the right thing for the right place in connection with your heating installation or repairs is a mighty serious thing to you.

Its the time when our Handy Hand Book is invaluable, as in it you can find every thing in the line of fittings you might need, from the simplest to the most complicated connection.

Any fittings you buy of us, you know are not only made the very best they can be made; but they are absolutely practical. Our half a century's experience is back of them; and our guarantee backs up that backing.

When, as in the case of our automatic Headers, for example, you can make the one fitting do the work of several; you cut down both on cost of the fittings and the cost of the labor. But that isn't all, your coils are automatically relieved of all air pressure. The economy of your heating is increased.

Take the matter of pipe supports—we have some one for every place and purpose, whether it be a single hook for clamping to a pipe column; spool bearers for steam; adjustable cradles for swinging the pipes under the benches; or a special eight (8) hook fitting, for attaching to flat iron side posts—we have them all.

Of course as a grower, we will gladly give you the very lowest discount price on all fittings as well as as on a Burnham Boiler.

We can make shipments these days, in regular jig time.

Take down your Handy Hand Book and send along your order.

Hook for attaching to flat iron post. Also come for screwing to wooden posts. Made in six (6) sizes to carry from one to six (6) pipes.

Spool bearers for clamping to pipe columns. Come in either single or double sided to carry from one to fourteen (14) pipes. Also made for flat iron posts.

J. E. Koppleman's Strong Endorsement of Lord & Burnham's Iron Frame Houses

MR. KOPPLEMAN'S store is in Providence, R. I.

One range of his houses is "out on the farm."

The other is at Riverside.

At both places he has tried out several different constructions furnished by as many different concerns.

This places him in a position to make strong comparisons.

For this reason his letter below, has unusual interest and importance. This is what he wrote us.

"The iron frame house at Riverside was completed last week.

I write to inform you that everything is satisfactory.

Want especially to thank you for your advice concerning the advantages of your iron frame house. From many points, I can now see this style house is much to be preferred.

When I have greenhouses to build, your business-like dealings and the superiority of your construction will be remembered.

In short, the house will be a 'Lord & Burnham.'"

DREER'S SPECIAL OFFER OF HARDY PHLOX

We are the most extensive growers of Perennial Phlox in the world and the plants we offer are all strong one-year-old field grown plants.

NOVELTIES AND RECENT INTRODUCTIONS

Astrild. Dense trusses of medium-sized flowers of a brilliant cochineal-carmine, shading deeper towards the center. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Europa. A white variety with very decided crimson-carmine eye; the individual flowers as well as the trusses are very large, entirely distinct.

Elizabeth Campbell. Very bright salmon-pink, with lighter shadings and dark crimson eye; an entirely new and much-wanted shade in Phlox. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

Frau Anton Buchner. The finest white variety yet introduced, having the largest truss and individual flower; of dwarf habit.

Geffon. A new color in Phloxes, a tender peach-blossom pink with bright rose eye. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Girdeur. Ground color soft mauve rose, heavily suffused and overlaid with a lively deep shade of cerise, giving the whole a beautiful mottled appearance. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Rheinlander. A beautiful salmon-pink with flowers and trusses of immense size, the color of the flower is intensified by a very decided eye of a deep claret-red.

Riverton Jewel. One of our own introductions which it gives us great pleasure to recommend, a lively shade of mauve-rose illuminated by a carmine-red eye, a splendid improvement on the popular variety Asia. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Thor. A most beautiful and lively shade of deep salmon-pink suffused and overlaid with a scarlet glow and a light almost white halo around its aniline-red eye. This variety will undoubtedly hold the same place among deep salmon colors that Elizabeth Campbell holds among the light salmon-pinks. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

W. C. Egan. One of the finest Phloxes yet introduced, and while the individual flowers according to the color-chart are of a delicate lilac color illuminated by a large bright solferino eye, the color effect as a whole is a delicate pleasing shade of soft pink.

Widar. A splendid improvement on Edmond Rostand; in color a light reddish-violet, with very large white centre, which intensifies the color.

HARDY PHLOX. MRS. JENKINS

GERANIUMS

It is the consensus of opinion that the supply of Geraniums is going to be somewhat short this coming season, on account of so many growers being short of stock plants. Our stock was never in better condition than it is now, so that we anticipate no difficulty whatever in filling orders, but at the same time we would suggest that the surest way is to let us book your order at an early date. New catalogue and price list for 1916 is ready for distribution. A request will bring it if accompanied by a business card.

We have a splendid lot of Geraniums in three inch pots ready for shipment, just right for the southern trade or winter blooming; $3.00 per 100, $25.00 per 1000.

country through the late F. C. Becker, of Cambridge, but that it was "first discovered" by Mr. Becker as stated in the leaflet is not correct. The truth is that this variety was well known to many Boston gardeners years previous to the time of its exploitation by Mr. Becker and was also recognized by certain New York plantsmen as a Boston form much to be preferred to the one which was being grown in and around New York. The matter is, of course, immaterial now so far as the trade is concerned but anything emanating from a scientific institution should be very exact and no doubt Mr. Benedict will be pleased to learn the facts in this case.

Two
bean diseases
The office of Information of the U. S. Department of Agriculture has sent out an instructive bulletin on the two prevalent bean diseases—anthracnose and bacterial blight—with directions as to the best methods of eradicating these troubles. In our seed trade notes this week will be found a summary of the instructions given out in the bulletin referred to. It will be noticed that home selection of seed is insisted upon and that no reference is made to the efforts being put forth by the growers for the seed trade to produce clean and disease resistant seed. We believe that the Department might derive great benefit and much valuable assistance in this and similar work by closer affiliation and intercourse with the practical men who are engaged commercially in seed growing than from our view point seems to be the case. No one can possibly have more forcible and cogent reason to maintain purity of product and freedom from taint of any kind than he whose business repute and prosperity is at stake.

high degree
Not in any season within the memory of "the oldest inhabitant" have the tulips, hyacinths and other Dutch bulbs been so handsome to the eye as they are this year in the stocks shown in the seed stores. Should their dormant and unseen good qualities hold up to the standard indicated by their external appearance we may expect to see some superb blooms in the displays at the spring shows of 1916. Exhibition quality needs only to be supplemented by exhibition skill and exhibition opportunity to effect a winning combination such as rarely comes. Whether the high quality of the material so lavishly spread out on the seed store counters and shelves at present is due to the diversion to the United States of goods which the European consumer formerly monopolized or is the result of an unusually favorable season for the Holland bulb growers, matters little so long as we have the goods at our command and it is to be hoped that full advantage will be taken of this unprecedented opportunity to impress upon the public the beauties of these spring garden flowers, by means of the flower shows, and that thus the demand for the bulbs may be greatly increased. We can think of no better means for developing and enlarging this department of the seedsmen's business.

About the Boston
fern
Ralph C. Benedict, in Brooklyn Botanic Garden leaflet No. 8, makes some statements regarding the "discovery" of the Boston fern which seem to us to be based on some misinformation. It is true that the now well-known arching form of Nephrolepis exaltata called Bostoniensis had its general distribution over the

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Treatment for Blackspot

Mr. Arthur Ruzicka.

Dear Sir—We have read your report on rose-growing as was published in the HORTICULTURE under date of August 28th.

We are at present troubled with black-spot and some of our benches of Ophelia roses are affected. We would appreciate very much to receive from you full information regarding the mixture Ammonical Copper Carbonate. We would also like to know how this drug is to be applied, as we have never before used this. Any other information regarding the treatment of black-spot will be greatly appreciated.

Trusting you will favor us with an early reply, we remain,
Yours very truly,

T. A. I. & SONS.

Regarding the use of copper carbonate as preventive for blackspot, to two ounces of pure copper carbonate add enough ammonia to thoroughly dissolve it. The mixture is then added to two gallons of water, well stirred, and applied at once. Glass jars should be used for dissolving the copper with the ammonia. Where a larger amount is necessary it can be mixed in a barrel, but we always mixed it in small quantities only, as it loses strength quite rapidly after mixing.

Further treatment for blackspot on Ophelia may be as follows: Keep the plants on the dry side for a while. This does not mean drying them out until they shrivel but let them get fairly dry before they are watered. Avoid syringing for a while as this will spread black-spot quicker than anything. Go over the plants carefully and pick off all leaves that are affected. This cannot be done if the plants are badly attacked but if the disease is taken in time it will be checked this way a great deal. After picking as many of the diseased leaves as can be safely taken apply the ammoniacal copper carbonate and keep the plants on the dry side. Give plenty of air, both night and day, and try to induce the plants to grow as much as possible. Never neglect to blow lime under them at night after watering, and if the weather is dark and rainy do this whether the plants are watered or not. If the benches do not dry out readily it may be that the soil is somewhat sour, and a top dressing of lime will be a great help towards drying the benches out. Use air-slacked lime, freshly slacked, and apply enough to nicely whiten the surface of the soil. This can be applied one day and the benches watered the next, or it can be allowed to lie for several days, after which it will have to be rubbed over to break up any caking that may have taken place. The copper carbonate can be applied two or three times a week if necessary. It will not cure the spot but will keep it from spreading by killing the spores that the mixture touches. When it will be safe to resume syringing, see that it is done quite early in the day so that all the plants will be dry before night comes. Also see that it is done quick and well, with good pressure, so that the whole house is not drenched from top to bottom, taking a long time to dry out. It will be well to blow a little lime around the house during the morning and afternoon of rainy or wet warm foggy days. This is done by walking backwards in the walks with the bellows, holding them up level with the shoulders and working them so that the dust will circulate freely through the house, at the same time not proving so irritating to the one who has to do the work. Through constant use of lime, and care in watering, we have never had a serious case of spot.

Watering

Be careful to see that the plants are not overwatered, more so the plants that have just finished a crop. These will be pretty well cut off and if they are kept too wet they will not break as strongly as they should. Keep plants like these on the dry side. Then again, plants that are covered with buds about ready to show color should never be allowed to become too dry as this would hurt the buds and they would likely be small and not well developed. If there are any poor plants among the others they will not take very much water, and therefore should be skipped when watering. To make sure this is done it is best to go around some time with a box of lime and scatter a little around each plant. Thus marked, they will be easier to avoid when applying water. Late planted roses should be kept on the dry side, so that they will make as much root as possible, but this does not mean that they should be dried out until the soil cracks. This would damage the present roots a good deal, not only tearing them where the soil cracks, but also killing a good many by the too dry a state of the soil. With cold frosty nights it will be necessary to use the fires more and the plants will dry out quicker, so they will take more watching. The soil often dries out in the bottom of the benches first, so when examining benches for watering it is best to reach down to the bottom. Be especially careful not to let a rapidly growing bench of Beauties get too dry as this would be apt to check their growth, and once they stop they will be hard to get going again. In using liquid manure make sure that the plants are wet enough before the liquid is applied. We generally water with clear water first and then apply enough liquid to go through the soil nicely, without running through too much. This takes a little longer but the work is well done and a good deal of manure is thus saved. We can water two houses with the liquid that would be needed to do one were it not for the clear water used before using the liquid manure.

THE FLORISTS' OPPORTUNITIES ON THE WESTERN COAST.

The holding of the convention in California this year has already proven a better policy than even its promoters dreamed of one year ago. All eyes in the horticultural world have been turned upon this great state, at a time when conditions in Europe are making it impossible to get plants from the districts which have formerly supplied us. C. W. Ward, of Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., is developing very extensive nurseries at Eureka, Calif., three hundred miles north of San Francisco, where climatic conditions seem to be favorable for growing azaleas, rhododendrons and other plants which we have depended upon Belgium to produce. Other growers have taken up the growing of palms in other parts of the state and already this seems to be an assured success when the same knowledge and care is given it that is required in Belgium. This alone may revolutionize a large and growing industry in the U. S. One of the things first noticed by an eastern florist is the lack of glass on the western coast. The plants require protection from heat rather than from cold and lath houses afford this better than glass-covered ones. These houses are of the same general shape as the regular greenhouses but are apt to be longer and higher. Some glass is needed, however, for the young stock when first lifted from the field. Going farther north from San Francisco more and more glass is used, till, in Washington, comparatively large ranges are seen and in and about Seattle the greenhouses remind one of those in Chicago and vicinity.

Going south from San Francisco, Los Angeles affords the most opportunities for commercial possibilities in horticulture. Here everything grows with so little attention, except a good water supply, that the eye is often shocked with the riot of colors. Some experiments are being tried out here which will prove in the near future the possibilities of producing in Southern California many of the things that we have always bought in Europe. All the way down to the Mexican border (which seemed like the end of civilization) the coast suggests possibilities which will justify the term "Golden West," and offer the reward of dollars to the men and women who will learn to understand and apply the principles that will make nature their ally in commercialized horticulture.

M. B. HANCOCK.

South Orange, N. J.—W. A. Manda is gradually getting his grounds into good shape after the chaos resulting from the elevation of the tracks of the D. L. & W. railroad, but alterations will not be fully carried out before next spring. The new dahlias are a prime popular attraction with their great blooms as large as peonies and will so continue as long as frost stays away. Mr. Manda has diverted the water in a brook which traverses his grounds so as to form an island approached by rustic bridges, which will be devoted to exotic plants exclusively as a tropical summer garden. A very extensive rock garden will be constructed also, and a pumping outfit will be installed to take water from the brook for greenhouse use. The greenhouses have been repainted and renovated and two large Kroeschell boilers are being put in to take the place of a number of small heaters. One cannot but observe the sturdy health and vigor of the cattleyas here, all of which have passed the summer outside up to the present time with no protection other than some cheese cloth.

CLEVELAND FLOWER SHOW

At a meeting of the private growers of Cleveland, held at the Hollenden Hotel, Friday, October 8, the wrappings were taken from a huge package and the magnificent Corrigan cup, one of the chief trophies offered for the Cleveland Flower Show, November 10 to 14, was exposed for the first time here. It had just arrived from Tiffany, New York, the makers, and although there was a spirited rivalry among the Ohio growers for this prize even before seeing it, there now is a spirit of contest that will keep every private grower on tiptoe until the close of the show.

Among the many novel advertising plans being carried out by the publicity committee of The Cleveland Flower Show is the use of the popular "poster stamps." These small stickers are reproductions, in miniature, of the poster cards used by the show and thousands of them are being added to the collections of the school children.

It is the committee's aim to get the widest circulation possible of these stamps and a quantity will be sent to anyone, anywhere in the United States, upon request. The local growers and dealers connected with the show and all exhibitors will be provided with them for use upon their business correspondence between this time and the date of the show.

H. P. Knoble, general chairman, and Timothy Smith, of the admissions committee, will confer with Superintendent Frederick, of the Cleveland Public Schools, this week to arrange for free admission of the school children on mornings during the show, beginning the second day. There are about 200,000 children enrolled in Cleveland's schools and the committees hope to have each one take advantage of the educational features of the exhibition.

The private gardeners of Cleveland have become more enthusiastic than ever of the Cleveland show since the meeting held at The Hollenden last Friday. They were unanimous in voting the work of the premiums committee satisfactory. The premiums committee is composed of Herbert Bate, chairman, J. Curnow, of Akron, and Frank A. Friedley.

Permission has been granted the show committee to place bay trees along Euclid avenue from Public square to the Coliseum entrance, during the exposition. Each bay tree will support a small card directing the observer to the show. The publicity committee expect to make this the most attractive and novel scheme of street advertising that has been used in the city.

The entertainment committee is busy with the plans for the varied entertainment and arrangement of the business and semi-social program during show days. This committee, headed by G. W. Smith and his aids are, C. J. Graham, George Jacques, S. N. Penterost, F. C. Witthuhn. The rooms of The Cleveland Florist Club, Hollenden Hotel, will be the meeting place of the various organizations, as well as the scene of many social events.

In discussing the plans of his committee, Chairman Smith said: "We expect to be able to announce the complete program within a few days. Provision will be made for the meetings of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, which has its annual exhibition and convention in conjunction with our show for the fall exhibition and meeting of The American Rose Society and the other important events. The executive committee of the American Carnation Society will have a place on the program, as will the Florists Telegraph Delivery Association, which comes for an adjourned meeting and the adjourned meeting of The Gladiolus Society of Ohio.

"Entertainment fitting the bringing together of the members of these important organizations will be arranged. Without interfering with the business sessions or the exposition we will provide amusement for the leisure hours that we hope will make all visitors remember Cleveland kindly."

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

Philadelphia, March 25 to April 2.

Chairman George Asmus of the National Flower Show Committee has called a meeting of his committee to be held on Tuesday, October 19, at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia, at 10 A. M. At this meeting the schedule of the Rose, Carnation, Sweet Pea and Gladiolus Societies will be completed, and much other business relating to the show transacted. On the day previous to the meeting members of the National Flower Show Committee will meet the chairmen and members of the different local committees to talk over details of the work of preparation for the show, and if any member of the trade has a suggestion to make either in regard to schedule or anything else bearing upon the conduct of the show, it would be well to communicate with the management in order that it receive proper consideration. As all know, the National Flower Show Committee is composed of members of the S. A. F. and O. H. located widely apart, thus being representative of different communities, consequently it is not possible to have frequent meetings, and this opportunity to bring anything before the committee at this meeting should not be neglected.

Preparations in general are well advanced, and a great deal has been accomplished. Space in the trade section of the show is in good demand, reservations aggregating in value $6,000 or more having even at this early date been made. It is expected that every foot of space available for trade exhibits will be sold a long time ahead of the show dates. The greenhouse builders, plantmen and others have made early selection of locations, and but a few of the choicer blocks of space are left.

The committee is now prepared to receive offers of special prizes from the trade, and others whose business brings them in touch with enterprises of this character. It need not be pointed out that the publicity to be derived from our special prize list is worthy of consideration by all; and again, there should be some feeling of pleasure to result from a helpful effort in anything which will advance horticultural interests. As the second preliminary schedule will go out shortly after the meeting of the National Flower Show Committee, donors of special prizes should communicate their wishes to the secretary without delay.

The all important business of selection of a design for the show poster has been taken up by Mr. Therkildson and his committee, and the result of their efforts will be presented at the forthcoming meeting. Some novel plans for publicity are expected to be evolved by this committee.

The plantings on the plots outside of Convention Hall this summer have, as Robert Craig says, furnished good subject matter for publicity for the show, and it is to be regretted that the approaching frosty season necessitates the withdrawal of the crotons, the beds of which have daily attracted thousands.

Looked at from every standpoint, the Fourth National Flower Show bids fair to more than warrant the slogan that it will be "The Greatest Horticultural Event of 1916," and then some more.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec.
53 W. 28th St., New York City.

CHICAGO GRAND FLORAL FESTIVAL.

The regular meeting of the executive committee of the Chicago Grand Floral Festival was held at the Hotel Morrison, October 7. Routine business connected with the exhibition to be held at the Coliseum November 9-14, occupied the attention of the committee the greater part of the afternoon, and reports from chairmen of the various sub-committees showed substantial progress. Manager French announced that a large number of special prizes have already been secured and others promised. Arrangements are being made for extensive exhibits from the various park systems and plans for Robert Brenton's novel, flower-dance feature are going well.

The name of Prof. H. B. Dorner, of the University of Illinois, has been added to the lecture program, his subject being "Garden Flowers," with an extensive exhibit of stereopticon slides, and E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., has promised a talk on garden roses.

Exhibitors in the non-competitive trade display will be given one trade ticket good the first day of the show for each square foot of space taken.

E. F. Winterson has been appointed chairman of the trade tickets committee.

M. BARKER,
Chairman Publicity Com.

The Thirteenth Annual Exhibition of the Northern Westchester County Horticultural and Agricultural Society will be held at Civic Hall, Mt. Kisco, N. Y., on October 29, 30 and 31. The schedule contains fifty-six classes, of which seven are open to private gardeners only. Copies may be obtained by applying to M. J. O'Brien, Secretary, Mt. Kisco, N. Y.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

The monthly meeting of this club on Monday evening, October 11, was well attended by a representative gathering of florists, gardeners, seedsmen and others from New York, New Jersey and other sections. The principal items of business as per the secretary's prospectus were the exhibition of chrysanthemums, payment of dues, S. A. F. and O. H. affiliation, Cleveland Flower Show and House Committee. Not the least among these attractions was the last named and ample justice was done by the members to the roast turkey, celery and approved accompaniments liberally distributed by Chairman Phil. Kessler and his loyal minions. There were committee reports, communications, etc., in ample supply, all of which in the harmonious atmosphere which prevailed received good natured approval. "The ayes have it" quoth the president as each was passed along. F. R. Pierson urged zealous activity on the part of the members in securing special premiums for the Spring Flower Show. F. L. Atkins for the Club and T. A. Havemeyer for the Horticultural Society, are the chairmen of the respective committees to receive these special premiums.

A. M. Henshaw told of the general arrangements in progress for the comfort of members proposing to go to the Cleveland Show and for the transportation of exhibits thereto.

The judges reported on the exhibits of the evening, as follows:

Carnations Laura Weber by Chas. Weber, Victory and Prosperity Sport by Rowehl & Granz, vote of thanks. Seedling Dahlia Sunshine by Mrs. Stout, Short Hills, N. J., highly commended. Collection of dahlias all types, by P. W. Popp, highly commended. Collection of dahlias by W. A. Manda, all highly commended, the following six being given special mention: Mrs. Minnie Burgess, red; Perfection, cream color, certificate of merit; No. 16, deep salmon, certificate of merit; Joseph Manda, red; Albert Manda, pale yellow striped pink; Veronica Manda, variegated. Chrysanthemum Wm. Rigby, a sport of Mrs. G. Drabble and vase of bedding varieties by C. H. Totty, vote of thanks with request to see Wm. Rigby again. Chrysanthemum Marigold (Early Frost X Golden Queen) from A. N. Pierson, vote of thanks. Chrysanthemum Frank Dinda, a pink seedling by Frank Dinda, scored 85 points, commercial scale.

The following resolution reported by Patrick O'Mara was adopted:

Resolved that the New York Florists' Club have heard with the deepest regret of the sudden illness and death of Samuel Thorne. That we take this opportunity of expressing our sympathy with the family of our deceased life member, friend, patron and colleague in their bereavement.

We desire further to express our sense of the great loss which the city and community, as well as horticulture, have sustained in his decease.

He was a shining example for those who survive him, noted for his resolute industry, uncompromising integrity, wise enterprise, high public spirit, sage counsel and helpful attitude towards those who sought his advice. He was a man deserving of all honors, a conspicuous success in his field of endeavor, an encouragement for all who would follow his example.

We cherish his memory and gratefully testify to his many acts of practical help in our efforts to advance horticulture in this city.

Resolved, that our Secretary be instructed to send a copy of this resolution to the family of the deceased and cause same to be published in the horticulture press.

WALTER F. SHERIDAN.

PACIFIC COAST HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The regular meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society held Saturday evening, October 2, was well attended and several interesting matters were taken up. The admission of several new members, some of national prominence, was a feature of the meeting. They included Wm. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, N. Y.; Patrick Welch, of Boston; Vincent Gorly, of St. Louis; Jas. Kirkman, of New York; Walter W. Coles, of Kokomo, Ind.; C. W. Ward, of Eureka, Cal.; Frank Sherrer, superintendent of parks of Los Angeles, Cal.; John Morley, park superintendent of San Diego, Cal.; A. C. Zvolanek, of Lompoc, Cal. The illustrated lecture on "Wood Decay of Ornamental Plants," presented by Prof. W. T. Horne of the Department of Plant Pathology of the University of California, was very well received. Members were urged to enter exhibits at once for the Grand National Show, October 21 to 26. They were invited to attend in a body the formal exercises to be held in the South Gardens in front of the Palace of Horticulture this Saturday afternoon in connection with Exposition Gardeners' Day at the Fair, at which time a handsome trophy will be presented to John McLaren on behalf of the people of San Francisco in recognition of his able services in the landscaping of the Exposition grounds. It was decided to observe Florists' Day at the Exposition on October 25. Among the evening's exhibits were three vases of dahlias by Frank Pelicano, which took 95 points, and one pot each of Ficus lutescens, Ficus utilis and Ficus pandurata by H. Plath, rated at 92 points.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

A meeting of the Board of Directors will be held at Cleveland, O., on Friday, November 12. The Cleveland Florists' Club rooms in the Hollenden Hotel will be placed at our disposal and the meeting will be called at 4.00 P. M. Any of our members who happen to be in Cleveland at that time are invited to be present.

JOS. H. HILL, Pres.

TEXAS NURSERYMEN'S CONVENTION.

The regular annual meeting of the Nurserymen's Association met in Waco, Sept. 28-29. All of the members of the association but ten and several nurserymen who are not members, were present. The meeting was one of the best that has been held by the nurserymen for several years. Some of the most important questions pertaining to the nursery business were brought before the convention and all were freely discussed. The association was welcomed to Waco by Mayor J. W. Riggins. Response to the welcome address was made by C. C. Mayhew, of Sherman.

The report of the secretary-treasurer, the president's annual address, reports of committees, appointment of committees and an address by J. H. Arbenz, of Sarita, on "The Nurserymen's Interest in a State Board of Horticulture," comprised the proceedings of the first session, Tuesday morning, September 28.

One of the most interesting and most important reports was made by the Legislative Committee. J. R. Mayhew, of Waxahachie, chairman of this committee, made an extensive report of the work this committee has been doing. The greater portion of his report dealt with the Oklahoma Inspection Law. He stated that the feeling between the nurserymen in Texas and the Texas nursery inspectors was much better now than at any time in the past. He, however, introduced the matter of a proposed uniform inspection bill and a committee was appointed to report on this proposed bill, making recommendations to the association. The committee recommended that the Texas Nurserymen's Association indorse the proposed bill, which was done. A telegram was sent to the president of the Oklahoma Nurserymen's Association, informing him of the action taken by the Texas nurserymen, requesting that the Oklahoma nurserymen also approve the bill and seek its adoption.

The Tuesday afternoon session was full of interesting discussions. A paper was read by J. B. Baker on "Notes on New or Little Known Ornamentals." After the session, the nurserymen were taken in automobiles for a drive over the city and a barbecue was served at the Fish Pond club house. The Wednesday morning session was taken up by two addresses, reports of committees and election of officers. The address of Mr. Ed. L. Ayres, Chief Inspector of Orchards and Nurseries, on "Crown Gall and Other Diseases," was much appreciated by the nurserymen. He had quite a lot of specimens with which he illustrated his lecture. J. R. Mayhew addressed the association on "How can the Texas Nurserymen's Association Best Work in Co-operation with the National Association." He reviewed the history of both the organizations and showed how important benefits could be obtained. A strong appeal for a greater membership in the Texas Nurserymen's Association was made.

The election of officers resulted as follows: Will B. Munson, Dennison, president; J. M. Ramsey, Austin, vice-president; J. S. Kerr, Sherman, secretary-treasurer.

A strong resolution of thanks was tendered the local nurserymen and the people of Waco for their friendly reception and excellent entertainment given the nurserymen while in that city.

PITTSBURGH FLORISTS' AND GARDENERS' CLUB.

A good attendance of the club was present for Dahlia Night, Tuesday, Oct. 5, in the Assembly Room of the Fort Pitt Hotel. R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons, White Marsh, Md., made a display of dahlias not so large as they have shown before the club in some years, but all the blooms of a high order of merit. One of our Pittsburgh commission houses reported as the best selling dahlias Marguerite Bouchon and Souvenir de Douzon. A vote of thanks was awarded Messrs. Vincent & Sons. Carl Becherer showed a large assortment of dahlias. Among the cactus varieties he finds Floradora the most profuse bloomer, followed by Country Girl. His display was strong in Collarettes, which made a fine showing, and he also exhibited an attractive crimson seedling named for W. C. Beckett, our Pittsburgh seedsman. Mr. Becherer's display was awarded a cultural certificate, and further, in view of his constant and meritorious displays before the club, the secretary was instructed to send a letter of appreciation to the superintendent of the Dixmont Hospital of Mr. Becherer's work. Wm. Thompson, gardener for W. P. Snyder, Sewickley, Pa., showed a good vase of Delice and a large lot of other dahlias, some of them seedlings, for which he was given a cultural certificate. M. Curran, gardener for Mrs. Jos. Horne, Sewickley, showed two vases of seedling dahlias, one vase of standard varieties, also chrysanthemums which have been blooming with him since the middle of August. He was awarded a cultural certificate. T. Tyler, gardener for C. D. Armstrong was awarded a certificate of merit for orchids. The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. showed a spray of Cattleya labiata of great merit, for which they were awarded a certificate of merit. G. Wesenauer, Sewickley, received a cultural certificate for sprayed fruit.

H. P. JOSLIN, Secretary.

WESTCHESTER AND FAIRFIELD HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

An interesting and enthusiastic meeting of this society was held on Friday evening, Oct. 8th, at Greenwich, Ct. The fall show will be held in the Armory at Stamford, Conn., Nov. 5-6. The schedule lists many very valuable prizes. The names of the winners in the competition for the J. H. Troy prizes for the best list of 25 garden roses will be announced at the next meeting.

There was an interesting display on the exhibition tables. Strawberries "Superb" from Thos. Ryan received honorable mention. Carl Hawkenson was highly commended for chrysanthemum Glory of the Pacific. Robert Grunnert showed September Morn roses, carnation Pink Sensation, and begonia Golden Shower, a meritorious exhibit that was highly commended. P. W. Popp was awarded a certificate of merit for dahlias in six types shown on long stems. Andrew Kennedy offers prizes for the best 25 carnations, assorted colors, shown at the next meeting to be held Nov. 12th.

P. W. POPP, Cor. Sec'y.

C. L. BROCK.

C. L. Brock has been appointed by President Welch as superintendent of the Convention Garden for Houston. The appointment this year is made a little in advance as conditions in the South for planting are such as to justify an early beginning. This will be of great advantage to the Convention Garden, giving more time to work up exhibits and give it more publicity.

Mr. Brock's appointment is considered a good one. He is superintendent of the parks of the city of Houston.

C. L. BROCK

where large tracks of land are now being laid out for park use. Mr. Brock has displayed great ability in handling this work.

About twenty acres have been outlined for the Convention Garden, having already natural lakes and natural drainage, which makes this an ideal place for the purpose. Mr. Brock is now getting busy on his plans and more than likely will enroll as assistant Mr. Kessler of St. Louis, who is working in conjunction with Mr. Brock in laying out the other parks. He is a man of national reputation for work of this kind.

Exhibitors who anticipate making a display at the Convention should write Mr. Brock or Vice-President R. C. Kerr immediately for full information.

OYSTER BAY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The autumn show of the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society was held at Fireman's Hall, Oyster Bay, N. Y., on Oct. 5th and 6th. There were many beautiful displays of flowers, also very fine

ALBANY FLORISTS' CLUB.

As usual, at the monthly meeting of this club, on the evening of Thursday, October 7, there was a full attendance and much interest. Five long-distance visitors were present—Patrick Welch of Boston, president of the S. A. F.; Wm. J. Stewart of Boston, editor of HORTICULTURE; J. J. Karins of Philadelphia, minister plenipotentiary to the florist trade from the House of Dreer; C. S. Ford of New York and Mr. Bochman, representing H. F. Michell Co. of Philadelphia. After the opening business these visitors were called upon for speeches. Mr. Welch was listened to with close attention as he told some of his experiences at the recent convention in San Francisco and dilated on the advantages to the florist industry of organization and country-wide society and club co-operation. Mr. Stewart endorsed Mr. Welch's views and suggested that the S. A. F. might yet find some means of enlisting the support and affiliation of the smaller florist clubs as it had now succeeded in doing with those of large membership.

Considerable interest was manifested in the coming Cleveland Flower Show and Messrs. Danker, Ed. Tracey and Henkes were appointed by the president as a special committee on the details for the trip of club members on that occasion.

The Albany Cut Flower Exchange at whose place the club holds its meetings, provided generous refreshments and a pleasant social hour was enjoyed after the meeting adjourned.

NASSAU COUNTY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The annual Dahlia show of this society was held in Pembroke Hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., Thursday, Oct. 7. Some very fine exhibits were staged and competition was very strong in almost every class. The class for table decoration was one of the main features of the show, there being eight entries in all. 1st prize was awarded to R. Jones, gard. for Percy Chubb; 2nd to J. Adler, gard. for H. Ladew; 3rd to H. Jones, gard. for Dr. Ayres. Among the principal winners in other classes were Mr. W. J. Matheson, gard. J. Kirby; Mrs. H. Darlington, gard. P.

NORTH SHORE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The North Shore Horticultural Society, Manchester, Mass., plans to break ground in the near future for the erection of a permanent building. The concrete structure will have a floor space of 60 by 80 feet, with several removable partitions for dividing the main floor into several small committee rooms.

William Till, head gardener on the estate of T. Jefferson Coolidge, is chairman of the building committee.

Eric H. Wetterlow, head gardener of Mrs. Leslie Leland's estate, is vice-president of the Horticultural Society and is active in furthering the plans. He states that Ernest Longfellow has submitted a sketch for the building and that ground will be broken before cold weather.

A new building has been made imperative by the sale of Lee's Hall, where the horticultural shows have been held. A few weeks ago an attempt was made to hold the show under a tent on the estate of Mrs. Robert C. Winthrop, but rain handicapped the arrangements. It was decided that the only sure course was to have a home for the society.

PERSONAL.

Edward Andrews, formerly of Toledo, has entered the employ of Chas. Seibert, florist, Defiance, O.

After an illness of over nine weeks with typhoid fever, Morris F. Byxbee, the Harriet street florist, Norwalk, Ct., is able to be out again.

Robert Lickman, formerly of Edgewood Farm, Great Barrington, Mass., has taken the position of head gardener for H. H. Knapp, East Islip, L. I., N. Y.

The MacNiff Horticultural Co., seedsmen and horticulturists, have opened a retail branch store at No. 182 Fulton street, between Church street and Broadway, New York.

Obituary

John E. Walters.

John E. Walters, who for many years was employed as a florist, died last week at the home of his brother-in-law, J. L. Christian, Highland Park, Richmond, Va. Death was caused by tuberculosis, from which he had been a sufferer for some time. Mr. Walters is survived by his mother and two sisters.

Oglesby Paul.

Following an operation, Oglesby Paul, a widely known botanist and prominent in social circles, died on Tuesday, October 5, in a Boston hospital, having been taken there for treatment from his summer home at Saunterstown, Rhode Island. He was taken ill late in August and the best medical skill was employed without result. Mr. Paul was a son of the late Captain Frank W. Paul and a nephew of the late James W. Paul, of Drexel & Co. An aunt was the late Mrs. William Waldorf Astor. Born September 28, 1877, he graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1899 and took a post-graduate course in horticulture and agriculture at Harvard. In 1902 he was made landscape gardener of Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, to which he devoted much of his time. Many rare plants were secured by him for Horticultural Hall while on trips to tropical countries, and his reputation as a horticulturist was national. His widow survives him. The body was brought to the Paul home at Villanova, Pa., for burial Saturday afternoon, October 9.

George G. Goldbach.

George G. Goldbach, a prominent retail florist of Lancaster, Pa., died at the St. Joseph's Hospital Tuesday morning, October 6. About ten days previous to his death he scratched a pimple on his arm, soon afterwards the limb began to swell and blood poisoning set in, which gradually grew worse until it resulted in his death.

Mr. Goldbach was born in Leicester and always resided there. He started in business in the eastern end of the city some seventeen years back, building up for himself a very fine range of glass and along with it a good retail trade, which increased so that a property was bought down town and rearranged and a conservatory and fine store room added and a fine business is being built up at this location, 141 N. Duke street.

He was 37 years old and leaves a wife and three children and a host of friends to mourn his death, for he was one of those rare characters who make a friend of everyone who meets and learns to know them. He was a member of the Lancaster County Florists' Club. The funeral was held in St. Anthony's Church, the florists attending in a body, and the floral tributes were unusually handsome, some being sent from out of town firms.

Mrs. Goldbach will continue the business and the Florists' Club stand ready as a man to give her any assistance she may need.

The Bean Crop.

Notwithstanding strenuous efforts on our part to get something in the nature of definite information regarding the various seed crops, we are not able at this date to gratify the very natural desire of our readers for such information. The leading seed growers tell us that it is too early to be able to furnish definite figures as to what their deliveries will be, and, in addition, crop conditions this year are more puzzling than usual. We have been informed that the bean crop is no better than previous estimates, and with reference to the wax-pod varieties, it is very nearly an even bet between from two to three-fold or absolute crop failure. It seems to be settled already that several varieties will be returned as crop failures, but there is hope that a number of other varieties may return from a two to three-fold yield as already stated. Most of the green-pod varieties are in much the same condition, though there is some confidence expressed that Refugees, Red Valentines and Black Valentines may return a five or six-fold yield. There is nothing new in the news affecting Lima beans, and while there may be some shortage in the Fordhook and Burpee's Improved, there will probably be sufficient of the other varieties to meet ordinary requirements.

Peas.

As the situation develops it begins to look as if peas will not prove as abundant a crop as appeared probable a month ago. As threshing and hand picking extends, the shrinkage becomes much larger than anticipated. This is largely due to rain after harvest, and before the peas were threshed in Wisconsin and Michigan, and, in the northwest, to a shortage of water, which affected the late varieties especially, although yields in general are below average. It is expected that the growers of peas and beans will be issuing their preliminary estimates in the very near future, which will furnish the nearest to definite information obtainable up to this time.

Onion Sets and Seed.

As the price of onions and onion sets very largely determines the demand for onion seed, it may be well to take note of the existing situation. Reports from all sources indicate a very short crop of onions, of very inferior quality as a whole. A very large dealer in onions reported recently that in more than a week's canvass of one of the leading onion growing counties of Ohio, he had secured but three carloads of onions suitable for winter storage. Nearly all the onions he saw were so soft that he did not believe they would carry beyond the holidays, if they lasted that long. While the condition of onion sets is not so bad as large onions, it is serious enough only generalize, although we assume to prevent dealers from naming spring prices, excepting at figures that seem unreasonably high to buyers. Taking the present conditions into careful consideration, the conclusion is unavoidable that both onions and onion sets will bring abnormally high prices next spring, and in consequence thereof a very heavy demand for onion seed.

We have recently seen some of the preliminary prices sent out by the wholesale houses on onion seed, and they are certainly radically higher than for several years past. Not an item was quoted below $1.25, and from that up to $2.50 in several hundred pound lots. We are assured by one or two wholesalers that these prices will look very reasonable sixty or ninety days hence. We are wondering what the retail price of onion seed will be this year, and especially what figures will be named by the leading catalog houses. No doubt this will be governed largely by their available stocks, but it would seem that conditions will justify rather strong prices.

Other Seed Crops.

We have stated in previous issues that practically all vine seeds will be short, but the extent of the shortage cannot be ascertained as yet. It seems, however, to be rather greater than expected some weeks ago.

A considerable shortage is reported in tomato seed, one or two leading growers claiming that their yield will not exceed 25 to 50 per cent of an average. This will mean a firming up in the price of tomato seed, but nothing that will be alarming.

The condition of corn has shown further improvement, and it is generally believed now, that barring early freezing weather, while the corn is still soft, that there should be a fair crop, although there is likely to be some shortage in two or three of the late varieties.

No reference has been made to seed corn of the sweet varieties, but we can say, in a general way, that there will be considerable of a crop of all the standard varieties, though prices because of quite a shortage will rule considerably higher than last year.

The radish seed crop of Michigan has proved a good one, but that of California has been rather light. We understand that the European crop is light, then again is the eternal question of whether we are going to get any of it, and if so, how much. This applies to practically all European seed crops. Even from neutral countries there will be some trouble experienced, as shipping facilities are much below normal and freight rates very much higher.

Wholesale Seedmen's League.

The meeting of the directors of the Wholesale Seedmen's League in New York last week is reported to have been a very interesting one, and the prices suggested on beans, vine seeds, biennials such as beets, mangels, carrots, turnips, etc., as well as onion seed and tomato seed, all confirm the predictions made in HORTICULTURE'S Seed Trade Notes from time to time during the past two months. While we have no details of the meeting, or the prices suggested, we learn that they are higher than we expected and that on beans, as a whole, they are probably the highest ever named by the wholesale trade of this country. We also understand that onion seed is considerably higher than any prices named for several years. We wish we could furnish detailed information, but this is not available and we can it will not be long before the trade in general will be advised of the prices suggested.

Those of our readers who thought our crop reports during August and September were rather pessimistic will probably acknowledge now that we knew of what we were speaking, and will appreciate the fact that HORTICULTURE'S crop news is generally reliable.

How to Select Seed Beans.

(From Agri. Dept. Bulletin.)

Get seed from your own crop if possible. If there are no clean pods in your own crop try to secure clean pods from a more fortunate neighbor.

Select in the pod, not after threshing.

Pick pods free from all spots. Spots on the pods mean that anthracnose or bacterial blight may be hidden in the seemingly clean bean.

Thresh selected pods separately.

Examine your threshed seed carefully and throw out all doubtful-looking beans, especially those that are spotted or shriveled.

Rotate. Don't replant old bean ground next year. Clean seed and rotation are the best crop insurance.

If you have to buy your seed, make sure that it has been selected by the grower from disease-free pods. Examine purchased seed. Do not plant if the threshed seed looks suspicious.

Look ahead. Insure a supply of clean seed for 1917 by selecting seed from clean pods and planting it on clean land in 1916.

The trade in general will be sorry to learn of the serious illness of Mr. W. Atlee Burpee, who is now receiving treatment at a sanitarium in Pennsylvania. We are glad to say that the latest information to hand indicates some improvement in Mr. Burpee's condition.

By mutual agreement all flower stores in Albany close promptly at 6 P. M. every day.

The Arkay Florists who started business about two years ago on a prominent corner have already built up a prosperous business. "Jimmie" is a clever buyer and they handle a nice quality of goods.

Messrs. Wemple and Sanders are at the helm in the Eyres greenhouses and a fine stock of decorative material is being brought into shape for the winter requirement of the Pearl street store. Mr. Eyres whose health was poor last year is in "the pink of condition" now.

The Rosery's slogan is, "Our special auto service insures timely delivery." This is displayed on a card bearing the picture of a handsome bridal bouquet. Ed. P. Tracey bought out the interest of his partner E. T. Meany on October 1 and will continue the business under the title of The Rosery as heretofore.

The Albany Cut Flower Exchange has added a much needed convenience in an automobile for quick delivery of flowers to the trade in Albany, Troy, Schenectady and adjacent neighborhood. Business has started up with a gratifying activity and there is every evidence that this wholesale flower establishment has secured the good will and support of the trade in this section—growers and buyers, both. Manager Tom Tracey is ever on the wire.

Fred Danker, at whose store on Maiden Lane there is always something doing reports business as improving and the outlook more promising than for a long time past. Mr. Danker has an expressive poster bearing a cluster of roses in colors and the inscription, "Aren't you a little neglectful for not sending her some flowers recently? You know how she loves them." We might mention that Mr. Danker does not pack this legend away to be brought out on one particular day, but displays it every day in the year, which is good business.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.

W. C. Eger, Schenectady's pioneer florist, is planning to give an exhibition in Turn Hall, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Nov. 11, 12 and 13.

Schenectady has a Florists' Club which holds meetings on the second Monday of each month. M. P. Champin is president this year. Several of the members anticipate going to the Cleveland Flower Show in company with the Albany Club party.

Julius Eger has partially rebuilt his store. Tiled windows with lattice work walls and ceiling, a cement floor, drained so that water may be freely thrown about and an ingenious and novel arrangement whereby the office and refrigerator can be pushed around on rollers and their position changed at will, are among the new features.

Amalgamation Banquet.

One of the pleasantest events in the history of the Chicago Florists' Club which covers twenty-eight years, was the banquet which again unites the two clubs. The kindest of feeling prevailed and after the dinner the speeches took on more or less of a personal nature and at the close all felt that a new era had begun for the club. Plates were reserved for over one hundred and the 7th of October will be a memorable one in the history of the Chicago Florists' Club.

Jack Frost.

The delight of the florist and the dread of those outside the trade took place October 7, when the tender outdoor flowers and vines received a nipping. The damage would not have been so great had it not been followed by two other nights and but little now remains of the fall flowers. The change is not so noticeable as in some other years, for the continued rains had gradually taken the life out of many plants, still the event means something to the florists and trade is bound to be benefited thereby.

One Way to Stimulate Trade.

The special efforts to stimulate trade in various parts of the city, so successfully carried out last year, are in full swing again now. The Northwest side had a big parade, street decorations, etc., last week and the Southwest side follows this week. In all these the florists have taken a part and from their reports it is evident they believe it pays to follow the example of merchants in other lines. Streets are hung with flags for miles and "Booster Week" is now a big factor in the revival of fall trade. The big night parade is the crowning feature.

Personal and Other Notes.

Miss M. Corneil is assistant book-keeper in the supply department at Poehlmann Bros.

Mrs. Frank Oechslein is home from the hospital and is recovering slowly from an operation on her face.

Mrs. John Ravatzos was in Chicago this week looking for new ideas in the florists' work. They have retail stores in Winnipeg and Minneapolis.

Herbert Stone, manager of The Atlas, decorated some of the automobiles for the parade on 26th St., October 13. There are several wide-awake florists on the Southwest.

When Mr. and Mrs. Chas. B. Stevens of Plymouth, Mass., reached Chicago on their way back from the Pacific Coast they found an old acquaintance in Tim. Waters, the first since leaving home, they said.

Charles McKeller has this week big yellow pumpkins, lined up on one counter, rather drolly contrasting with the orchid display case just opposite. Some florists are using them for flower baskets to make unusual window attractions.

Poehlmann Bros. are making a feature of the Hanasha grass which comes from Japan. A large vase with samples of the colors turned out in their coloring factory, shows up well, and this will make a new offering among the decorative materials this season.

Nick Monsen of 3640 Fullerton Ave. has not been able to positively locate the cause of the destruction of his 8 by 12½ ft. plate glass window last Thursday evening. Judging from the appearance of the glass, a window bomb had been placed on it, but why such a thing should be done in his case, is a mystery.

John Kruchten attributes the unusual experience of growers with Golden Glow chrysanthemums this season to the hot weather a month ago. With his stock the high temperature, coming with the rain, dampened and decayed the inside of the flowers. This week finishes the early chrysanthemums and a good cut of midseason blooms is assured. Wm. J. McKee is now in charge of the books at the Kruchten office.

L. C. Collins, proprietor of the Parkside Greenhouses who has been ill is again able to be about. Mrs. Collins, who is in charge of the store says business is beginning to pick up and a trip through the greenhouses shows a fine supply of chrysanthemums both in pots and for cut flowers and a large number of extra fine Boston ferns. Mr. and Mrs. Collins are pioneer florists of the far South side, and with their son have built up a fine business.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Mark Ebel, florist, of Sacramento, Cal., was a recent visitor at the exposition, accompanied by Mrs. Ebel.

Mrs. Ray Paul, proprietor of the Hanford Floral Co., Hanford, Cal., opened her new shop in the Ashby Theater Building on October 4.

A special showing of orchids in handsome basket arrangements attracted much attention in the window of Joseph's shop on Grant avenue the past week.

Three cars of garden seed raised on the islands above Stockton were received this week by the Rohnert Seed Co. in Hollister, Cal. The seed is raised for the company under contract and is cleaned and repacked by it before being placed on the market.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society has preparations well under way for a social meeting to be held on the evening of October 28. The program includes various entertainment features, and invitations have been extended to the members of the men's organization.

Frank Pelicano entertained several members of the local trade and other friends at his home in Ocean View last Sunday. After dinner the party spent the afternoon in his gardens, where all were much impressed by the splendid showing of dahlias. Over 8,000 blooms of Delice were out and about 12,000 blooms of Mrs. Kettlewell, besides quantities of Minnie Burple. A good many pictures were taken by the visitors. A long auto ride concluded the day's outing.

ST. LOUIS.

The Mullanphy Florist Co. will vacate their present location and move to the corner of Eighth and Locust streets, a block from the old place.

Secretary Fred C. Weber, of the Retail Florists' Association, says that they would hold an important meeting next Monday night at the Mission Inn Garden.

Frank Sanders, late of Sanders Nursery floral store, has accepted a position with the Grand Leader department store, having charge of the floral and bulb department.

The Strohmeyer Floral Co. in St. Louis has closed its doors and discontinued business. F. Strohmeyer, who was president of the firm, has accepted a position with the M. M. Ayers Floral Co.

The Schakleford Nursery Co., who has been supplying the local trade with outdoor flowers all season, has bought a big tract of land adjoining them, which will be planted for next season's cut.

The County Growers' Association held a meeting on October 6 at the Eleven Mile House. A committee was appointed to meet with the Florist Club Committee and assist them in entertaining the members of the American Carnation Society when they meet here in January.

Secretary Beneke, of the Florist Club, says the prospects are good for a delegation from here next month to visit the Cleveland Flower Show and perhaps a bowling club to take part in the tournament, of which Charlie Graham has charge. This week's club meeting will decide this question.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

William H. Tarbox the dahlia specialist of West Greenwich, made a novel exhibit at the Danbury, Conn., fair last week. Over 2000 asters were used in addition to dahlias, in an ingenious windmill form.

Miss Madge Tyree Banigan, a daughter of Mrs. Timothy Lucian O'Connor, was married Oct. 6, to Philip Fatio L'Engle of Atlanta, Ga., at the Church of the Transfiguration in Edgewood, R. I., followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents. The rooms were beautifully decorated with lilies, American Beauty roses, Southern smilax, pink snapdragon and yellow chrysanthemums. Garlands of laurel were used in the veranda decorations.

Last Wednesday evening while the family was at dinner, a porch thief entered the home of Mrs. O'Connor and was preparing to get away with the costly wedding presents that were on the second floor. A maid who had been detailed to watch the gifts, heard the intruder and called Mr. O'Connor. As they entered the room upstairs the thief slid out the window and made his escape. Nothing was taken.

A flower garden in a coal hod was one of the prize winners in the North End Garden Association competition. Five hundred residents of the North End have cultivated some kind of roof, window or backyard garden this past summer. Fifty of these were given prizes. A first prize goes to the small gardener who has raised his, or her, flowers under the most difficult conditions. Another prize goes to the most unique garden—this to a small Italian girl who hung her garden out of a tenement window in a coal hod.

Flower Market Reports

There are evidences to BOSTON show that the brief famine for flowers in this market is nearly over. Warm June-like weather is driving the chrysanthemums along rapidly and the carnations are also coming in better and more numerous. Roses are letting down a little in price although it is true that some of the largest growers are off crop for the time being. American Beauty has difficulty in maintaining top figures. The quality of roses generally is very good. A few violets are in but they are inferior yet. The first sweet peas of the new crop are coming in, grandiflora varieties only.

The past week proved to BUFFALO be one that seldom occurs at this time of the season. White roses are about equal to the demand, there being a cleanup on these daily and so on with everything along the line. Chrysanthemums have been coming in fair supply, also dahlias, cosmos, asters and everything sell out before the day is over. There has been a heavy demand for wedding flowers which used considerable carnations, roses, lily of the valley and lilies. Business is really brisk and it is hoped that same will continue.

A general scarcity of CHICAGO stock prevails. With the coming of the first frosts and the shortening up of practically all staples in cut flowers, Chicago florists have had a week of new experiences. The "25c. a dozen" signs disappeared from the sidewalks, and the stores that attract by sensational prices are not heard from now. The retailer who has a large trade in cheap funeral designs is hit the worst for he cannot raise materially on his prices without offending customers and there is really no cheap stock to be had. Asters are gone, chrysanthemums just coming and not enough carnations to bring the price within the design limit. The counters look very empty and only some bright sunshine can bring along the flowers. The early chrysanthemums are about over. Those who lost out on their Golden Glow will soon have the midseason varieties to offer. So far the crop is backward but with favorable weather there will be no lack of the big favorites later. A good supply of all kinds of green, including southern smilax, helps out.

The short supply of NEW YORK flowers which at the present time exists in all sections of the country has had a most exhilarating effect on the wholesale district here. The hard times of the recent summer season are all apparently forgotten and every denizen of the wholesale establishment seems charged with some of the ginger of the "good old times." The loquacious buyers who have had things all their own way ever since last spring are discomfited, as they realize that arguments, pleadings and expostulations will avail them nothing while present conditions prevail, and they are only too glad to crowd around the crates of dahlias, once dispised, but now a centre of attraction as soon as received. We might here mention that specimen dahlia blooms cut with long stalks and properly packed and shipped by W. A. Manda to John Young have been selling for six and eight dollars a hundred. Chrysanthemums have already reached that stage of quality where they have their flowers hooded in tissue paper and are carried heads down with great care. Roses are better each day and carnations show a slow but steady improvement. Violets of exceptionally good quality for so early a date are now in evidence.

What they call the "wind-up" of the week—the Friday-Saturday sales—were especially good here, October 8 and 9, accentuating the upward tendency of prices which has been noticeable for some time back. Roses were scarce and went up fully ten per cent. Carnations were more plentiful and also went up fully thirty per cent. As a rule when supply increases prices go down, but that did not happen in this carnation situation this time. Senator Heacock is a great exponent of the law of supply and demand being infallible. Someone would better ask him to explain this. Dahlias are over, except in a few protected spots. The chrysanthemum is much more of a factor now. The finer varieties are arriving and show better class and finish than anything we have had so far and also gives us greater selection to choose from. Altogether it has been a very satisfactory week since last report, and the "stabbed-to-the-heart" buyer has to take a back seat for the minute.

Floriculture is going through the unsatisfactory period following the early frosts, when the outside flowers are damaged, if not absolutely destroyed, and those inside are lacking in quantity, if not quality. There is a general complaint of scarcity of stock, the supply scarcely paralleling the demand, although on the whole there is no marked advance in prices. The stock of carnations is anything but heavy, and chrysanthemums are coming in slowly and likewise, not opening readily. Apropos of this, the A. W. Smith Company has a contract to supply fifty thousand of the "baby" variety, yellow and white, for a Tag Day benefit to be held today in behalf of the Sunshine Babies' Home. At the time of writing, it looks a little doubtful if the babies will receive the benefit of the full fifty thousand.

While not quite so active as during September, when the city was full of tourists and many conventions were in progress, the demand for flowers continues on a satisfactory basis. As the supply is not excessive, prices are fairly well maintained, extra fine stock bringing top figures, in some instances. The shipping demand is increasing daily, which helps out to a considerable extent also. Chrysanthemums are the feature of the market, much variety being shown in the offerings with average quality a little above normal and the demand good. A large cut of Portola is beginning to arrive, and Wm. Turner, as well as several other new varieties are coming in quite plentifully to replace the earlier varieties going off crop. Violets are still too soft for shipping, except in a small way, but the local demand is pretty well supplied. Some nice America gladiolus continues to arrive, but it does not move so well as the more seasonable offerings. The lighter supply of dahlias finds a ready demand. The average quality of the roses is gradually getting better, and stocks clean up closely. Cyclamen plants are offered freely, and sell readily. The orchid situation has improved very noticeably the past week, several of the downtown shops making ample showings the last few days. The demand is good also, following the long scarcity.

The big frost cut out all outdoor stock and the undue shortage of indoor stock caught the local trade unawares at the end of the last week. The cold weather has toned up the stock, which is showing a great improvement in quality. Prices are advanced, some to almost double what they were early in the week. This was Festival Week and the retailers had a great deal more business than usual, and this week the shortage and higher prices inconvenienced them much. Fancy grades in roses, as well as ordinary stock, also chrysanthemums, carnations, lilies, violets, etc., are cleaning up satisfactorily.

Washington and the surrounding territory had the first real touch of frost last week. Flower and truck gardens in many places were about at an end and the frost completed the work, relieving the market places of quantities of outdoor stock which have been competing with the products of the greenhouses. Local conditions have shown a decided improvement and business is brisk. Local stock is fast coming into form and will be in fine shape by the end of next week. The first of the single violets are in. American Beauty and all the Killarney roses are very good. Ophelia, Radiance, Mock, Taft and Ward are in good demand. There has been an exceptionally heavy call for the lily of the valley and not enough to go around. Daily shipments of lily of the valley have decreased until now the volume is half of what it was at this time last year. Carnations are not yet in their best shape, but the demand for them has been so heavy that even the very poorest clean up. Lilies also have a good call. Cattleya labiata are not in so great a supply as they were and the price has stiffened somewhat. Chrysanthemums can now be had in pink as well as in yellow and white, although the two latter dominate the market.

BOSTON FLORISTS' BOWLING LEAGUE.

The Boston Bowling League is proving a big success and much interest is manifested in the Thursday evening meets. Scores for Thursday, October 9, were as follows:

Carbone, 1250, vs. Florists' Exchange, 1168
Galvin, 1221, vs. Zinn, 1178
Pansies, 1222, vs. Wax, 1166
Cooperative Market, 1190, vs. Robinson, 1175

The standing up to date is as follows:

	W.	L.
Carbone	4	0
Galvin	4	0
Coop. Market	3	1
Pansies	3	1
Robinson	1	3
Wax	1	3
Flor. Exch.	0	4
Zinn	0	4

It having been found that Wax would be unable to play a full team, McAlpine and McDonald have taken their place and will succeed to the score made by Wax up to present time. Visitors will be welcome at the Boston alleys on any Thursday night.

West Orange, N. J. — The Manda Floral Co. (Joseph Manda) had a public exhibition of orchids last week which attracted a throng of visitors. Cattleya labiata made a fine display and under Mr. Manda's skillful manipulation, will so continue until Christmas. Cattleyas in general seem to find an ideal home here as do also the Vanda caerulea and Cypripedium Sanderi. Of the last named Mr. Manda has 1000 plants. Among the novelties here are a yellow Miltonia candida, Brasso-Cattleya Leemanii and an attractive sport from Swainsona with flowers of cattleya pink color, which has been named Mrs. Joseph Manda and will be introduced next season.

EFFECT OF THE WAR ON AMERICAN INDUSTRIES

The blow in the face received by American industries through conditions brought about by the European war has acted as a tonic, has forced the nation to create new branches and enlarge the scope of existing phases of manufacture, opened the way to utilize, on a vast scale, great natural resources of the United States, and induced manufacturers and merchants to expand their markets into foreign fields with prospects of permanent results, says the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, of the Department of Commerce, in a forecast of the effect of the war on the industrial future of the country.

American ingenuity has been applied with success to the making of articles previously imported, and among those who have shown conspicuous ability in meeting the situation, an important place is given to Thomas A. Edison, "American's scientific wizard," who has had a great part in the enterprise and initiative required to build, at a moment's notice, some of the new American manufactures required by the emergency.

A review of the chief industries ministering particularly to the temporary needs of the belligerents across the Atlantic shows that the final outcome will be a very material addition to the manufacturing plant of the United States. Part of this plant will be simply anticipatory of the normal growth of the country's mechanical equipment; part must lie idle in time of peace, but is a distinct asset in the national preparation for an adequate defence against attack; the remainder furnishes at once products needed in the healthy expansion of the chemical industry of the country.

Less conspicuous and spectacular, but of far greater permanent value, is the impulse given to the manufacture on American soil, with American raw materials, of a variety of articles for which we have hitherto been dependent upon foreign skill and enterprise. In a more or less uncomfortable way, we have suddenly been brought to recognize the un wisdom, the folly, of shipping vast amounts of the crude material of our farms, forests, and mines 3000 miles across the ocean, and buying it back in a manufactured form, at a vastly enhanced price. We have likewise come to recognize the absurdity of allowing many natural products of the tropics, of South America, of the Far East, to find their way to Europe, and of paying foreign intelligence and skill to transform them into articles of daily need in our lives.

American ingenuity, adaptation, inventive talent, scientific attainments, and general enterprise have promptly rallied to meet widespread demands, and establish on our own soil the permanent manufacture of a number of wares, some of minor, others of major importance. The return of peace will see them well rooted and able to withstand foreign competition.

The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce points to the course of events that followed the cutting off by war of the aniline imports from Germany and the supply of potash from the same source, with the resulting tremendous impulse given to the expansion of domestic manufacture. It also calls attention to the fact that, side by side with the increased production of artificial colors, has come the realization by dyers of textiles that the possibilities of the natural dyestuffs have been sadly neglected during the past few decades.

The facility and exactness with which the coal tar colors can be employed, the endless diversity of tints and shades readily secured by their aid, have led the modern generation of dyers to disregard, in great measure, those time-honored vegetable dyes, for centuries the only available source of color, which still give their charm and value to the choice products of Oriental looms. The present "dyestuff famine" has brought them again into prominence. Not so easily applied as the aniline dyes, they still have their especial merits. As a result the American works engaged in the preparation of extracts from the yellow oak of the Alleghenies, from the logwood of Jamaica, from the redwood of Brazil, from the cutch of India, are providing in enormous amounts the substitutes for the more brilliant, but often more fugitive, hues of the coal-tar products.

In the future, natural dyestuffs will occupy a more important position in the textile world, and a more ample recognition will be accorded to the highly perfected processes of recent years, ensuring their fastness upon the animal and vegetable fibres. At the same time, we can look forward with confidence to the evolution of a genuine American coal-tar color industry.

Of the domestic potash supply it is stated that large amounts of the compounds of this element are present in the vast beds of kelp floating on the waves of the Pacific, close to the western littoral of the country, that each year the waters of the Pacific coast are producing a crop in which potash salts possessing a normal value of more than $90,000,000 are readily available for use in agriculture and the arts. Now a dozen companies are engaged in the campaign. Not only the inexhaustible supplies in the waters of the Pacific, but also the remarkable deposits in the arid waste about Searles Lake in California, and the valuable alunite of Utah are being rapidly transformed into standard, commercial grades. A year or two, hence we may be able to fertilize our broad acres with American potash exclusively, while another year or two may see us free from dependence upon dyes of foreign make.

The Bureau advises the business men of the United States that the present time is opportune for them to study the Latin American markets, to get in touch with the people of the countries, and thus to open the way for extensive business operations. In other countries also there are unprecedented opportunities for the extension of foreign trade, and with the indications that we are entering upon a period as a creditor nation, we are in a position, as never before, to invest our capital in industries and developments in foreign countries.

It does not believe that the cost of production in the warring countries of Europe will be lowered as a result of the war, or that there will be danger from that source to the holding of new markets already gained. Experience has shown that it is apt to be higher instead of lower after the close of a war, with higher interest rates, higher wages, and higher prices in the warring countries. Surveying the whole field, it may justly be said that the world's conflict has been of unmeasured value to American industry as a whole.

HORTICULTURE, Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir: Some time ago we ordered a copy of Thomas' Book on Roses. We promised to send you postage as soon as we learned the amount. The book was so good that we forgot all about postage until today. Please forgive our lapse of memory.

We loaned it to a friend and he likes it so well we're afraid that we will have to buy another.

Respectfully,

New York.

MASSACHUSETTS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE NOTES.

The Stockbridge Club held its first meeting last Tuesday (Oct. 5).

The Extension Service of the M. A. C. announces that the correspondence courses in Agriculture and Home Economics will open Oct. 1. Registration is restricted to citizens or property holders of Massachusetts. Persons interested should address E. H. Forbush, Amherst, Mass.

The Floricultural classes are getting practice work in floral decoration this month in anticipation of the annual fall flower show. The senior classes are working with basket designs and several very good ones have been made. The junior classes are making a special study of table decorations.

President Kenyon L. Butterfield, has decided to remain president of this college. Last spring, it will be remembered, he was approached on the matter of taking up the presidency of Michigan State College, his alma mater. His action on the matter has been received joyfully by the students.

Professor Waugh is arranging for an exchange professorship with Professor R. R. Root of the University of Illinois. Nothing definite has been arranged yet, but it is not likely that the exchange will be for a month and will come sometime before the Christmas holidays.

"Orchard Success"

is a small pamphlet of big ideas that you should send for at once. It tells how thoroughly, quickly and cheaply you can rid your orchard of all scale, larvae, eggs and fungi. It describes 'Scalecide' the one great dormant spray, which mixed 1 to 15, is guaranteed to kill every scale it reaches. One barrel equals three barrels of lime sulphur and there is no spray more simple, safe or effective.

Our Free Service Department

is for your special benefit. Our free service department will give you a free estimate of the time and cost of your orchard treatment.

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:

$1.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

The unusual size of some game fish caught in irrigation ditches in Washington led to the belief that they had fattened themselves by eating alfalfa, and an investigation proved the theory correct.

Those millions and millions of wild asters that paint the New England fields blue, just now, are so highly esteemed in some parts of the country that single roots sell to flower lovers for 25 cents each.

Had that South Carolina "Burbank" who is on the way toward growing cotton of any shade desired developed his scheme a few years earlier, doubtless we should not now be hearing much complaint because of the shortage of German dyestuffs.

There will be some splash in the Atlantic ocean this week all caused by John Scally, city representative of M. Rice & Co., taking his daily dips in the cool wet. The ocean will be the goat for one whole week.

About 15 minutes ride from the State House, one may see a scene reminiscent of the old farming days of Boston. From early morn may be seen a herd of about 50 cows grazing on the side of Parker Hill, Roxbury, with a modern hospital on one side of the hill and an old church on the other for environment.

It has been a long time since I have met a woman so well posted on all kinds of flowers and vegetable growing as Mrs. C. S. Eastwood, who has charge of the Arlington school gardens, the Battery street school garden, and the roof garden at South Bay Union.

Among other hints she gave me was this one which flower lovers may well treasure away in their memory for use another planting time, it seems to me. She said that one of the most successful dahlia growers she had ever met told her that he had made a practice of securing all the fish heads he could from the fish market near his home; and when he planted his dahlia roots he had put a fish head under each bulb, and the fish constituted a fertilizer that he had found to be unsurpassed. It works well with other kinds of plants, too.

—Boston Post.

Carlisle, Pa.—On the so-called "Mc" Allister Farm," now conducted by Charles F. Pillsbury, two Williams and Gravenstein trees and a crab apple tree are in bloom. During a recent hail storm that swept this section of the county the Williams and Gravenstein apple trees were stripped of their fruit. Shortly afterward Mr. Pillsbury noticed that apple buds were opening up all over the trees, and today they are in full bloom again for the second time this season. The crab apple tree is a prolific bearer and has blossomed twice in one season in previous years.

A new species of dahlia, with a wide scarlet stripe down its white leaves, and a centre of yellow, grown by Julius Weiss, florist of the State Hospital, Trenton, was shown for the first time at the Michell outing at Andalusia. Weiss explained that it was called Helvetia, the "Swiss Dahlia," because its leaves looked like a Swiss flag; and he added that he had put himself to the trouble of discovering it for patriotic reasons.—Doylestown Intelligencer.

Hot Bed Sash in this country

All our sash are made of No. 1 Gulf Cypress, free from sap and knots.

The bars are beveled at bottom to admit extra light.

The cross-bar of iron is 3-16 x 3/4, also grooved into the bars and stiles and screwed on same.

All sash are extra jointed before leaving the factory. No planing of edges is necessary to make them fit perfectly when laid side by side.

We whitelead all joints before putting the sash together, making it last much longer.

We use special dowel pins, which are made so that they cannot come out.

All pins are well sunk to prevent rusting.

NOT ASSEMBLERS BUT MANUFACTURERS

THERE are a lot of greenhouse, as well as automobile builders, who are assemblers. They do not make their parts; they buy them here, there and everywhere; and put them together.

We are not assemblers; we are manufacturers.

With but a few minor exceptions, we make everything we sell. Consequently, it is made particularly for the particular purpose for which it is to be used.

Take for example our boilers; we don't buy them. We make them. We make them so they will be made the way a greenhouse boiler should be made. They are not the regular house-heating boilers, bought of some outside firm who cast our name on the door.

It's the same, even with a somewhat minor thing like our Tell-Tale Ventilating Apparatus.

We don't buy it of some recording machine company. It is made right in our own factory. A glance at the pointer will tell exactly how wide the ridge sash is opened.

And so we could go right through our house, and show you how practically everything in the construction and equipping of our houses is made by us, for our houses.

That's one of the big reasons why you can depend on depending on Hitchings. And remember, that we go anywhere for business, or to talk business.

- Elizabeth Campbell. Very bright salmon-pink, with lighter shadings and dark crimson eye; an entirely new and much-wanted shade in Phlox. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.
- Frau Anton Buchner. The finest white variety yet introduced, having the largest truss and individual flower; of dwarf habit.
- Gefion. A new color in Phloxes, a tender peach-blossom pink with bright rose eye. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

- Thor. A most beautiful and lively shade of deep salmon-pink suffused and overlaid with a scarlet glow and a light almost white halo around its aniline-red eye. This variety will undoubtedly hold the same place among deep salmon colors that Elizabeth Campbell holds among the light salmon-pinks. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.
- W. C. Egan. One of the finest Phloxes yet introduced, and while the individual flowers according to the color-chart are of a delicate lilac color illuminated by a large bright soiferino eye, the color effect as a whole is a delicate pleasing shade of soft pink.
- Widar. A splendid improvement on Edmond Rostand; in color a light reddish-violet, with very large white centre, which intensifies the color.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Adiantum

Adiantum cuneatum and Croweanum will need a temperature of at least 55 to grow well. This temperature will grow all intermediate ferns but for stove species about 65 degrees at night will be required. Examine the beds every day for dry spots, which should be watered. They will have to be kept moist at the roots, but not continually wet. The weather now will make it quite hard to ventilate right but always make it a point to give air whenever possible. When the growth becomes strong give them a mulch and weak liquid manure water once a week.

Azalea mollis

Do not fail to get a supply of these azaleas as they are very fine for forcing during late winter and spring. As soon as received they should be potted up as they do not gain anything by lying around. Pot firm and with good drainage and place where they can be kept cool such as a deep cold-frame. Here they can remain dormant until wanted for forcing. Take a good look at the list of these azaleas and you will be able to pick out some very fine and charming colors. By the end of January you can bring some of them in and force them along. A well flowered plant will always find a ready buyer. It takes from six to eight weeks to force them into bloom in a temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees.

Begonias

Attractive four-inch begonias of the best kinds from the semperflorens class may be had by next spring if they are started now from cuttings. The time when most of our Rex and flowering begonias can successfully be propagated is not limited to any certain seasons but we have found now to be the most convenient month in which to work up a supply. We then can rely on steadily held bottom heat, which is an essential—at least a helpful factor—in leaf and cutting propagation to be carried on with dispatch and no loss worth considering. Some kinds of shrubby begonias, however, only furnish good cuttings in early spring. These plants are given something of a rest from the present on and their propagation is deferred until the time mentioned.

Next Week:—Carnations; Cocos; Ixias; Pot Roses for Easter; Shrubs for Spring Forcing; Violas, Daisies, Aubrietias Myosotis, etc. in Frames.

Lily of the Valley

Until the beginning of the new year cold storage pips take the place of the newly imported lily of the valley for forcing. After that the latter proves fairly satisfactory though somewhat slow and often furnished but sparingly with foliage. The nearer we come to the end of the present cold storage supply the less time it takes to force the pips into bloom. The latter from start to finish takes about three or four weeks under a temperature of from 75 to 80 degrees with sand kept well soaked and the air in the house also kept charged with moisture to the extent of being just perceptible to one entering the house. By putting in batches every three weeks you can keep up a steady supply for cutting purposes. When the bells begin to open be very careful about watering as they will damp if allowed to remain wet through the night. At the start keep the atmosphere damp but when the bells begin to open let the atmosphere become much drier.

Spiraeas (Astilbe)

Prominent among plants forced into bloom for early spring and Easter are spiraeas. There is no immediate need of potting them at their arrival if root balls hold firm, as is the rule. For the present they may be heeled in frames covered lightly with loose litter to prevent freezing of the soil into a solid mass and left until after the holiday rush is over. The roots should then have a good soaking, the plants brought in, potted up and slowly accustomed to artificial heat. One may easily figure on fully three months of steady forcing in an intermediate house to have spiraeas in presentable trim for the Easter trade and on considerable less time if the finished plants are wanted for the usual late spring business. Spiraeas when in good growth and perfecting their bloom are ever thirsty and must not be allowed to reach a state approaching dire need of water.

Outside Work

Get all protecting material together for the frames. Fix up all breakages in glass not already repaired. Do not neglect to look over the houses outside for leaks and broken glass and repair without delay. Large tubs of oleander, agapanthus, etc., should be given a cool shed if there is not room in some of the cool houses. Chionodoxa, scillas and other similar small bulbs can be planted now between shrubbery and herbaceous borders and make a fine show in the spring.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Syringing

Because the plants are growing very freely, have a good color and are apparently free from all disease, is no reason why they should not receive a good syringing once a week at least. Spider if not watched will work havoc and the chances are that it will spread a good deal before it is discovered and then it will be a proposition to clean it out, especially with the winter months coming on. Syringe very quickly with high pressure for the less water that is thrown around the houses the better for the plants. Be careful to go into all the corners well, around all braces, and then between faucets where the hose meet. After the benches are syringed go over them and shake the plants as much as possible without taking too much time, so that they will be sure to dry off well before night. Then do not neglect the lime, which is more necessary this year than ever before. It will also be well to carry a trifle more air at night after syringing so as to dry out the air as quickly as possible.

Manure

If the supply of this is bought up locally, little here and a little there, there should be no let up in getting all the manure that can be secured. It will be needed before the season is over. Once it starts going it will be used rapidly and an exhausted supply may cut the crop down a good deal. A concrete platform with drainage arranged into the manure tank or cistern near the manure shed is ideal, but if it is not to be had the manure will have to be stored outside. Pile it in square heaps, not too high, and have these arranged so that the manure can be turned over every so often. A little straw in the manure will not do any harm, but it must not be too coarse. It would be well to see the dairymen from whom the supply is secured, and get them to cut their bedding short, so that it will be better for the greenhouse. Watch the piles carefully so that the manure will not burn. If piled high and if it is not very wet it is very apt to burn, and it is of very little value then. To prevent this a good wetting down will be necessary, but should not be done unless the man shows signs of heating.

Visit the Market

Every time there is a little time to spare it will do the growers good to go to their market and pay a visit to their wholesale florist and watch how their stock arrives. Usually a good many things can be learned in this way and will be a benefit. The wholesale florist may not have much time to entertain the grower but that matters little. The buyers are all anxious to get back to their stores and they must be waited on at once or they will look for their supply elsewhere. Time is usually a very precious thing and a visit to the market will prove to the grower the importance of having all roses properly packed, all slips properly added, and boxes plainly marked. Even proper tying will help to save time.

The Retail Trade

Growers could no doubt do a little more retail work if they had the proper supplies on hand. Most places are located so that if the growers were in position to offer to the public real flower service they could work up a good deal of new trade without in the least taking any from the regular retail stores. Wire designs of the several standard kinds should always be kept on hand, as should ribbons, tinfoil, toothpicks, and many other knick-knacks that go to make up the florists' supplies. Moss can generally be secured locally and enough of it should be picked and kept right on hand all the time. A supply should be picked now to do for the winter, as later with snow and ice on the ground it will be quite difficult to get. Some nice green cord and colored wax paper put a pretty touch to the flowers and makes the work of opening the packages a delightful task. Never use old drygoods boxes for the retail trade. They are all right to ship flowers to people in the trade but should never be used for retail flowers. We know of several cases where florists lost trade merely because of the use of boxes that formerly contained underwear. Neat boxes tied with ribbon or nice tape make anyone proud to carry them unwrapped anywhere, and wherever they are carried they advertise by suggesting to people that flowers are for all occasions, and are usually more appreciated than any other gift.

Lasiandra (Pleroma) macranthum

Lasiandra macranthum, better known as Pleroma macranthum by old-type gardeners, is a beautiful and effective warm greenhouse subject, possibly the most desirable of the many species on account of its large deep violet purple flowers. A denizen of Brazil, like most of its compeers, it is a strong grower requiring ample quarters for its full development. It is adapted best to pillar and trellis trained specimens. It is particularly effective when trained to a cross section end of the greenhouse, thus showing off its large deep blue flowers to perfection.

The individual flowers do not last long, but this short-coming is made up by an abundance of successive flowers taking their place for an indefinite period. For cut flower purposes it is not well fitted, as the flowers will wilt early after severing the branchlets from the plant.

The subject of this note, like many other beautiful members of Queen flora's family is less in evidence nowadays than it once was, for some inscrutable reason.

H. Emberson

CYPRIPEDIUM ROTHSCILDIANUM

Among the large family of ladies' slippers one finds some very interesting and peculiar members, one of them being C. Rothschildianum. A glance at the accompanying picture will plainly show the characteristics by which it differs from the ordinary run of cypripediums, chief among them being the singularly shaped staminode, with its whorls of white tipped hairs which gives the flower a very fantastic appearance. The main color of the flowers is a deep chocolate brown laid over a dull green ground. This cypripedium will succeed under the treatment usually given the warm growing section of the genus and the warmest place one can find for it will not be any too warm. Small receptacles will be found best and as a compost a good quality of osmunda fibre with the addition of a little fibrous loam or live sphagnum moss, but fibre alone will do should it be difficult to obtain the latter two ingredients. It will be found well to grow them suspended from the roof of the warm house, shading them but slightly during the warm summer months. Cypripediums should never be allowed to remain dry at the roots for any length of time and the atmosphere in which they are growing should be charged with moisture at all times by frequently damping down the walks and between the plants and on all bright days the plants may be sprayed overhead to keep down insect pests.

BRITISH HORTICULTURE.

The Horticultural Trades Association.

At the annual meeting of this Association, a satisfactory report was presented of the year's working. W. Cuthbertson, of Dobbie & Co., Edinburgh, president; C. A. Pearson, secretary, and the members of the Council were re-elected. E. A. Bunyard, W. Thomson, and E. Merryweather were appointed to fill vacancies on the Council. The president alluded to the severe loss the Association had sustained by the deaths of D. W. Thomson, of Edinburgh, a member of the Council and T. A. H. Rivers, a former president, and on his proposal a vote of sympathy with the relatives was passed.

Autumn Roses.

A splendid array of blooms was seen at the autumn show of the National Rose Society, in London, on Sept. 16. A high standard prevailed throughout, the competition in most of the classes being exceedingly keen. The Cory cup, presented by Reginald Cory for the best new seedling climbing rose shown at all or any of the Society's shows this year was won by Wm. Paul & Son, with Paul's Scarlet Climber, a meritorious variety, which has previously received honors at the Society's summer show, and at the R. H. S. show at Chelsea. The chief award in the premier class for 36 blooms of exhibition roses, was obtained by Alex. Dickson & Sons. Amongst the new introductions, S. M. McGredy & Son, the well-known Irish raisers, received a gold medal for Golden Emblem, a decorative garden rose, of the Rayon d'Or type. The same firm were awarded certificates for Modesty, a H. T., pink, flushed creamy white, National Emblem, velvety crimson H. T., and Tipperary, a deep saffron yellow H. T.

National Dahlia Society.

Owing to the Crystal Palace being in the hands of the military authorities the venue of the dahlia show was transferred to the Royal Horticultural Hall, in London. The Cory cup, given for a group of decorative garden dahlias, was taken by W. Treseder, Ltd., of Cardiff. Collarette dahlias, which appear to be increasing in popularity, produced a good show. Cheal & Son gained the first prize in singles with a fine display. W. H. AUSTIN

SOLANUMS

Solanums may be propagated by cuttings, although seeds are more commonly used commercially. January is perhaps the best time to plant the seeds. Cuttings may be taken from old cut-down plants that have started into growth. They are inserted in sand with bottom heat. They will root quickly and are planted singly into pots. When well established the tips are pinched back to induce a bushy growth.

The seedlings should be planted into pots as soon as possible. In June they are planted out into the open ground. Here they may remain until September giving them careful cultivation frequently. If for any reason the plants can not be set into the open field, give them an airy house in order to insure the moving of the pollen to fertilize the flowers.

In September the plants are potted up. The soil used consists of three parts loam, one part well-rotted cow manure, or leaf mold, and a little sand. Plenty of drainage should be put in each pot. When the plants need it a little liquid manure may be applied from time to time.

Solanum Pseudo-capsicum is the "Jerusalem Cherry," an old fashioned plant reaching a height of three to four feet and bearing an abundance of scarlet or yellow fruit. It is often seen in window gardens Solanum capsastrum attains a height of but two feet. It has orange red or scarlet fruit and is also used in window gardens. This is known also as the "Winter Cherry." These two are the species commonly used for Christmas sale. There are many other Solanums and some are of value to the florist. For sub-tropical gardens we have S. robustum, S. giganteum, and S. Warscewiczii.

Solanum crispum has very fragrant, bluish-purple flowers produced abundantly.

a height of fourteen feet against a wall and is moreover, hardy.

S. Wendlandii, S. jasminoides, S. Sederthianum, and S. pensile make fine greenhouse climbers. The first is one of the best climbers grown. It has bright, blue-purple flowers borne in enormous terminal clusters. It may be propagated by cutting the old vine into short pieces and inserting in sand.

may generally be traced to just this cause. We expect that when the proposed meetings have taken place in Philadelphia we shall have the pleasure of making a report thereon which will indicate so great a success as to arouse the officers and members of similar organizations elsewhere to new activities on bold progressive lines. Read the Philadelphia prospectus on another page of this paper and see what you think of it.

An excellent suggestion

Mr. Ruzicka's advice in this issue to the rose growers to visit the market from time to time and see how their stock arrives is good. The grower of any kind of flowers for the wholesale market owes it, not only to himself but to his dealer to make frequent visits to the latter's place of business—not for any purpose of espionage but to acquire a better knowledge of the conditions which affect and control the disposition of his product, to observe and compare his own goods alongside of those of his competitor, to get wise as to lacks and leaks and, in general, to take counsel with his selling agent so that he may co-operate intelligently with him to the end that his product may reach the market in such quality and condition as will assure its sale at the best possible price. Every wholesaler welcomes such opportunities to enlighten his growers as to the conditions which he as their selling representative has to contend with. Every wholesaler will tell you that he can "get along" better always with growers who thus take a sincere personal interest in becoming familiar with what is going on in the exacting and often erratic business of wholesale flower marketing than with the man who stays away and consequently is apt to form hasty and often unwarranted conclusions as to the ability or integrity of his agent.

About the gypsy moth

An editorial note in one of our esteemed contemporaries particularly identified with the nursery interests, states that investigations carried on by the U. S. Department of Agriculture "have resulted in the conclusion that the wind is chiefly responsible for the spread of the gypsy moth. We do not remember having seen the statement by the Department of Agriculture to which the foregoing quotation refers but we do know a little about the pest in question and we do think that somebody is "away off" and disseminating misleading ideas. We cannot imagine a wind that could blow gypsy caterpillars very far and as the female moth is incapable of flying and lays her eggs within a few inches at most of the crevice where she emerged from her cocoon it is not easy to conceive of her being blown away by anything less than a bomb. Our contemporary, referring to the fact that the gypsy moth has not become established to any extent outside of the quarantined district, naively remarks that either the nursery stock sent out from that area was clean or the gypsy moth will not thrive far from its present quarters. Our advice to you, brother, is not to take any chances on its thriving, but just settle down fairly and squarely on the proposition that the nursery stock was clean. The moth visitation has been a blessing in disguise to the nurserymen of New England as HORTICULTURE has already remarked several times. Cleanliness has, perforce, become a cardinal virtue with them during these trying years and as a result the stock they send out is the cleanest of the clean. If the gypsy moth gets a foothold outside of its present limits we do not think it will be either by means of the wind or by infested New England nursery stock.

Getting out of the rut

We rise to express cordial approval of the experiment formulated by the essay committee of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia to promote the interest and instructive value of the meetings of that body during the coming season. It is greatly to be regretted that in so many club and society meetings the time is frittered away in cursory talk or controversy on mere routine details and the decadence of interest and falling off in attendance from which clubs often suffer

SCHOOL GARDENS.

A school garden has been defined as a plot or section of ground where children may be taught how to care for growing plants. This plot or section is not necessarily a part of the school, but may be in the form of the public garden or playground, or even in the home yard or garden.

Frederick Froebel, the founder of the Kindergarten, says, "It is of the utmost importance that children should acquire the habit of cultivating a plot of ground long before the school life begins. Nowhere as in the vegetable kingdom can his action be so clearly traced by him, entering in as a link in the chain of cause and effect."

Children will take an active interest in anything which they can watch develop. The planting of seeds takes on a new mystery when the seed is "mine," and great is the joy when the first tiny green leaves appear.

It is necessary that the child be taught that the proper care must be given to the little seedling as well as to the larger plant and that this care must be exercised continuously. What is more disappointing than to have a fine lot of plants in good condition and by forgetting the necessary drink of water to find them looking as if they were dead? Here is where the school garden steps in and the child is taught to till the ground, plant the seed, watch against enemies of all kind, and to give the plants the proper amount of water and sunshine.

In many places, especially in large cities, there is not sufficient available space to give even a small plot to every one who applies, but in nearly every schoolyard there is a portion covered with grass. Here many lessons of responsibility, care of public property, etc., can be taught by allowing the children to look after this spot of green, keeping it free from paper and weeds and where there are flowers, keeping them in good growing condition.

I know of no better place to teach a child "property rights" than right in the garden. If this lesson were impressed on a child from the time he is wanting to take or use everything in sight, regardless of ownership, when he comes where there are other children that have equal rights there will not be the constant harassing of others. In a garden in which each child or set of children can have a plot this cannot be too strongly emphasized, for what child, be he careful or careless, will not resent, and justly, too, the injuring of his plants in any way?

If you members of the Ladies' Society of American Florists are living in a town in which you do not have School Gardens "get out and push." Get the Parent-Teachers' Association, the Civic Club, or any other club that is interested in Child Welfare, at work and have these gardens. Too much cannot be said about the help which they give the children and the idle ground is made to "blossom like a rose" instead of producing the usual crop of weeds.

In my home town, Lancaster, Pa., the first garden was started by the principal of a public school, and she has practically reformed the neighborhood in the children but to the whole neighborhood and the passerby.

Since this fine example has been set, public gardens have been opened in four sections of the city, in which for the sum of five cents any boy or girl can rent a small plot on which can be raised plants according to the individual taste. How the children enjoy these gardens, the work and the chance of showing them off. What splendid opportunity to get in close touch with Nature! Here the lessons of neatness, neighborly kindness, helpfulness, fair play and the love of labor are the more firmly impressed because of the spirit of recreation which enters into all the work.

May I appeal to you, florists, florists' wives, daughters and mothers to become interested in this work and help put in practice in your home towns? This will not be wasted energy; for every garden opened will be the means of keeping many uncared-for children off the streets and teaching them clean living. The florist clubs can assist you very much to carry out this movement. The Lancaster Florist Club gives nearly all the seeds used in our public gardens. Each year they make a liberal donation of both flower and vegetable seeds to the persons having the work in charge.

We cannot afford to look only on the dollar-and-cents side of our trade, but if we can implant in the hearts of the boys and girls the love of plants and flowers, it will eventually make returns to some florist, and what helps one is, in nearly every case, of benefit to the trade at large.

In one of the trade papers I saw the following and treasured it, never ex-

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

Lecture by E. H. Wilson.

The members of this club spent a most enjoyable evening on Tuesday, October 19, listening to the portrayal by E. H. Wilson, of the natural and horticultural features of Japan as observed by him on his second expedition to the Flowery Kingdom. Mr. Wilson's address was illustrated by a series of colored lantern slides of great beauty and the lecture was full of not only interesting but instructive information. Japan is very rich in woody floral resources, the number of species indigenous there exceeding that found in any other section of the northern hemisphere. The Japanese display great fondness for tree bloom, but, with possibly three exceptions, they care nothing for herbaceous flowers. These exceptions are the irises, peonies and moon flowers. Highest in their affection stand the cherries, and the time of cherry blooming is turned into a series of holidays and great rejoicing. Regarding the Japan cherries Mr. Wilson said that a principal cause of their frequent failure in this country is that they are worked on an unsuitable stock. He recommended Prunus Sargentii as well adapted for use as a grafting stock. Moutan peonies, which give such unsatisfactory results usually, do so because they are grafted on a very vigorous stock which suckers and in a very few years kills out the grafted variety. He advised the roots of the herbaceous peony as a preferable stock, but the process of producing a plant by this method is much more tedious and the Japs find it commercially unremunerative. Incidental to his remarks on the longiflorum lily industry Mr. Wilson predicted that the "Regal Lily" of China will eventually take the place of the longiflorum as an Easter specialty. It was a surprise to learn that the art of Japanese gardens really originated in China. Mr. Wilson predicted a bright future for Azalea Kaempferi as a forcing subject for florists' use.

Other Business.

It was announced that the annual club banquet will take place at the New American House on February 9.

On the proposition from the Association of Gardeners for a plan of affiliating membership it was voted that any visitor from other bodies would be made welcome but could not enjoy the privilege of voting until he had become a regular member of the club.

A $50 silver cup was appropriated for award at the Spring Show of the Mass. Horticultural Society for twelve cyclamen plants, three or more colors.

A letter was received from Max Schling, of New York, in response to the invitation to address the club on this occasion, regretting his inability to comply at present and the loss to him in missing the opportunity to meet the members and get acquainted. An invitation for members to visit the Cleveland Flower Show was cordially received.

The exhibits of the evening included a group of seedling dahlias from W. A. Manda, a collection of flowering and foliage plants from W. W. Edgar Co., Buddleias from W. N. Craig, and a large vase of the pink carnation novelty Miss Theo from Littlefield & Wyman.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The Executive Committee of the American Rose Society held a meeting in New York City, President Pennock presiding. The matter of the annual bulletin, with the proceedings for 1915 was gone over, with the plan of making improvement in this publication. The J. H. McFarland Co., of Harrisburg, made a proposition to issue the same in a much better form than heretofore, and this proposition was accepted, and the same will come out after the first of January, embodying the transactions of the year, with colored illustrations.

The matter of cost of affiliated membership was gone over with some detail. At present the affiliated membership is ten cents for each member, and after careful consideration it was moved that the associate membership be changed from ten cents to twenty-five cents per member; this change to be put into effect January 1, 1916.

The premium list for the exhibit of 1916, to be held in Philadelphia at the National Flower Show from March 25, to April 2, was submitted and gone over carefully, covering roses in pots and tubs, table decorations, blooms by commercial growers and blooms by private growers. The total amount of premiums to be awarded is $2,500. The final adjustment of the schedule of prizes was referred to a committee of Messrs. Pennock and Reuter to arrange.

C. T. Tansill of the Washington Test Garden Committee tendered his resignation. Wm. F. Gude of Washington, was selected to fill the vacancy, and Mr. Gude has accepted the position. A new rose was reported for registration and the same was referred for proper consideration.

The Cleveland Flower Show to be held from November 10 to 14, was carefully gone over and arrangement made to call a regular meeting of the Society at that time, for the consideration of any matters pertaining to the best interests of the Society.

The Cleveland Flower Show has placed at the disposal of the American Rose Society, the sum of $700 in prizes. There has been added to that a special prize of $25 by Robert Scott & Son, of Sharon Hill, Pa., for 50 blooms of Killarney Brilliant rose, A. N. Pierson, Inc., offers $25 for the best 50 blooms of the rose Hadley and Benjamin Hammond offers a cash prize of $10 for the prettiest exhibition of roses, same to be decided by vote of the lady visitors, a silver cup is offered by the Lamborn Floral Co., of Alliance, O., a silver medal, by Vaughan's Seed Store of New York and Chicago, and $10 in cash by W. Atlee Burpee & Co.

The judges for the American Rose Society at the Cleveland show are Emil Buettner of Park Ridge, Ill., and John H. Dunlop of Toronto, Ont.

ST. LOUIS FLORIST CLUB.

The Florist Club held its last outdoor meeting on Thursday afternoon, October 14, at the home of its president. The meeting was the largest on record, no less than eighty members greeting the officers, as well as a number of visitors, and it was a fine compliment to President Bourdet, who at the opening was presented with a handsome gavel by the lady members of his family. A letter from the Cleveland Florists' Club inviting the members to Cleveland next month was read and acted upon by the chair appointing Messrs. Geddis, Berning and Pilcher a transportation committee.

Janiecke and Windler were appointed to consider and report at the next meeting as to the advisability of holding a flower show next spring. The treasurer's report showed that the club's finances are in a healthy condition.

After adjournment the president invited all to a fine lunch on the lawn. At the end a rousing vote of thanks was extended Mr. Bourdet and his family for their splendid afternoon hospitality.

GARDENERS' DAY AT THE EXPOSITION.

The principal feature of the formal programme in commemoration of "Gardeners'" or "Landscape Engineers' Day" at the Exposition on October 9th, was the presentation of a handsome trophy to John McLaren in recognition of his able services in connection with the landscaping of the exposition grounds. The exercises were held on a platform erected at the east entrance of the Palace of Horticulture. The speaker's stand was almost hidden from view with the many floral pieces brought by an admiring public. When McLaren stepped on the platform, the Exposition band struck up a medley of Scotch melodies, and the audience arose spontaneously and cheered. Mayor Jas. Rolph, Jr., made a hurried trip from his ranch in the Santa Clara mountains that he might be present to help honor McLaren for his wonderful work in the beautification of San Francisco and the Exposition. The cup presented by him was a huge silver trophy, mounted on a pedestal of Italian marble. It was purchased with the dimes contributed by thousands of friends and admirers. Donald McLaren, his son and assistant, was presented with a special plaque by the Exposition. Nor did this end the presentations. On behalf of the school Children of San Francisco, little Margaret O'Connor presented the landscape expert with several baskets and a wreath of flowers. The ceremonies were attended by many gardeners, nurserymen and florists, about thirty members of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society attending in a body. The great day was rounded into a perfect memory in the evening, when Mr. and Mrs. McLaren received a few friends at "The Lodge" in Golden Gate Park. During the dinner hour a handsome silver vase arrived. It was a present from the Bohemian Club to Jon McLaren and Mrs. McLaren.

A WORD TO THE WISE.

In a personal letter from John Wanamaker to the undersigned, Mr. Wanamaker says "My idea of advertising is much higher than merely to sell goods. It is to educate our own people and to some extent, whoever reads what is upon our page." This is worth quoting as it emphasizes a fact that many in our business do not fully realize—namely, that advertising in its highest sense should have an educative character in addition to establishing a reputation of high standing. The selling of one's products is a national consequence. Advertising is a deeper study than many people think. John Wanamaker is a past master in the art and has been for nearly fifty years. A careful study of his methods from day to day and year to year is an object lesson for everybody who has the acumen to absorb their points and apply them. In our business Burpee is a good second.

Try to make your advertising attractive and interesting. Try to appeal to the personal element to which all are responsive. And when possible use a picture of some kind to attract attention. Children will stop to look at a picture. Men are but children of a larger growth. And don't do it just one time and imagine the whole world is gazing at you. Keep everlastingly at it. G. C. WATSON.

Canary Onions and Onion Seed.

(Consul George K. Stiles, Teneriffe, Canary Islands, Sept. 4.)

The 1915 export season for Canary Island onions and onion seed closed, so far as shipments to the United States are concerned, on August 28, showing small reduction from last year's figures in the quantities of seed exported. However, a slight increase in prices has made the values approximately the same, so that shippers and growers are well satisfied with the general results. Onions for Porto Rico made a decided gain.

As declared at the Teneriffe consulate, the value of the onion seed exported to the United States in 1915 was $40,828, against $43,293 in 1914; to Porto Rico $973, against $2,548; or a total of $41,801, against $45,841. Onion shipments to Porto Rico (there being none to the United States) were valued at $13,435, as compared with $7,963 last year, this gain being sufficient to offset the loss on the seed exports and leave a favorable balance of $1,432 for the present year.

The question of securing the necessary bottoms for shipments to the United States turned out to be (as was forecast in Commerce Reports for July 26) the most serious problem of the 1915 crop.

The Crop Situation.

There have been no new developments in the crop situation during the past week, excepting that our prediction of very high prices for onions next spring have been confirmed by one of the largest dealers and shippers of onions in the country. He stated that onions next March would bring a higher price than for twenty years past. The same opinion seems to be quite general about onion sets, at least, that they will be higher next spring than for several years.

One exception to the statement that there had been no change in the crop situation is the announcement that late varieties of sweet corn will be very short, one or two estimates placing deliveries on contracts not above 40 to 50 per cent., and this is based on the crop curing well as harvested. Should there be any serious damage as a result of unfavorable weather causing the soft corn to mould, prices are likely to rule higher than now seems probable.

Because of the unfavorable crop situation several of the larger wholesale houses are declining to quote prices on most lines of seeds in quantities. In fact they have refused recently to accept orders even in very small quantities for many items, and this probably accounts in large measure for the few salesmen representing the larger houses who are now on the road. One of the oldest members of the trade stated recently that he had never known a season when such a condition prevailed and it was very conclusive of the extreme shortage of many items and the generally unsettled situation.

The news that our old friend Eugene Schaettel is over here again canvassing the trade for Messrs. Vilmorin, Andrieux & Co., will be received with pleasure by the trade, as Mr. Schaettel has been always a most popular and welcome visitor. We may be able to get some information from Mr. Schaettel through our correspondents, and we know that anything he may offer will be read with interest by the trade.

The value of imports of horticultural material at the Port of New York for the week ending October 9, is given as follows: Clover seed, $15,606; grass seed, $3,498; sugar beet seed, $313; trees, bulbs and plants, $91,020; manure salt, $16,055.

BELGIUM PLANTS ARRIVING.

Confirming our letter of September 23, we are pleased to be able to advise you that shipments of Azaleas and other Belgium plants are now arriving in large volume. The steamers "Ryndam" and "Oosterdyk" which arrived on October 18, from Rotterdam, brought 458 packages for us and the steamer "Westerdyk" now in transit brings 338 packages more. Other Azalea shipments are also in transit and Holland shipments are also beginning to arrive in good volume.

Please give this information the widest circulation possible, to offset the many erroneous reports that have been published in recent weeks regarding Belgium shipments.

HELP WANTED.

To My Fellow Florists:

Will not our fellow florists give a helping hand to a deserving fellow craftsman, who has met with an overwhelming calamity, whose work of a lifetime has been wiped out in a single night, and he left penniless?

Rose growers know Father Schoener as an indefatigable hybridizer, whose collection numbered species from every continent, and who has produced as high as 120,000 hybridized rose seeds in one season.

Attached letters explain themselves. Send your contributions to Mr. S. S. Pennock, President of the American Rose Society, No. 1618 Ludlow street, Philadelphia, Penna., who will acknowledge and forward same. May your response be prompt. Thank you.

Truly,

ROBERT PYLE.

West Grove, Pa.

Oct. 10, 1915.

My Dear Cousin:—

I know you will be shocked as I was when I learned today that fire originating in a neighboring house last night destroyed Father Schoener's church and his home. This, of course, means that many, if not all, of his seedlings have been destroyed, for they were largely planted in the churchyard, as well as his collection of briars. I tried to reach Father Schoener today, but evidently he overexerted himself during the fire, as he is ill in bed. I am going to Brooks on Tuesday and upon my return will advise you as to whether or not he saved anything, but I fear that this calamity has left Father Schoener penniless. Yours sincerely, (Signed) JESSE A. CURREY.

My Dear Mr. Pyle:—

I have to let you know the terrible news that my house, church and plants and roses burned last night, Oct. 9th. I am penniless. I do not know what to do for the present. I just had cut the last seedlings to send to you. Would there be no way to induce the people in my behalf? I ask this consideration to enable me to go on with my work. All I had is gone; a value of about $10,000 is lost. Mr. — sent me a check for $5; it is also burned. He was in the company with the Governor of Pennsylvania on his trip to the West. Could not some newspapers take up the matter to come to my rescue? I will be ever thankful to you for any kind of help in this terrible affliction.

Very respectfully yours,

(Signed) FATHER SCHOENER.

Brooks, Ore., Oct. 10, 1915.

NEWS NOTES.

West Grove, Pa.—Antoine Wintzer of Conard & Jones Co., has at last produced an absolutely pure white canna, so we are informed by the Philadelphia North American. The impressionable correspondent persists in dubbing Mr. Wintzer a "wizard" in spite of that gentleman's very sensible protest. When will people learn that to any really worthy worker in plant development the title of "wizard" is not only unwelcome but offensive?

Holyoke, Mass.—Arrangements for the third annual flower show under the auspices of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists' and Gardeners' Club, to be held in Windsor Hall, Nov. 3 and 4, have been made. Many exhibits by some of the finest flower growers in New England are promised, and a special feature will be an exhibit of orchids by W. A. Manda of South Orange, N. J. The arrangements committee consists of D. J. Gallivan, chairman; G. H. Sinclair, George Rackliffe and George Strugnell of this city, Edward Hennessey and William Downer of Northampton and James Whiting of Amherst.

very large business in a few years. It is understood that the owner has made a very substantial concession on the rental, which at its former figure was practically prohibitive.

We take pleasure in presenting to our readers portraits of Henry Penn, the head of "Penn the Florist" and his brother William Penn who is also an important factor in the success which the house has attained. Both are Boston born boys and both started their careers as newsboys. At the age of 13 years Henry Penn supplemented his paper business with flower selling. By the time he was 20 he had saved from his modest earnings $300. This he invested in a tiny shop of his own on Chapman place. With perseverance and personality, carefulness and courtesy the smallest flower store in the city grew rapidly. Everybody who traded there came again. They liked the Penn way of doing things. In five years he took a store at 43 Bromfield street. Three years later he enlarged it and a year ago he had to take storage room in the Publicity Building across the street. To Tremont street was the next logical move.

He has been called "the Penn that wrote service into flower selling." Liberal and clever advertising, courtesy, skillfulness and excellent values for moderate prices are the elements that have brought him success.

According to those in charge of the Grand Floral Festival, everything is moving harmoniously, and a great success is expected to be scored. In addition to the $10,000 guarantee fund, several handsome special prizes are offered.

George Wienhoeber had a window decoration on National Apple Day that held a crowd constantly outside. A large high-handled basket decorated with yellow chrysanthemums was partly overturned and yellow apples had fallen on the fern covered window floor.

Only a trivial sum now stands between another large wholesaler and the agents of the new LeMoyné block. Wabash avenue has always been a favorite with the wholesale florist trade and while rent is high in the new building it seems likely to house a large proportion of the wholesalers.

The Columbia Flower Shop at 31st and Cottage Grove avenues, is one of the prettiest of the small shops in the city. Mrs. Albert Cole, the proprietor who is a native of Australia has now added four years' experience to her natural artistic ability and trade has developed accordingly. Albert Cole is the American Beauty salesman at E. C. Amling's wholesale house.

Miss Tuckfield of Melbourne, Australia who is visiting her cousin, Mrs. J. G. Hancock, has been much interested in visiting the wholesale flower market. In her city no frost of any account ever occurs and carnations, roses and other stock are grown in the open. Only tropical plants are under glass. It is the custom there in preparing flowers for shipment to dip the stems first in wax or paraffine and this will keep them for many days.

Philip Breitmeyer came from Detroit to Chicago Saturday, Oct. 16th to deliver in person the bridal flowers for a North Side wedding. The bridal bouquet was of the style known as the arm bouquet and was composed of vandas, white dendrobiums and cypripediums, tied with chiffon. The bouquet for the bridesmaid was also unusual, being entirely of Adiantum Farleyense and tied with green chiffon and narrow green ribbon. The gentlemen's boutonnieres were of gardenias.

Splendid blooms of chrysanthemum Salamon Gold are now to be seen at Wietor Bros'. They are of a rich shade with large full round heads and are cut with stems five feet long. Mr. Wietor is growing 6,000 of them and thinks E. G. Hill's Salamon Gold a decided success. Alice Salamon so far is not doing well with Mr. Wietor. Marigold, another new yellow, sent out by Elmer D. Smith, is promising well. In carnations Mr. Wietor is cutting splendid blooms from 12,000 plants of Rosette, a deep pink of great size and substance.

The opening of the conservatory of J. Mangel, known as the Palmer House Florist, took place October 18, and adds something new to the downtown retail stores. It is between the store proper and the corridor of the Palmer House, and makes a fitting place for showing plants in an attractive and home-like manner as well as affording a place where choice plants will be protected from the heat of the store. The sides have benches for stock and are artistically designed. Under the glass dome, which gives the conservatory daylight, dozens of birds are flitting about adding an outdoor touch.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Postal cards received from Mrs. J. A. Phillips, tell of the wonderful trip she is making in touring the west coast and visiting the fairs at San Francisco and San Diego.

Archibald F. Roberts, formerly employed at the store of George C. Shaffer, on Thursday of last week suffered the sad loss of his wife, Nellie E. Roberts, who died about one hour after having been stricken with paralysis. The sympathy of the entire trade is being conveyed to Mr. Roberts in his present bereavement.

Proposals will be received at the office of the Supervising Architect, Treasury Department, until November 3, for sodding and seeding, planting trees, shrubs, etc., on the grounds of the Federal Building, at Plymouth, Mass. Drawings and specifications may be had upon application to the custodian of the building or at the office in Washington.

BOSTON.

W. W. Edgar Co. have been successful in their suit against John L. Condon, formerly connected with the American Auxiliary Co., through Bion B. Libby as attorney, for the proceeds from the sale by Condon of a boiler belonging to the Edgar Co.

BUFFALO.

Ed Fancourt, of S. S. Pennock Mehan Co., dropped in on way back from the Exposition.

The Allen Flower Shop, formerly managed by Mrs. Blakeman has changed hands and has been taken over by Miss Emma Heintz.

Sangster, the Jefferson Florist, has redecorated the interior and exterior of his building and no finer shop is seen east of Main street.

Wm. F. Kasting left on Monday evening for Philadelphia to attend the National Flower Show Committee meeting and from there will go to Washington to attend a meeting on postal matters.

Jos. Streit, formerly with S. A. Anderson for a number of years, is about to leave Buffalo and will be associated in business with another local boy—Michael Bloy, of Detroit, Mich. Every success is wished for Mr. Streit by his Buffalo friends in his new undertaking.

Another new flower shop will be opened here by the growing firm of Galley Bro., of Gardenville, N. Y. The new store will locate at 161 E. Genesee street, at an early date. Extensive alterations, new fixtures, etc., are already under way and by all indications is to be one of the finest East Side shops.

A. J. Reichert & Son have closed the store on Jefferson street and are now located in a new building, 1227 Main street, Central Park district. The store is well adapted for a flower shop, having a spacious window and every convenience. New ice boxes, mirrors, counters and electrical fixtures make an attractive store in the growing section of the Central Park district.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Emile Serveau, who has long conducted a florist shop on Fillmore street, has taken his son, Alfred, into partnership.

Jeanette MacRorie, sister of Daniel MacRorie was the guest of honor at a dinner party given by John McLaren at "The Lodge" in Golden Gate Park a few evenings ago.

Plants and shrubs used in the landscape gardening at the Exposition will be sold to persons submitting the highest bids, according to an announcement by Exposition officials.

The success of the celebration of Columbus Day at the Exposition on October 12th, was largely due to Angelo J. Rossi, who acted as chairman of the arrangements committee.

The recent death of David Tisch in Oakland, Cal., was mourned by a wide circle of friends in the florist trade of this vicinity. He had been connected with the business practically all his life, coming to California many years ago from St. Louis, first locating in San Diego, and then taking charge of the nursery department of the H. M. Sanborn Co. in Oakland and Berkeley.

PHILADELPHIA.

A cheery letter was received on the 14th inst. from W. Atlee Burpee who is taking a well-earned rest in the high latitudes of Wernersville, Pa.

Samuel W. Sproul late with Stuart H. Miller has opened a new flower store at 60th and Locust street under the title of The Locust Flower Shop. He is reported as being a live wire and likely to do well.

August Muller of 65th and Elmwood avenue a noted grower of bedding and flowering plants has opened a retail store at 8th and Walnut street. It is newly and elegantly fitted up and decorated and makes a splendid appearance.

Abram L. Pennock left on October 20 for his winter home in Jupiter, Florida. He has been enjoying the cool breezes and fine atmosphere of Lansdowne and Ocean City the past six months, with the added enjoyment of association with family and friends, and departed spry as a cricket—a wonder for an eighty-nine-year old.

The appeal being sent out by Robert Pyle on behalf of Father Schoener, the famous rose hybridizer of Brooks, Oregon, should meet with a generous response from all interested in the advancement of horticulture. Samuel S. Pennock president of the American Rose Society is taking an active personal interest in the matter and is busy enlisting the sympathy of the trade in this worthy cause. Let others turn in and do their little share.

PITTSBURGH.

The Phipps School of Botany of the Phipps Conservatory, Schenley Park, is again in full swing under the regime of Miss L. F. Allabach of the Fifth Avenue High School.

The Botanical Section of the Academy of Science and Art held its opening session for the season of 1915-16, on Wednesday evening in the Herbarium of Carnegie Institute, President Neil McCallum, presiding. The brief business session included the annual election of officers.

The interesting exhibition of the Neglected Lot or Community Garden of the Civic Club was supplemented by an evening meeting when Garden Club prizes amounting to $25 were awarded. Stereopticon slides were shown of the gardens from the day work was begun, throughout the season, to the gathering of the crops. William Allen, superintendent of the Homewood Cemetery is chairman of the Community Garden Committee.

Both John W. Jones, foreman of the Phipps Conservatory and James Moore of the North Side or old Allegheny conservatory, are submerged in work preparatory to their respective Chrysanthemum Shows to open Oct. 31st. Mr. Moore has been having an influx of visitors to see his splendid specimens of Aristolochia. Likewise Mr. Jones' carpet beds nearby the conservatory have attracted unusual attention throughout the season.

The Zieger Company has opened a new store in the center of the East End shopping district in the Rowe Building, Highland avenue at Penn. The outside of the building has been greatly improved by placing boxes planted with evergreens on the two sides of the building on the second floor. The interior walls are fitted with lattice and covered with foliage decorations. In the center is a pergola with a pool and surrounded with a rockery of tufa stone. At the rear a portion is screened off for a work shop.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Ned Brooks has returned from a vacation at Cape Cod.

Thomas Curley of Harkness street, this city, is out around again after having recovered from an operation.

A number of citizens of Bristol have formed a Garden Club and are to affiliate with the Garden Club of America. A question box was started at a recent meeting and the pruning of roses, their protection, and the care of house plants were the leading topics.

The trade in and about Providence at the present time is regarded as the best that it has been for a long time. That there is a great deal of confidence in the future is indicated in the fact that there are nearly a dozen houses now in process of construction or planned ready for building. Joseph Koppleman, James Hay, William Hoffman of Pawtucket, Miss Eleanor E. Widener of Newport, Johnston Brothers, the Butler Hospital, Laurence Hay, Charles Hunt and Richard Higgins, are all adding new houses or enlarging.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON The summery weather which has prevailed without interruption for the past week, combined with the increasing influx of chrysanthemums has made a material change in the flower market situation. There is no longer any short supply in any line and some things, such as chrysanthemums and carnations, are beginning to accumulate ahead of the sales, and there are signs that roses are heading towards a similar predicament. The quality of the latter is really very fine and the large number carried by the retail stores in their show cases indicates a disposition on the part of the retailers to recognize and welcome the nice grade of goods which the rose growers are providing. Chrysanthemums, as a rule, are not of high quality. There are, of course, some exceptional lots coming in but the general supply does not seem to compare in foliage and finish of flower with the stock of previous years. As above remarked carnations are increasing rapidly in crop and the quality is also improving. The prices have taken a decided downward turn. Violets are being received in good sized quantity and the flowers are nice considering present conditions although not yet up to acceptable winter perfection. The downward tendency in quotations affects all lines, even lily of the valley experiencing a 25 per cent. drop from last week's prices. The retailers are all making a special effort in window adornment but most of the stores seem to be rather shy on customers this week, a condition for which the enjoyable outdoor conditions are no doubt largely to blame.

Trade continues on the BUFFALO upward course and every day seems to show some improvement. There is quite sufficient of everything coming in except carnations and these are having a decidedly heavy demand. Excellent chrysanthemums are coming in and clean up every day. Dahlias are still in good supply also cosmos, and these are taking well. Roses, lilies, orchids, etc., have all had a good demand.

There is very little increase in the amount of stock coming into this market. A few more chrysanthemums are cut than last week and possibly a few more long stemmed roses, but these do not help much for the demand is strongest for medium priced stock, and of that there is a decided scarcity. Carnations, for so early in the season, are extra fine large specimens, but their scarcity keeps the price well up. The last aster has probably been sold for this year and pompon chrysanthemums are hardly ready so there is nothing to be had in what is usually termed a cheap grade of flowers. The social events, always so welcome during chrysanthemum season, have not failed so far to use up the big Beauties. Lily of the valley is in good demand. Shipping trade is heavy to all points and telegraph orders are constantly coming. A good supply of green helps out greatly.

The market is in a CINCINNATI condition where enough stock is coming into the wholesale houses.

Mrs. Charles Russell

Some wonderful stock coming in of this grand rose and it is a grand rose—one of the best commercial roses on the market today.

Prices are reasonable. Shipping business is good. The cut of chrysanthemums is increasing and unless the call for them becomes greater they will begin to crowd. A good assortment in the various grades of the early varieties may be had. Roses are in a good supply and have a good market. Carnations, longiflorum lilies, and rubrum lilies have been having a pretty active market. Dahlias and cosmos both are good.

Increasing daily cuts, NEW YORK balmy weather and public indifference to flowers under prevailing conditions have brought about a much more sluggish market and falling off in values all along the list of staple flowers as compared with last week. Chrysanthemums are coming in heavily, some of them being of really exhibition quality and, as usual, some others mighty ragged and disruptable. Violets are also coming in more freely but inferior in quality. A few shipments of dahlias every day attest the summery character of the October weather which still persists. Cosmos, too, is plentiful from outdoor sources. Roses of splendid quality are arriving freely, as are carnations of much better grade than heretofore. Lily of the valley has sobered down somewhat from its recent soaring stunts, but nobody expects this flower to be very abundant or very cheap after the season gets well under way. Cattleya labiata has passed its high tide and the receipts are much lighter. Large quantities of oak foliage in orange and bronze tints are being displayed by the wholesale dealers in hardy greens, etc.

There is no material change here since our last report. Business continues good at the advanced prices noted. Stocks remain on the short side and in some cases difficulty has been experienced in filling orders satisfactorily. However, crops are promising well and this situation may not last many days. A slight drop in quotations is imminent. They are considerably higher now all along the line than they were at this date one year ago.

This week witnessed PITTSBURGH to any extent the first falling of the sear and yellow leaf. Owing to the exceptionally cool rainy summer and the light character of the autumn frosts, foliage until this time has seemed more like that of early July. Business is fair but there is a shortage of stock. There are still a few dahlias left, the fancy varieties being the finest ever seen in this section. Carnations are not in full crop, but coming in as well as to be expected so early in the season.

Flowers have been more plentiful the past week and business was a little quieter than it had been for some time, with the result that stocks did not clean up so closely from day to day. Chrysanthemums are the principal feature. They are at their height and excellent, and the enormous quantities of them being used is felt in some of the other lines. At the same time roses are more plentiful and better; carnations show good quality, and violets are arriving in ample supply. There are plenty of most seasonable roses with the exception of Beauties and Cecile Bruner, more of which could be used if available. Maryland, Killarney and Richmond show good quality, but they do not seem to move as readily as Hadley, Ward, Ophelia, Russell and other newer varieties. Shipping is better than usual for this time of the year, this part of the business being helped greatly by the improved refrigerator car service. A good many dahlias and gladioli continue to arrive, but they have lost some of their popularity in face of the competition with chrysanthemums. There is no longer a cry of orchid shortage. Cattleya labiata and Mossiae are offered in abundance.

Business has greatly improved and so has the stock. There has been no glut of any one flower, so we can say supply is equal to demand. Prices are a little stiff at present and especially on early chrysanthemums, but the trade wants them and pays the price. These are not as yet in an over supply and will not be for some time yet.

Local dealers generally report business as more favorable and at the wholesale houses the verdict is "good." The variable weather, is not conducive to the production of good flowers and during the past ten days florists have often had to be content with what they could get. This has been particularly true of carnations which are not yet very plentiful. Lily of the valley is often hard to obtain for in this there is a real shortage. The shortage has caused an increase in price and the best is now bringing $5 per hundred. The late coming of the chrysanthemums has caused a shortage of lilies. While the former are in bloom it is the practice of the growers of lilies to either discontinue or curtail their supply. The call continued much later this year than usual and the stocks were soon nearly exhausted. Calendulas made their appearance last week. The cattleya glut is over and those flowers that are being received meet with a more ready sale now that the social season has opened. Roses are more plentiful and in better quality. American Beauty roses show a marked improvement.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

New York City.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Julius O. and J. Frederick Hanft, composing the firm of Hanft Brothers, florists, at 684 Madison avenue, by these creditors: New York Cut Flower Company, $2,009, and Joseph J. Levy, $447. The business is one of the oldest in the city, having been established in 1850, and the present partners succeeded to it in 1893. They catered to a society trade. Assets are estimated at $3,000.

Among the flowers that will be shown at the Boston Chrysanthemum Show this year, I am told, will be some very beautiful specimens of that flower raised by John Dinan, gardener of the C. N. Winship estate, Wakefield. The seed from which these specimens grew were brought from Ireland several years ago by Mr. Dinan, when he left his position as gardener at the Blarney Castle conservatories.—Boston Post.

Some time ago there were stories printed in various publications to the effect that Massachusetts' famous old colony of Shakers had gone out of existence. The Mt. Lebanon colony of Shakers, however, prove themselves very much alive by the exhibit they made the past week at the Grange Fair up-State. The average yield of wheat in that part of Massachusetts is about 17 bushels to the acre; but the Shakers succeeded in producing 63 bushels. That's what Bay State soil can do when it gets proper treatment.—Boston Post.

When it was reported that Jameson (Mo.) boasted a cocklebur which towers 21 feet above the ground, people found it difficult to believe, despite the fact that they had been "shown" in any number of cases. And this lowly and despised plant was seldom given any attention except by those who were anxious to destroy it.

But people came to Jameson and were convinced—they saw the cocklebur growing on top of the rear end of the Jameson bank building. As the building is twenty feet high and the plant fully one foot in height, no one could complain of being deceived.—Saturday Blade, Chicago.

A mushroom weighing more than 30 pounds and measuring 3½ feet in diameter was recently brought to Horticultural Hall for the Mycological Club exhibition. The mushroom was found in Beverly by Mrs. Alice Wool of Boston. It was like two great roses of cream fawn color, waxy white and full of irregular holes on the underside. A litter of boughs and pasteboard boxes had to be made for its transportation. Two men carried it to the station and placed it in a baggage car on a Boston-bound train. It could not be taken in the street cars, nor in a taxi, and an automobile had to be secured in order that it might reach the exhibition in perfect condition.—Boston Post.

pecting to use it in a talk to our society, but hoped at some future time to use it in the Parent-Teachers' Association work; however, I pass it along and hope it will help you in some way if you become interested in the work.

"A prize has been announced by the Home Yard and Garden Association, of Bridgeport, Conn. This prize will go to the person making the best development of a flower garden or porch. The small garden will have as good a chance as the large one, or even a porch development may win it, if the person competing has no place to plant but a porch."

The aim of the movement is to get everybody to plant something, however small the space may be. There is nothing so conducive of live interest as a prize for the reward of competition. While many persons will beautify their properties for the love of the beautiful, it usually takes more than that to beautify a town.

If I have been instrumental in inducing at least one person to undertake this work it will be well worth the effort of trying to comply with the president's wishes in sending you this talk.

Mr. Benjamin Hammond, of the S. A. F. and O. H., has for a long time been interested in School Gardens, and to those members who will undertake the spread of the work I would recommend consulting him.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The October meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society will be held in the Public Library, Providence, on Wednesday evening, October 20. William N. Craig, of Brookline, Mass., will speak on the "Hardy Herbaceous Garden, and the Planting of Bulbs." Business meeting at 7.45; lecture at

The annual chrysanthemum show under the auspices of the Silent Circle of King's Daughters, will be held on November 3, in Peace Dale, R. I., and the society is to make a determined effort to raise the standing of judging to conform to that set by the Chrysanthemum Society of America. The professional and amateur classes will be judged alike this year, the only change in the rules being that collections must include 20 or more plants. The raising of the standard is received with favor by the professional growers who believe it will be a boom to the business and the coming exhibit promises to be the largest and best in years.

Obituary

William H. Maher

William H. Maher, a well-known florist of Newport, died at his home last Tuesday in that city following a lingering illness. He was 38 years old. Mr. Maher was a son of the late William H. Maher and he leaves three sisters, Mrs. Michael A. McCormick, Miss Mary T. Maher and Miss Lillian E. Maher.

Mrs. Martha Ann Perry

Mrs. Martha Ann Perry, mother of J. J. Perry, manager of the Baltimore branch of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Company, passed away in Washington, D. C., at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. M. P. Gregory, on October 13. Mrs. Perry, who was eighty-two years of age, was recently stricken with paralysis from which death resulted. She was taken to Frederick, Md., for interment.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

Our Little Boer Cousin, by Luna May Innis, author of "Our Little Danish Cousin." Illustrated by John Goss. This is one more addition to the "Little Cousin" series of books for young people, published by the Page Company, Boston. It is a very interesting story, instructively woven around historical facts and there is plenty of life and excitement in it to engross and captivate the boy readers. 140 pages and six full-page illustrations, handsomely printed and bound. Price 60 cents, net.

The Crimson Gondola, by Nathan Gallizier. This is another of the Page Company's sterling publications, first impression September, 1915. It is a romance of Venice and Constantinople at the beginning of the thirteenth century and the weird and nerve-stirring scenes so vividly pictured will have a special fascination at the present time when the peoples and the places which figure in its tales are engaged in a furious death-grapple. The story is replete with tragic incidents. Bulgars, Nubians, Greeks, Venetians, Armenians, all play their part in this compelling tale of the strife of factions which culminated in the fourth crusade and the Latin conquest of Constantinople—the most romantic city in the world. 450 pages, with four superb colored plates, bound in red and gold, price $1.50, carriage paid.

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

MASSACHUSETTS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE FALL SHOW.

The Department of Floriculture is making plans for its Annual Fall Flower Show which is to be held Monday and Tuesday, November 8 and 9. The entire first floor of the building, about 5200 square feet will be used for the show.

Last fall the Department received many favorable comments from men in the trade. This year it is planned to make the show a bigger, better and busier one. There will be exhibits of interest to the florist and gardener as well as to the general public. The Department wishes to extend to all a hearty invitation to attend the show.

There will be a large showing of chrysanthemums in named collections, in masses, in groups of foliage and flowering plants and in floral arrangements. Although the chrysanthemums will be dominant all other florists' flowers and plants will be freely used.

The competition in table decoration will be limited to the junior class, with fourteen entries. The seniors will have a competition in basket arrangement and there will be ten entries in this class. In addition there will be vase, plant basket and box arrangements, bouquets and corsages. There will be exhibits of pottery, baskets and various other types of containers, together with other accessories of the florist.

The Northampton and Holyoke Gardeners' and Florists' Club is to co-operate with the M. A. C. Florists' and Gardeners' Club for a joint meeting one evening of the Show, at which time some outside speaker will talk upon Floral Arrangements and Exhibits.

College Notes.

On Tuesday Paul Work, head of the Market Gardening Department at Cornell, visited the college.

On Saturday the classes in floriculture are to visit the Hartford flower stores and the A. N. Pierson houses at Cromwell.

A demonstration of apple packing under the new apple packing law was given at the Bay Road fruit farm, Amherst, last Thursday.

Tuesday was observed as Apple Day. The Pomology Department gave each student an apple and sent a basketful to each member of the Faculty.

One hundred new species have been added to the perennial collection during the past week. The work of planting has been done by the Junior class.

Stockbridge Hall was opened to classes this week. Stockbridge Hall is the new agricultural building and is now the largest building on the campus. The formal dedication of the building is to be on the evening of October 29.

Range of Greenhouses which we built for Mr. N. Grillo, Rose Grower, of Milldale, Conn. There is absolutely no shade in these houses. The Jacobs patented construction eliminated it entirely.

Any grower who wants his greenhouse built at the lowest cost, and in the shortest time, consistent with good workmanship, can get just what he desires by employing the Jacobs organization for the job. This is a fact which is conceded by many of the biggest greenhouse owners in the country.

While we have been at it almost half a century, we come to you not only with the knowledge accumulated through all this experience, but we are always right up with the times on what's what, and what's new in Greenhouses.

When you think of a greenhouse, no place in the U. S. is too far for us to go, to submit specifications and prices.

This Iron Frame Vegetable House of Zuck & Son is 75 feet wide and 458 feet long.

About Zuck & Sons, Erie, Pa.

ONE of our florist customers said to me, after reading our page Ad. about the big, Dunbar and Hopkins vegetable range at Ashtabula: "Why do you spend your good money, advertising vegetable houses to the florists?"

Our answer was: "Because the florists are fast becoming growers of vegetables."

It has been proven beyond all doubt, that a rotation of crops of flowers and vegetables can be made to pay handsomely.

William Sim of Cliftondale, Mass., proved it years and years ago.

Thos. Roland, with his new range at Revere, Mass., has proven it so conclusively, that starting with one house 50 feet wide by 600 feet long, he now has three. The one erected last year is 76 x 650 feet.

At about the time the Irondequoit vegetable growers were waking up to the advantages of the iron frame house, Zuck and Sons of Erie, Pa., built their first one 40 feet wide and 458 feet long.

It was among our first houses, that wide, which we built entirely without columns.

It proved beyond all argument that houses 72 feet wide could be built with our method of framing, with

The sides are 6 feet 6 inches high. The ridge, 24 feet 8 inches. The double sliding doors are 8 feet 5 inches x 8 feet 7 inches.

Glimpse in the first iron frame house erected for Zuck & Son. It was 40 feet wide and 458 feet long. Note its total absence of columns.

only two columns across the house.

This, then, would leave a big, broad space right down the centre of the house, such as had never been thought possible before.

This absence of columns made ploughing with a team thoroughly practical.

And so another economy point was added in favor of the big, wide houses.

The results from this big iron frame vegetable house have been a revelation to Mr. Zuck and his sons. It has opened their eyes to tremendous new possibilities in vegetable growing under glass.

Already they have under consideration some radical departures in marketing their crop, that bid fair to blaze the trail for bigger things and larger profits.

With our six sales offices in various parts of the country, it's doubtful if any other concern has anything like an equal opportunity to keep in as intimate touch with what is doing in the various growing lines; or is in quite so fortunate a position to advise with those who intend to build.

With our three factories now in operation, our deliveries are prompter than ever and freight costs more favorable.

When you are ready to talk building, say when and where and we'll be there.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Carnations

Keep the surface of the soil for the present lightly cultivated, which will give the air and sun a chance to keep it sweet. Disbudding and removing the small side shoots on the flowering stem are important matters. Every one of the buds surrounding the main one, if allowed to remain, will draw nourishment from the plant which ought to go toward developing the flower. The carnation is not a warm house plant, and while you must keep it near the 50 degree point, in order to make the growing pay, the minute you get above that, go careful. A weakened carnation plant, caused by too much heat is hardly ever restored later in the season. Let the day temperature with sunshine run up to 65 to 70 degrees.

Cocos

Where we have a call for fern dishes there is nothing that will take place of Cocos Weddeliana for the center of these dishes. Be very careful about giving them water at the roots, as they will not stand a soaked condition all the time. Give careful ventilation and keep the atmosphere humid and warm by damping down two or three times a day. Never let the night temperature fall much below 65 degrees followed by a day temperature of from 75 to 80 degrees.

Ixias

Can be grown in 5, 6 or 7-inch pans, placing six, eight and ten bulbs respectively in each pan. They do well in a mixture of fibrous loam three parts, well rotted manure one part and a little sand. Crock the pans well. After planting them give a good soaking of water, and no more until they become tolerably dry again. These pans can be plunged in a frame where they will have some protection from very hard weather. The bulbs should be brought on slowly as they do not take to hard forcing. Start them at 45 degrees and increase it until you have them standing about 55 degrees, night temperature, with a day heat of about 65 to 70.

Pot Roses for Easter

Do not forget to lift the roses intended for Easter. The best sizes to pot them in are 6, 7 or 8-inch pots. Where the roots are long or straggly prune them in somewhat. Do not fail to give proper drainage in each pot as when the spring comes they will require plenty of water. Firm the soil well among the roots. When potted give a good soaking of water. Do not prune them severely now, but cut them back a bit and just before starting them up you can head them back good. They can be given a cool pit for a couple of weeks before they are placed in a deep frame or cool shed. When placed in frames always plunge the pots so they will not break with hard freezing. During mild spells look them over for water, as they should never become too dry at the roots.

Shrubs for Spring Forcing

There is no better time for the lifting and potting of this stock for Easter forcing than now. Use pots just large enough to contain the roots. Give good drainage and good soil. After potting give a good watering and place anywhere handy to water. They will make some new roots between now and the time for very cold weather. When the winter sets in they can be placed in a cool shed or cellar until they are wanted for forcing.

Planting Violas, Daisies, Aubrieties, Myosotis, Etc.

It is time now to get all these planted in their winter quarters. Add some new soil and leaf mold to the frames, with enough of manure to make it rich and they will make better plants when needed. Give room enough and firm well around each plant. See that they have a good watering after they are all planted. Give plenty of air while the good weather lasts as this puts them in good condition to go through the winter.

Next week: Azaleas; Cinerarias; Cyclamen; Orchids; Poinsettias; Starting Bulbs cause of horticulture in America. HORTICULTURE's attitude towards Club and Society organization is well known to its readers. From its first issue, when it established the first regular department of Club and Society news in the history of florists' trade papers, up to the present time, the news of these organizations in all sections of the country has been accorded priority each week, because we believed in them as valuable up-builders of the art and welcomed the opportunity which was ours to foster and encourage them. That our zeal was not misplaced the columns of every issue of every trade journal now furnish abundant proof.

and win

It was Huxley who said "The great end of life is not knowledge but action." The gardening and floral fraternity has always been rich in men of knowledge but these have not always been disposed to give their time and active support to those institutions without whose concrete force efficient action for the general welfare is practically impossible. Well-wishers of the craft will hail with hopeful gladness the "get together" spirit which is now so unmistakably extending throughout the horticultural community at large. The time seems not far distant when the gardener or florist unaffiliated with any organization of his fellow workers will be the exception. Not only among individuals is felt this impulse to link together for the common weal, but societies and institutions that hitherto have preferred to "flock by themselves" are also reaching out to one another in neighborly collegueship. It is not to be expected that the horticultural millenium will at once dawn but that things are shaping themselves in the right direction for the prestige and influence of our profession cannot be questioned. And organization has been and must continue to be the best motive power.

Reporting
the show

Exhibition time is now on and the papers which undertake to report the shows have their hands full. A word to the judges who make the awards and to the secretaries who report them may not be amiss here and now. Presumably the judges would like to have their verdicts recorded in such shape as to be read with interest and benefit and, also, no doubt, the secretaries who work so hard in copying and sending out these reports feel likewise. All should realize that a bare record of the names of winners in the various classes is of very limited interest to the majority of the readers of a paper such as HORTICULTURE. What they are anxious to know and will read with avidity is the names and qualities of the winning exhibits. It is not so much who grew and won 1st for an exhibit of white chrysanthemums or anything else as it is what variety he won with and against what variety or varieties and if this is all made clear in the judges' report it will in no way impair the advertising value of the triumph, but will accentuate it rather, for the note will be perused and memorized by many readers who would not otherwise take the trouble to scan it. Most secretaries entrusted with the duty of giving publicity to show awards do it according to the best light they have, at a most arduous and trying time. It is the duty first of the judges to give them the material, especially in the leading classes, on which they can draw to make their account of the competition and its results such as will be worth printing and disseminating and secretaries should not forget that it is a strenuous time in the office of a news journal when show reports are crowding in and putting the editor to his wits' end in the effort to give to all the attention they merit. So please help all you can by sending a clean, careful and instructive story about your show—one to which you can sign your name for publication and feel proud of it.

the organizations

A most promising augury for the future was betokened in the close attention and cordial interest manifested at the Flower Exchange dinner in Boston last Saturday evening when President Farquhar of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society made his frank and timely appeal for a closer sympathy and co-operation between the commercial florists and that time-honored organization. The remarks by President Bartsch of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club plainly voiced the growing feeling of filial obligation also among the members of the club to the grand old mother society which for over three-quarters of a century has so staunchly championed the

Ventilation

With the air outside becoming cold and colder it will be necessary to be very careful with the ventilators in the morning, for the days of summer are gone and it will not do to put air on several inches at a time. It will be necessary to add air very slowly as the houses go up. As the temperature at night will still run around 62, with air, more air can be put on at 64 in the morning, then more at 68 and then again at 72. Care should be taken not to apply too much air at the one time, so as not to chill the houses. On clear mornings the heat can be turned off at 66—that is the steam, for if hot water is used as well, the boilers had better be stopped sooner, for the water will stay warm for some time and the pipes will radiate heat for quite a while after the boilers are stopped off. On chilly, raw, cloudy days, it may be necessary to keep a pipe of steam in the houses all day, but care should be taken that the houses are not allowed to get too warm. 66 to 68 is all the heat that will be needed and if it is allowed to get warmer inside, the roses will be apt to become soft and will suffer, even if they do not get any mildew at the time. We find that the roses will keep clear of it if they are kept hardy all the time with plenty of air to keep the atmosphere in the houses sweet and clear. There may be times when a strong wind blows right in and we are tempted to close the vents a little, but this should not be done. In wide houses with ventilators on both sides of the ridge it will be well to have a weather vane to show which way the wind is blowing, and the air put on the opposite side. When all the air that can be put on the one side is not sufficient to keep the house cool then a little can be added on the other side, but with the wind blowing hard it will be best to apply only about half as much air on this side as on the other. There is little to gain by carrying a whole lot of air on wet foggy days. Apply only enough to insure a circulation through the houses and let it go at that, for the air inside on these days is drier and healthier than the moisture-laden air outside.

The Houses at Night

Any grower who is fortunate enough to have a real good night fireman should appreciate it and see that the man is paid what he is worth for if there are any very important men on the place the night man is one of these providing he does his work well and sleeps when he should sleep—that is in the day time. A good many growers will find that their roses will do much better if they are cared for properly at night. To have the houses going up and down is the worst that could happen. The houses should be gradually brought down to their night temperature and then they should be kept there and the heat should never vary more than two degrees. One degree is enough to indicate that the houses are going up or down and before they drop more the fault should be remedied. On a rose-growing range there should be little difficulty in keeping the houses where they should be and if there is a faulty heating system the sooner it is corrected the better. To eliminate all guess work the hot water boilers should be equipped with thermometers to register the heat of the water. Then there should be a good thermometer set up on a post on the north side of the place in an exposed position so that any change in the temperature outside will be recorded as soon as it occurs. Then, knowing the heat in the pipes whether it is steam or hot water and the number of pipes to the different houses, it should not be difficult to keep the regular temperature by watching the thermometer outside closely. A large private place growing everything in flowers, fruits and vegetables, which called for varied temperatures in the different departments was successfully heated from the same place and same battery of boilers by a night man who took care to study out the way to do it right. By knowing just how many turns of a valve or how many pipes are needed to a house to keep it where it should be when the thermometer outside registered a certain temperature it was a simple matter to speed up or slacken up the boilers if the temperature outside went up or down, and before the houses went either way the required heat was already there. The thermometer outside should be watched as much as the thermometer inside, for it is the temperature outside that drops or goes up before the houses change, taking it for granted of course that the heat is kept uniform. It is poor policy to open and close pipes, as then the house will go up and down. It is far better to regulate the heat in the pipes until of course they are not sufficient to carry the temperature, and then more must be added. Even this can be foreseen by the careful watchman who will know just how long the pipes going will keep the house up where it should be. Look after the houses well at night, for there is no use in worrying to death in the daytime, and then letting them run "every which way" at night.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW

The work of preparation for the Fourth National Flower Show, Philadelphia, March 25 to April 2, next, received a great impetus through the three-day visit in Philadelphia of the National Flower Show Committee, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, October 18, 19 and 20. With the exception of W. N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill., the whole of the committee, with President Patrick Welch of the S. A. F. and O. H., were present.

Early on Monday morning the members of the committee were greeted by Chairman George Asmus of Chicago, at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, and the sub-committee on schedule, Chairman Asmus, C. H. Totty, Thomas Roland, Adolph Farenwald and Secretary John Young, at once adjourned to Parlor 215, where the preparation of the Second Preliminary Schedule was at once proceeded with.

President S. S. Pennock, of the American Rose Society, was also present. Secretary Young presented a list of special prizes offered for various exhibits, and the disposition of them through the schedule occupied considerable time. In the section for private growers a class was added covering a group of flowering and foliage plants, arranged for effect, to occupy 25 sq. ft., the stock shown to be produced from 2500 sq. ft. of glass or less, the exhibitors to be members of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia. This class will be appreciated by private gardeners who are limited to a very small area of glass for their products. In the commercial section a class was added for a group of Crotons, arranged for effect, to cover 100 sq. ft., with prizes of $150 and $100. The premium list for the Carnation section was approved, and many other matters settled.

The sub-committee on schedule were again in session in the afternoon, and at this meeting there were present many of the chairmen of the local committees, and the gathering eventually merged into a meeting of the local executive committee, W. P. Craig, Arthur Niessen, secretary and treasurer of the local executive committee, Robert Craig, E. J. Fancourt, W. F. Therkildsen, Fred Cowperthwaite, Chas. Grakelow, S. S. Pennock, John P. Habermehl, Louis Burk, Wm. Kleinheinz, C. H. Fox, J. Otto Thilow and Franklin Barrett. All made reports for their respective committees, which showed the work was progressing in a most satisfactory manner. Mr. Therkildsen, as chairman of the committee on publicity, presented samples of advertising "stickers" for use on stationery, packages, and in other ways, 250,000 of which had been ordered, and which could be obtained by anyone who could use them to advantage. He also displayed samples of large posters, and two sizes of card posters, all of which were approved by the committee and adopted. Mr. Therkildsen's report was very interesting, and covered in detail the work and plans of his committee. In closing, he appealed to all who could do so to furnish him with articles and photographs covering floricultural subjects, and adapted for use in his campaign of publicity. Mr. Thilow, for the Committee on Lectures, reported that his programme was practically complete; it provided for moving pictures each afternoon and illustrated lectures each evening. Mr. Grakelow, for the Committee on Special Features, outlined what his committee aimed to achieve, and some novel show features are now expected to evolve from the committee. Mr. Barrett, for the Committee on Aquariums, promised a very extensive line of exhibits in the Aquarium section.

On Tuesday morning there was a full meeting of the National Flower Show Committee, at the Bellevue-Stratford, there being present Chairman George Asmus, Secretary John Young, Treasurer W. F. Kasting, A. Farenwald, C. H. Totty, Thomas Roland, Wm. P. Craig, and Pres. Patrick Welch. Local Executive Secretary Arthur A. Niessen was also present. Secretary Young reported that the Guarantee Fund was practically complete, that space aggregating over $6,000 had been already reserved in the trade section, and that advertising contracts amounting to over $1,200 had been booked for the official Souvenir Programme. In all probability, he said, every available foot of space for trade exhibits would be sold. The committee voted that a call for 50 per cent. of the amounts subscribed to the Guarantee Fund be made on February 1 next. The recommendations of the various committees made at the meeting of the Local Executive Committee were considered, and appropriations made to cover the requirements of such committees. The Local Executive Committee was authorized to secure an office in a central location, and to employ the necessary clerical help for the committees. The price for trade tickets was fixed at 25c. each, not less than 25 tickets to be sold to anyone at this price. C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., was appointed chairman of the Board of Jurors, and Wm. Graham, of Philadelphia, was appointed Manager of the Show.

In the afternoon the committee, with many of the chairmen of the local committees, visited Convention Hall and inspected it thoroughly. With the information now available as to the requirements of the competitive exhibits in point of space, it was obvious that more room would be required than was afforded by the present lay-out so it was decided to move the trade exhibits a little distance from the marked central area of the hall, to increase the room for the competitive exhibits. The secretary was instructed to notify any exhibitor who had made a reservation whose plans might be affected by the change, that the rearrangement was made necessary by the great number of competitive exhibits promised, and the elaborate scale on which many of them are to be staged, all adding to the attractiveness of the exhibition. If found necessary, the secretary was authorized to issue a new plan.

Space was allotted for booths for the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and the Garden Clubs of Philadelphia and vicinity, for the lecture room, and for the exhibits of aquaria.

On Tuesday evening the members of the National Flower Show Committee were guests of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia at a special meeting of the Club held in its rooms, President Burton of the Club surrendering the gavel to Chairman Asmus of the Flower Show Committee. The forthcoming Fourth National Flower Show was, of course, the whole subject of the program, and tremendous enthusiasm in the project was evoked. The spirit of optimism prevailed, and if there was a pessimist anywhere in the neighborhood he very discreetly kept away. It was a "get together" meeting, if ever there was one. Speeches came fast and thick, and applause was unsparred. It was a meeting long to be remembered and spoke volumes for the success of the Show.

R. C. KERR RESIGNS AS DIRECTOR.

Mr. Patrick Welch.

Pres. S. A. F.

Dear Mr. Welch,

Please accept my resignation as a director of the S. A. F., to become effective January 1, 1916, due to my election as vice-president of the S. A. F. at San Francisco, which office becomes effective at that time.

In resigning this office I want to express to you my gratefulness for being appointed on the Board of Directors of the S. A. F. I certainly have felt greatly honored. It has been the means of the southern florists coming in for recognition in this great organization. We have felt the need of this society for many years, but failed to develop enough interest in the South or to take sufficient interest in its affairs to deserve recognition in the past. If I could show you the many letters received from the florists through the South it would prove to you their appreciation also in this matter.

Yours for a large southern membership.

R. C. KERR.

A CORRECTION.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

I wish to correct an error I made in giving you the notice of the next F. T. D. meeting. Kindly insert it thus:

"The meeting of The Florists' Telegraph Delivery will be held November 11 at 9 A. M., Hotel Hollenden, Cleveland, Ohio," instead of at the Hotel Statler as I gave you in a previous notice. If this has already been inserted in your columns, kindly make correction in your next issue and greatly oblige

Yours very truly,
ALBERT POCHOLON.

M. BARKER,
Chairman Publicity Committee.

An item of unusual interest in connection with the Chicago Fall Flower Festival is the 25 silver cups being donated by the greenhouse manufacturers of Chicago. Instead of taking space in the Coliseum Annex, making trade exhibits of greenhouses and greenhouse appliances, the same as is usually done at the Annual Convention of the S. A. F., the greenhouse manufacturers of Chicago suggested that the space be sold to others and that a contribution of $500.00 be collected among the manufacturers and donated to the show to be used as prizes.

The following greenhouse manufacturers held a meeting Wednesday, October 13, at noon, at the Grand Pacific Hotel: Lord & Burnham Co., Foley Mfg. Co., Garland Mfg. Co., Ickes

Braun Mill Co., A. Dietsch & Co. and John C. Moninger Co.

Prior to the meeting the manufacturers had luncheon. The following people were on hand to represent the various firms: P. J. Foley, Fred Sykes, Fred Dietsch, E. F. Kurowski, D. B. Dulmage and P. L. McKee.

It was the general opinion that this being the first Chicago show for some years, it was very necessary to make it a success and that the greenhouse manufacturers of this city ought to contribute to it on account of its being a local show and of direct interest to the Chicago firms. A subscription was taken and a fund of $500.00 was made up for the purchase of the cups.

It is expected that the action of the greenhouse manufacturers in getting together in this way and making a bulk contribution will set a precedent for others of the allied trades and the future may bring more concerted action in this direction.

P. L. McKee was given authority to collect the funds, arrange for publicity and distribution of the prizes. The cups will be made shortly and it is expected that they will be exhibited in one of the large stores downtown prior to the opening of the show. When the show opens, the plan is to have the cups in a large glass case on exhibition. The names of all of the donors will be engraved on the cups as well as the name of the prize and a space left for the name of the winner. Winners of the prizes can have their names engraved on the cups without any charge.

More complete details as to prizes on which the various cups have been placed, kind of cups, values, etc., will be given later.

CLEVELAND FLOWER SHOW.

Christening the chrysanthemum is the latest duty assumed by the President of the United States. During the present week President Wilson is to lay aside the job of successfully steering of the Ship of State long enough to gave a name to a new variety of chrysanthemum that will be exhibited for the first time at the Cleveland Flower Show.

Specimen blooms of the latest product of Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., were sent to the White House the past week. A letter received by E. Prentiss Baldwin, chairman of the executive committee of the Cleveland Show states that the president will take pleasure in selecting a name for the flower. The announcement of the new variety will be made prior to the opening of the show. The flower is a rich golden color differing from the usual yellow varieties in that the color deepens at the centre of the blossom. Cleveland florists who have seen blooms say it is one of the most beautiful yet produced. Samples were received at the office of the Flower Show Committee in Cleveland the past week.

The local committees have completed the program for the week of the Show and provision is made for the entertainment of the delegates to the several organization meetings to be held in Cleveland during the Show.

The complete program follows:

Outline of Meetings.

November 10.—Official opening of show to the public at 1 P. M.

November 11.—Meeting of Florists' Telegraph Delivery at 11 A. M. The Bowling Tournament will be held at the Erie Bowling Alleys; time to be announced next week. Visiting lady florists and wives of exhibitors to be given a "Pink Tea" with some novel entertainment features.

November 12.—Meeting of the American Rose Society. Meeting of Executive Committee of the American Carnation Society. In the evening a banquet to the visiting florists and exhibitors. Also on Friday the adjourned meeting of the Ohio Gladiolus Society.

November 13.—Saturday evening, a smoker for all visiting florists and exhibitors.

November 14.—Sunday; the show will close at 10 P. M.

Meetings of all societies will be held in the rooms of Cleveland Florists' Club at Hollenden Hotel. Schedule of time of meetings will be announced next week.

Among the many additional classes in the prize list for the Cleveland

Flower Show is the following, received too late for printed schedule. Class 162A—150 lily of the valley, any greens allowed; flowers must be grown and arranged by exhibitor; prizes $12, $8, $5, by Chas. Schwake Co., New York. Cottage Gardens Co. have drawn honors by being the first to make entries in the big show.

The decorating committee met on Tuesday, Oct. 26 and Chairman F. C. W. Brown outlined the final plans for securing novel effects. The executive committee met on Wednesday with Chairman Baldwin, Mrs. L. Dean Holden, Mrs. A. S. Ingalls, General Chairman H. P. Knoble and Secretary F. A. Friedley present and plans were forwarded for making the tea garden a prominent social feature of the show.

MASSACHUSETTS HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Grand Autumn Flower Show.

The last of the year's flower shows at Horticultural Hall will be held on Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, November 4 to 7. While chrysanthemums will be the chief feature of this show there will be in addition large displays of foliage and flowering plants, evergreen trees and shrubs, orchids, carnations, and seasonable fruits and vegetables.

Other attractive features will be the artistic displays of chrysanthemums arranged for decorative effect showing the various ways the flowers can be used for home decoration. The collections of apples and pears especially will be on a large scale and will show the possibilities in the culture of fruit in New England. Prizes amounting to $2100.00, are offered at this exhibition which will be the largest show of the year.

The exhibition will open on Thursday, November 4, at 12 o'clock, continuing through Friday and Saturday from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m., and on Sunday, from 1 to 10 p. m. The Boston Orchestra will give concerts every afternoon and evening from 2 to 5 and from 7 to 10 o'clock.

SAN FRANCISCO FALL FLOWER SHOW.

The Grand Fall Flower Show was opened in the Palace of Horticulture at the Panama-Pacific Exposition on October 21st, with about the finest showing of flowers ever assembled for exhibition purposes in this city. The opening day was "Horticulture Day" at the exposition. That special feature had been well advertised, which brought a large and enthusiastic attendance. The distribution of quantities of flower seeds, ferns, cut flowers, etc., donated by exhibitors, created quite a sensation. All available floor space is utilized for the display, and special features have been arranged for each day of the show, which will last a week. Seven bands have been engaged to furnish music every afternoon and evening in the various sections, with ten Spanish and eight Hawaiian singers, and Miss Pauline Turner, soprano, contributing songs. The show will be open until 10 o'clock each evening.

THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF NEW YORK.

The Fall Exhibition of this society will be held November 4th to 7th at the American Museum of Natural History, 77th street and Columbus avenue. A cordial invitation is extended to all to make exhibits at this, the largest fall exhibition in this city or its vicinity. Schedules will be sent upon application to the secretary, George V. Nash, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, N. Y. City.

GEORGE V. NASH, Secretary.

COUNTRY FAIR FRUIT AND FLOWER SHOW.

The displays of vegetables, fruit and flowers, as departments of Chester I. Campbell's Country Fair at Mechanics' Hall, Boston, this week, formed a large and interesting section of the show on the main floor. The flower show was under the auspices of the Co-operative Flower Market and managed by Norris F. Comley. James Wheeler acted as judge.

W. H. Elliott was represented by a fine table of roses in vases and a collection of market chrysanthemum plants. E. F. Dwyer & Son made a brilliant showing of dahlias. Where they got them at this late date in such unblemished condition is a mystery. The carnation growers responded nobly, Patten & Co. showed large vases of ten leading varieties.

There were several dinner tables prettily decorated. One with centre piece of oncidiums and lily of the valley impressed us especially with its dainty elegance. One of yellow and white pompon chrysanthemum made a rich effect with croton foliage. Sweetheart roses and Bouvardia Humboldtii were very pretty in another. A very creditable collection of conifers in pots and tubs was shown by the Breck-Robinson Co. of Lexington.

The apple displays made the largest item. There were hundreds of boxes all carefully packed and showing all the qualities of perfect fruit. The Maine exhibit was in barrels. Vermont made a big showing as did New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, the latter winning first honors.

The array of vegetables by the Boston Market Gardeners' Association was very extensive and of high quality. Each variety was shown in a bushel box as packed for market. The Essex County Training School made a fine showing in this department.

In the flower section 1st prize for a table decoration was won by Henry R. Comley and 2d by Wax Bros. First prize for general display of cut flowers went to E. F. Dwyer.

A special prize has been offered Class 32, by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for the most effectively arranged basket of cut chrysanthemums at the Tarrytown Horticultural Society's exhibition. Any foliage may be used. 1st, $10.00; 2nd, $6.00; 3rd, $4.00 Exhibit to be in place November 3rd at 1 P. M. Entries must reach the secretary, E. W. Neubrand, Tarrytown, N. Y., on or before October 30th.

BOSTON FLOWER EXCHANGE.

Annual Meeting and Banquet.

On Saturday evening, October 23, this pleasant annual affair took place at Young's Hotel in the big banquet hall. As usual it took the form of a cheery reunion and joyous celebration of the continued prosperity of the institution as shown by the treasurer's balance sheet. This year it seemed to be even more than ever before a gathering of men with mind at ease, cheerily complacent and care free.

"Gladness in every face express'd,
Their eyes before their tongues confess'd.
Friends to congratulate their friends made haste
And long inveterate foes saluted as they pass'd."

President Stickel presided with suave dignity, the amplification of nearly a quarter century of practice on the same job. J. K. M. L. Farquhar, president of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, and Herman Bartsch, president of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, were the guests of honor. Patrick Welch, president of the Society of American Florists had an invitation also, but being out of town was unable to be present, a telegram announcing his regret being read by the chairman.

The menu was of rare excellence and the hundred or more gentlemen present did full justice to it, occasional breaking out into chorus when the orchestra played some popular melody.

All through the speech making, from first to last the text and sentiment was "get together." Organization and co-operation between individuals and between associations, in flower shows and society work, received a splendid impetus and the results will be far-reaching. Mr. Farquhar started the ball with a vigorous and eloquent plea for a more hearty support for the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and this keynote was dominant to the end. W. H. Elliott expressed a message of cordial good will from the rival market of which he is president. Herman Bartsch was convincing and humorous as always. Wm. J. Stewart, editor of HORTICULTURE, William Nicholson, W. N. Craig, secretary of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, Henry Robinson, Jr., Peter Fisher, J. Miller, A. Leuthy, W. Capstick, H. L. Cameron, A. S. Parker, John Walsh, Manager Thurston of the Market, M. A. Patten, J. T. Butterworth, all followed with words of wit or wisdom. Secretary Craig created a novel diversion by extolling woman suffrage and a vote on this proposition being called for he was rewarded with a count of two to one in favor. A surprise of the evening was a whirlwind speech on the superiority of the self-made man by Henry Robinson, Jr., 17 years old, which captured the house. The business meeting which followed the banquet was brief and harmonious.

The following named directors were unanimously chosen: W. C. Stickel, S. J. Goddard, L. W. Mann, A. Christensen, G. Cartwright, A. S. Parker, C. A. Paine, A. A. Pembroke and H. Bartsch.

The tables were gorgeous with the finest flower novelties of the season.

MASSACHUSETTS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE NOTES.

A. E. Wilkins is working at The Flower Shop at Pittsfield. Mr. Wilkins graduated with the class of 1915.

During the past week the Committee on the College of the State Board of Agriculture inspected the greenhouses at M. A. C.

M. Headle, '13, of Springfield, who is about to open a new flower store in Springfield, was a visitor on the campus this week.

Miss G. M. White, who graduated from the college last year has now taken up work with Mrs. Merrill at the latter's flower shop in Brookline.

Last Wednesday, Prof. A. H. Nehrling gave a talk on his trip to the Panama-Pacific Exposition to The Florists' and Gardeners' Club of M. A. C.

Last Saturday the classes in Floriculture visited the Hartford flower stores. At each place visited they were very courteously received. At the Pierson range at Cromwell, where the afternoon was spent, Mr. Beers took the students on a tour of the range.

THE RHODODENDRON LACE BUG.

Rhododendrons are becoming such popular shrubs and so many improvements in varieties are being made that a little information on one of its worst insect enemies would not be amiss at this time. In view of the damage done by the Rhododendron Lace Bug in certain parts this summer, a few notes on their habits, control, etc., will probably be welcomed by many growers of this showy evergreen.

The Rhododendron Lace Bug, Leptobyrza explanata (Heid.) is about one-eighth of an inch long. The body is oval in shape and shiny black, while its beautiful and delicate veined wings have the appearance of very fine lace with sharply defined brown spots near the middle.

The eggs are laid in late fall in the tissue of the leaf, for the most part along the mid-rib. The eggs hatch in May and the newly hatched young are whitish in color and spineless. The partially matured nymphs may be found on the under side of the leaves early in July. These latter are equipped with curious spines along the sides of the body.

The insect lives on the under side of the leaves where it sucks the sap. Their work causes a brown spotting of the leaves followed by more or less serious injury to the foliage. The adults may be found in July and August. The insect is a native form found abundantly on the Kalmias and Rhododendron maximum. It also attacks the cultivated Rhododendrons. The insect may be found all along the Atlantic seaboard. Boston, however, seems to be its northern limit.

Whale-oil soap solution applied at the rate of one pound to nine gallons of water to the underside of the foliage in May or June will serve to keep them down.

LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS' CLUB.

At one o'clock on Thursday afternoon, Oct. 21st, a number of the fraternity were dotted at various points of Center Square anxiously looking for a leader. Mr. Nagle who according to his official title should have led the party was busy at his new houses getting things into shape for a cold snap, and the President who was to have taken his place was lined up with a salesman from somewhere in the U. S. and so intent on buying a bill of goods that he could not get away. The consequence was the holding of an indignation meeting on the Square and arranging the visiting trip to suit ourselves.

The writer appointed himself a committee of one to meet the train which brought our guest of honor, Robert Pyle, of West Grove, Pa. Charles M. Weaver kindly volunteered the use of his car and we soon caught up to the main party, stopping first at The Wheatland Greenhouses where carnations are looking good and the best Chrysolora chrysanthemums were being cut that are shipped from this section. The next stop was at our own Thomas Frie's place where there is a continual interchange of stock and a use of space that is always a revelation to a stranger, we having gotten accustomed to seeing three times the quantity of stock turned out from this place that is usually produced from the same amount of glass.

President Barr met us at his greenhouses and did the honors for the rest of the afternoon. His place shows the usual variety grown by a retail man for his store trade, the most of it very good and carnations exceptionally good. Mr. Barr takes much pride in his nursery stock and deservedly so as he certainly has some very fine specimens.

At the writer's place the strangers were a bit surprised at the number of geraniums under way and more surprised at the beauty of Buddleia varialis flocking round it like a bunch of butterflies, but there the simile ends for the florist is more like the busy bee, working hard to produce the money that the other fellow takes away from him in exchange for new houses, etc., as was witnessed at Rudolph Nagle's where two very fine houses are in the course of erection. He had some very good stock of Pelargonium Winter Cheer, a house of pompons just coming into good shape, several houses of early chrysanthemums that are cut and a few midseason ones coming on.

The next point was the establishment of H. D. Rohrer. Under the guidance of his two sons Harry K. and Abram we found the usual stock of carnations coming into shape and several houses of Bonaffon chrysanthemums, a big house of Chrysolora, also lots of primulas, myosotis and sweet peas.

At Goldbach's we found the place planted up for a continuous store supply. Mrs. Goldbach devotes her time to the store in the city and I believe would sell this growing end of the business if she could get a buyer. In a little potting-bench discussion it was found that every one of the party would be willing to sell out if they could find a buyer; that is—every one excepting the baby of the crowd. Edward Beck, who is too new at the business to realize what he is up against. A little more experience and he will be with the majority. Siebold was next in line and here we found some thirty varieties of geraniums being grown for the wholesale trade and a bench of handsome begonia, with a few novelties that are being kept sub rosa until further developed. They also have just finished harvesting an immense crop of Salvia Zurich seed which will be put on the market with a germination test of 95 per cent. good.

The next was a round table at the Brunswick with President B. F. Barr, Treasurer Harry K. Rohrer, Ex-Officio Albert M. Herr, Guest of Honor Robert Pyle. T. J. Nolan and D. T. Connor who act as sort of connecting links between the outside world and the Club are too well known to need a title. This group was joined later by R. L. Mowbray, assistant treasurer of the Dingee Conard Co. The rest of the 23 who were on the visiting trip scattered to various points of interest until time for the regular Club meeting, which started at 7.30, with an attendance of some forty members which was augmented during the next hour until seating capacity was exhausted. The Dablia Show committee reported what they had accomplished at the Fair. The visiting committee reported that they had under consideration a trip to Reading providing that city had a flower show and if not Mannheim would be the attraction for November.

Robert Pyle gave us a delightful travel talk and after the lecture he showed us some photographs made during the tour and well deserved the unanimous vote of thanks given him for the lecture. When we can get such men as Mr. Pyle to give us a talk and when he expresses his delight with the Club and its form of management we begin to swell up with pride—not the pride that goeth before a fall for ours is an ambitious pride, but if we want to be considered as having any wisdom I guess I'd better shut up for this time.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

A new issue of "Flower Talks by Maurice Fuld," originally published in 1914, has been sent out, substantially bound in attractive blue covers, for 1915.

Bulletin No. 1, of the American Dahlia Society has been received. It deals mainly with the details of the first exhibition of the society held in New York last month and the proceedings of the annual meeting. A strong bid for membership accessions is made and, we understand, responses are many, from all sections.

We recently published some notes on the book of Hybrid Orchids just sent out by Sander & Sons, St. Albans, England. We neglected to mention at the time that we can supply copies of this book at the publishers' price, $5.00, postpaid. No one interested in orchids and their production can get along without this elaborate work. It has no peer and is indispensable.

Among the valuable papers presented at the Convention and here given in full are the following: "The Value of Technical Training to a Seedsman," by Prof. H. E. A GREAT ILLINOIS NURSERY.

A WINTER WINDOW-BOX

As filled by the D. Hill Nursery Co.

A revelation awaits one who has never visited the D. Hill Nursery Co.'s plant at Dundee, Ill. Lying as it does in the beautiful Fox River Valley, thirty-five miles northwest of Chicago, it makes a delightful trip where pleasure and profit can be combined. One will find here the largest nurseries in this country, with every detail carefully looked after by efficient men, some of whom are graduates of our highest schools of learning, and will ties and for grafting, and cold slat covered frames for most of the transplanted seed stock.

E. B. Stedman, assistant superintendent, who conducts visitors over the place, is a graduate of the Forestry Department of Ann Arbor and in reply to a question as to whether he found the course of study of practical value, replied with enthusiasm, that everything he had learned in the University he had found of real value in his work. Visitors drive under long rows of European larch and beside native white pines and see the great blocks of different kinds of evergreen and forest trees. An extra fine lot of Scotch pine, grown from seed; another of Black Hill spruce; Red cedar from the Platte River Valley were seen, and what remained of a block of Norway spruce which at the opening of the season contained one million trees. There are many species and varieties of juniper, from the low creeping to the tall pyramidal forms, and graceful native hemlocks and blocks of many other evergreens. All imported varieties are thoroughly tested to prove their adaptability to our climate before sending out.

A special feature is the window box of hardy evergreens for winter use. With the development of the outdoor summer boxes, so popular in the downtown districts of Chicago, there has followed a demand for something to take their place in winter and the boxes sent out by the D. Hill Nursery Co. are graceful and artistic and do not have the stilted effect so often seen.

Mr. Hill has taken a large space at the Grand Floral Festival and some new features will be introduced which will be a welcome addition to the nursery exhibits.

D. HILL,

get an idea of what can be done in developing a big business when scientific knowledge goes hand in hand with nature.

The firm consists of D. Hill, his three sons A. H., G. W. and V. D. and one daughter, all active. Their leading specialty is hardy evergreens and a second is trees for reforestation. The business was founded in a small way, on a part of its present site, by Wm. Hill, uncle of D. Hill, in 1855, but was developed and brought to its high state by the present firm. The nurseries include 500 acres, 400 of which are devoted to stock and the rest to general purposes.

Two large electric lighted service sheds are used for receiving, sorting and packing stock and another will be built this winter. Glass-covered houses are used for propagating fancy varie-

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

CHICAGO.

D. D. P. Roy, the latest to enter the seed, bulb and plant business in Chicago, is now well established in his office at 168 N. Michigan avenue and getting his share of the fall business.

The Grand Floral Festival posters are now in the hands of the florists and the little posterettes are adorning business envelopes going out of the flower stores, wholesale and retail.

Mrs. H. A. Simpson is spending a couple of weeks with relatives at Rockford, Ill. During her absence the business is looked after by C. B. Le Mer, who has been right hand man here for a number of years.

Fred J. Wolfram is the proprietor of a new firm which opened a store known as The Warrington Flower Shop, in the Warrington Theatre Building in Oak Park, October 23. Mr. Wolfram was formerly with A. Lange.

A. Henderson reports the arrival of all kinds of bulbs to date and says no difficulty has been experienced in getting them. The market, however, is not very well supplied, owing to two causes, conservative importing and an unusually good demand.

The flower store at 23 S. Crawford avenue has been purchased by A. L. and H. E. Ackenbach and the name changed from The Clark to The Crawford Flower Shop. Mr. Ackenbach was formerly with A. Frauenfelder, and for four years manager of The Flower Shop at Racine, Wis.

R. R. Brenton, who has charge of the publicity end of the Floral Festival, secured good space in the large local papers this week, showing that the people are in a mood to respond to the idea of large, well-directed floral exhibits. There is no doubt but many miss this event when it fails to appear annually.

The advance orders from the South which always uses an extra amount of flowers for All Souls' and All Saints' days, the 28th and 29th of October, are reported by our large shipping houses to be very satisfactory. The usual number of telegraph orders at the last minute are also expected and seldom fail to arrive.

One of the large wholesale houses is offering a special prize to the one who can show the most attractive, original way of arranging flowers for personal adornment. This is a good move and it is to be hoped some good ideas will be brought out, for the new dances have made impossible the usual corsage, and the conventional bride's bouquet has been in "lo! these many years," while the fad of last year for the single flower is not much support to the average florist.

D. D. P. Roy, who has just returned from Lake Geneva, Wis., says the superintendents of the large estates there are taking a lively interest in the coming show. The usual local exhibition at Lake Geneva has been abandoned and all effort turned to the Chicago affair. Among the prominent exhibitors will be A. J. Smith, with J. J. Mitchell; Axel Johnson, with A. F. T. Junkin; Wm. Longland, with C. L. Hutchinson; Robt. Blackwood, with Mrs. A. C. Allerton, and Miles Barrett, with M. A. Ryerson.

Phil Schupp has signed a five-year lease for his firm, J. A. Budlong, for a space in the new LeMoyné building, covering 1,600 square feet of floor space. Should this not prove sufficient, space may be taken in the basement also. The Chicago Flower Growers' Association, which signed a lease two weeks ago, covering the same period, has the adjoining rooms and both firms will move into their new quarters the first week in November. This makes five, all doing a large business, to go into this new building.

PHILADELPHIA.

John Burton has been suffering for the past week with a severe attack of the gripe.

W. Atlee Burpee has returned from Wernersville and is reported as progressing favorably.

Alfred Campbell reports good success with disbudded outdoor chrysanthemums this season. In some cases they bring better prices than indoor stock. They are very hard and great keepers.

The annual Chrysanthemum Show will open Nov. 9th, and will last four days. This is one week later than usual; the reason evidently being to escape election day (Nov. 2) which has an effect on the box office. The prospects are for a good show, in all departments; but we hear of nothing sensational or out of the ordinary.

Felix X. Murphy, the popular Kensington florist is back to business again "firm on duty as a rock," after having successfully piloted the "Phillys" to a pennant—their first in about thirty years. Many people are under the impression that Pat Moran was the man, but this is a great mistake. There is always a power behind the throne.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club (Nov. 2) promises to be a lively one, the subject assigned being: "Is it good for the business at large to keep flower vendors off the street." William Graham has the affirmative and Robert Craig, Junior, the negative, so we may look for an able presentation on the question from both points of view.

Samuel S. Pennock reports that the appeal to help Rev. Geo. Schoener, of Brooks, Oregon, the great and unselfish amateur rosarian, published in our last week's issue has already borne good results. The first one was two dollars which came on Saturday (almost as soon as the paper) from a struggling lady florist in New England. That shows the right spirit. Every little helps. Those with greater means are contributing accordingly but much or little, the feeling heart is the great thing.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Frank Good, who for some time has been manager for Fred H. Kramer, has relinquished that position and is said to have obtained employment in New York City.

Walter L. Hawley, of Gude Bros., spent several days last week with relatives in Brooklyn, N. Y. He also visited a number of the wholesale and retail establishments in the metropolis.

The store of Fred H. Kramer is being materially improved by the extension of his display window across the space formerly occupied by the entrance to the floors above. This will increase the length of the window by about eleven feet.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club is scheduled for Tuesday evening, November 2. It is the plan of the officers to extend an invitation to growers of roses, chrysanthemums and carnations to display vases of novelties at that time. Following the usual business meeting there will be an informal talk on plant production under existing conditions.

NEW YORK.

A new company to be known as Hanft Bros. has opened up a retail store on Madison Ave., near 62nd street.

John Miesem and John Donaldson made an official visit to C. W. Scott last Saturday and Sunday to inspect Mr. Scott's new and extensive estate at Montrose on the Hudson, near Fishkill.

Mr. Canning is wondering how to plan to get his 17ft.-wide trained chrysanthemum plants into the Museum Building this year. We understand that the specimens to be exhibited this year are even finer than those of last year.

A welcome visitor at Secretary John Young's this week was J. K. M. L. Farquhar of Boston, who signed up for a big block of space for the National Flower Show at Philadelphia. Mr. Young will be manager of the exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York in the Museum of Natural History next week.

ST. LOUIS.

The Foster Floral Co. are also moving. Their new location is at 6th and Locust streets.

Mullanphy Floral Co. are moving this week to their new location a block away. They will have an attractive store, with all new fixtures, which show to a great advantage.

The county growers and friends of Oscar C. May extended their sympathy to him last week. Mr. May's mother died and the funeral took place October 24. Many beautiful floral emblems were sent by members of the trade.

PITTSBURGH.

The display of pitcher plants now in full bloom at the Phipps Conservatory is said to be the largest exhibition of this species in the country.

By virtue of a proclamation issued by Nathan C. Schaeffer, superintendent of public instruction in Pennsylvania, last Thursday was observed as the autumn Arbor Day of the Commonwealth, and marked the addition of many newly planted trees in this section. By legislative action enactment, the study of birds and their habits was added to the duties of Arbor Day, for "there is no song of birds in a treeless land."

On last Sunday the private conservatories of Henry J. Heinz, at "Greenlawn," were thrown open to the public, the occasion being Mr. Heinz's annual chrysanthemum show. About 2,000 chrysanthemums in bloom have been grown at the Heinz conservatories this year, and now make a magnificent and varied showing. Hundreds of people were present on this occasion and continue to come in from day to day.

Superintendent George W. Burke of the Bureau of Parks has announced that the annual chrysanthemum show at the Phipps Conservatory, Schenley Park, and West Park, will be postponed until November 7th. The exhibit will be open daily from 9 A. M. until 6 P. M. until November 21st, and John W. Jones and James Moore, the respective foremen, state that with a little cool weather this show should surpass all previous efforts.

SAN FRANCISCO.

A new florist shop will shortly be opened in Modesto, Cal., by Mrs. Frank Smith.

C. Kooyman has been busy for several days filling his orders for Holland bulbs. As part of his shipment was destroyed by fire en route he is having difficulty in making the supply go round.

The United Flower & Supply Co., which markets the chrysanthemums brought into this market by the Japanese growers, reports that this is the most satisfactory season they have ever had.

The Republic of Chili has called on the University of California to furnish men trained in horticulture and pathology, Edwardo Cauasco, commercial delegate from the Chilean government, presenting the request in person.

The Panama-Pacific Commission of the State of New York has announced that on and after October 21st, proposals for the sale of the trees and plants in and around the New York State Building will be received, deliveries to be made after December 5th.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

Baltimore, Md.—Former Collector of the Port William F. Stone was appointed in the United States Court on Oct. 21 receiver for the Franklin Davis Nursery Company, after the company had been adjudicated a bankrupt with its consent. Bond for $7,500 was given by the receiver, who will continue the business and act until a trustee is selected.

The petition to have the company adjudicated a bankrupt was filed by the following creditors: Samuel A. Burk and Joseph E. White, both employees of the company, $963.14 and $7,352.21, and estate of Rufus Woods, for rent $676.50. A petition for the appointment of a receiver was filed by the Western National Bank, to which the company owes about $30,000. It stated that among the assets of the company were orders aggregating $12,000 and others were coming in.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON This market is well supplied with flowers of every description. Although there has been one good frost this week cosmos from outside still comes in bright and smiling and the sunny warm days have pushed along all the indoor things in ever-increasing quantity, violets alone excepted. However, there are enough violets, too. Roses have taken a distinct drop. Carnations have been increasing in quantity as well as quality and prices are very modest. Chrysanthemums are plentiful, the low grade and medium constituting the main stock and no complaint being heard because of the absence of extraordinary specimens. Snapdragon begins to assert itself and there are some good spikes of white and pink already in evidence. Daisies, white and yellow, are also in adequate supply and will continue to be a regular staple from now on.

Trade continues good. BUFFALO There is ample supply to fill all orders. The only thing that has been short at times is good carnations and these at the present are coming in more plentifully. Chrysanthemums came in quite heavy and move satisfactorily, as do other standard items. Dahlias came in quite heavy last week, with quality not as good as a week previous. At time of writing—October 28—the market is filling up with roses and chrysanthemums, though the sales have been satisfactory.

The last week in October finds the market a little easier. Stock held back till the middle of the previous week and the general scarcity that had prevailed during the month in all lines seemed to give way as a few days of sunshine brought out the flowers. Carnations responded quickly but the demand also increased so the high prices that prevailed last week are still in effect. Splendid stock of American Beauty roses is being cut, especially in the long-stemmed ones. Chrysanthemums are moving steadily at good prices and there seems to be a larger proportion of what might be called a popular-sized large bloom, than of either an extremely large or undersized one. Pompons are making themselves noticed now and will probably make the usual inroads on the carnation sales soon. Lily of the valley is in good demand and stock is fine. The demand for stock in general may be said to be a little less than earlier in the month owing possibly to the run of October weddings and debutante parties being over.

The wholesale houses CINCINNATI are becoming somewhat crowded with stock, the primary cause of which the heavy receipts of chrysanthemums and the cosmos and dahlias that may still be had. Blooms in the fancy grades of chrysanthemums have been rather scarce. Roses are continuing plentiful and since the heavy cut of chrysanthemums began to come in have not been selling as readily as before. Enough carnations and lilies may be had to take care of every request.

NEW YORK Business conditions are not as encouraging as they have been. The very warm weather has made all stock more plentiful and prices on most things have taken on a downward tendency. Roses of all varieties are much more in evidence and good stock is selling as low as $20 per 1000. Chrysanthemums are rapidly filling up the wholesale market, and bring but moderate prices except in the case of choice stock such as Marigold, which is by far the best yellow in the market and is selling for 60 cents a bloom. Violets are showing up more abundantly. Cattleyas are slacking off rapidly. Gardenias are in good demand. Dahlias and cosmos still linger but they find no welcome now.

PHILADELPHIA The general market conditions here have continued good, although not quite so brisk as they had been week before last. The expected increase in many crops materialized all right with a consequent recession in prices. This is especially noticeable in carnations, which are much more plentiful and the quality shows marked improvement. In the rose market the status quo holds a little firmer. This is especially true of American Beauty. It seems that the growers have begun pinching for Christmas and this reduces present yield and holds prices firm. It is too early yet for the pinching act in other roses, so figures quoted are a little easier. Russell and Jonkheer Mock are very fine just now. There is a lively market for the little rosebuds like Sweetheart, Cameo, Old Gold, Sweet Marie, George Elger and others of the polyantha group. These come in nicely for the debutante and the Hallowe'en girl and bring surprisingly good prices for what little one gets. Just think of four dollars for a thumb nail when you can get fine Killarneys big as a dollar for two. It sounds ridiculous, but there you are. Chrysolora is the leader among the big chrysanthemums, of which, by the way, there seem to be fewer big fellows than usual. Medium-sized flowers with rather short stems are the rule at present. Polly Rose is a conspicuous example, much smaller this year among all that have arrived so far. The experts say we are "over the lump" on the orchid question now, and that there will be no more cheap cattleyas. Fair to decent prices from now on. Gardenias for the moment seems to be about as scarce as hen's teeth. Maybe that is a blessing in disguise. It is never good to feed us too much on any one thing. Even beef and greens, kail and potatoes, can be overdone, and we fly to the lunch stand for hot milk on toast and a cup of tea. Bouvardia is becoming more conspicuous and we notice a little mignonette around.

The home-grown dahlias have had their day, although some splendid specimens are being distributed by the McCallum Company among their retail trade, being continuously ordered from New Jersey. To a certain extent these "Jersey Beauties" are affecting the sale of the home products of chrysanthemums, roses and lilies. There are now plenty of good roses and lilies, and chrysanthemums have commenced to come in more plentifully. While prices continue about as they have been, the increasing stock points to a reduction all around in a very short time.

Business was a little more brisk the past week than it was the week before, but the supply of flowers was even more plentiful, so the values remained about the same. Exposition festivities take a good many flowers, and dinners, weddings, and other social events furnish an outlet for many more, while the usual fall activity in counter trade is beginning to show at the downtown shops. The shipping trade is steadily increasing also. Although receipts of chrysanthemums are much heavier, the demand is sufficient to make them clean-up fairly well. Many of the finer specimens have been reserved for the last few days for exhibition purposes at the National Fall Flower Show, which has lowered the average of first-class stock in the market. Beauties are rather scarce and are clearing accordingly. Other roses are improving and getting more plentiful from day to day, and while buyers find it necessary to be in the market early to fill their wants to their liking, they have the advantage of selecting from stock of the first quality. Asters and gladioli have ceased to be a feature of the market. Dahlias continue plentiful and in good demand. Carnations are in somewhat better supply and enjoy a better call than for several weeks. Violets are in good supply. Flowering plants are rather scarce. An abundance of Holland bulbs have been placed on the market here the last few weeks.

The market has been unusually good. The chrysanthemum season is now in full force and the demand is fine, but other stock has to suffer, especially the roses and carnations, which are coming in heavy and prices have dropped. The store men say trade is fine in all lines, but they can't consume all the stock coming in. So we can look for cheap sales all week. Other flowers are having a fairly good demand and seem to hold up their end in price.

WASHINGTON Dahlias and cosmos practically demoralized the local market last week. This situation came as a great surprise, for it had been reported that there would be no glut of these. Chrysanthemums which had been bringing better prices than in previous years were victims of a very noticeable slump; carnations could not be moved because of an over-supply of the former. Lilies had been scarce and these promptly dropped 25 per cent., with plenty to be had. Lily of the valley is easily obtainable, whereas the previous week the filling of orders was doubtful. Roses alone have remained scarce, with just about enough good stock to fill all demands. Princess of Wales and Governor Herck violet are now offered with long stems and fairly large heads, but the supply is not heavy. Yellow daisies are also to be had. Orchids are not overplentiful and these met with fair sale last week.

The Farquhar Social.

On Friday evening, October 22, the Farquhar Nurseries employees gave their first annual social and dance, in Memorial Hall, Dedham, Mass. Over two hundred couples attended, Boston being represented by the employees of the firm, with their wives and friends. The stage was tastefully decorated with foliage and flowering plants by Robert Laurie and his assistants. Dancing commenced at 8 o'clock and was continued until 12 o'clock.

The Olympic Orchestra furnished the music. It was somewhat of a revelation to our city friends to find that the "hayseeds" could produce such accomplished musicians and entertainers. Through the generosity of John K. L. M. Farquhar the financial bugbear was removed.

Great credit is due to the various officers, President Robert Laurie, Treasurer P. Fordam, Secretary J. Traquair and committee, for the manner in which they labored to make the affair a success.

Boston Bowlers.

The Boston Florists' Bowling League scores for Thursday evening, October 21, were as recorded below. Our sporting readers should bear in mind that the bowling in Boston is done with "candle pins" and small balls, and the scores should be judged accordingly.

Mrs. Victor Dorval.

Mrs. Dorval, widow of Victor Dorval, died on Tuesday evening, October 26, at her home in Woodside, N. Y.

George H. Chase.

George H. Chase of Malden, Mass., a nurseryman with offices at 60 Summer street, that city, also in Rochester, N. Y., died suddenly on Thursday, Oct. 21, at his home in Malden from heart failure. His death occurred but a few moments after he had awakened from his customary after dinner nap. Mr. Chase, who was 71 years old, was born at Buckfield, Me., but had lived for the greater part of his life in Malden. He served for 10 years on the Malden street and water commission.

John White.

John White, one of the oldest florists in the country, died Sunday afternoon, October 17, at his home, 1263 Waverly place, Elizabeth, N. J., after a brief illness. He was ninety years of age. Born in Bedford, England, where he first studied horticulture, he came to this country when a young man and settled in Jersey City, where he established greenhouses and engaged in the florist business.

Mr. White was a frequent exhibitor at horticultural shows. Pansies were among his most prized specialties. He is survived by one son, John White, Jr.; one daughter, Mrs. D. A. Daland, and two grandchildren.

Henry Baldinger.

The funeral service for Henry Baldinger was held last Sunday at his home in Allentown, (the new eighteenth ward of Pittsburgh, Pa.) his death having taken place the previous Thursday as the result of a protracted attack of Bright's Disease. Mr. Baldinger, who was one of Pittsburgh's veteran commercial florists, was born on February 24, 1834, in Frieburg, Germany, where he became practically interested in floriculture when a mere lad. In 1850 he came to America, shortly after locating in Pittsburgh, where he has continued in business since. His wife died eight years ago. He is survived by three sons and two daughters, one of whom has for several years been a saleswoman for the Ludwig Floral Company. Julius W. Ludwig and Henry Muech of this firm, were among the pall bearers at the funeral of Mr. Baldinger.

Joseph F. Smith.

After an illness of several months, Joseph F. Smith, the florist, died at his home at 409 Washington street, Norwich, Conn., on Sunday evening, October 17, death resulting from a complication of diseases.

Joseph F. Smith was born in Gmund, Province of Wurtemberg, Germany, Dec. 6, 1838. He came to this country when 13 years of age and resided in Philadelphia, Pa., until he moved to Norwich in 1865 and engaged as a gardener for Joseph Ripley. In 1871 he started in business for himself at Norwich Town, which business he conducted up to the time of his death. He received his education in the public schools of his native town and at Philadelphia, Pa. In 1863 he married Katherine Spang of Philadelphia. He is survived by his wife, five sons and four daughters.

Enthusiastic and highly successful in the business which he had built up in Norwich Town, he not only possessed those qualities that led to success in his work, but he won esteem and high regard for what he was as a man. Always reliable, always helpful, smoothing many a troubled way, he won more than success. Not only in his own family will his loss be great, but also in that neighborhood from which so many who could ill be spared have passed on in the last few years. His last years of illness were made beautiful by the devotion of all in the home circle.

PERSONAL.

Christopher Schwab, who has been at the Wyndhurst greenhouses at Lenox, has taken a position in Arthur N. Cooley's greenhouses in Pittsfield, Mass.

Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., will give a lecture before the Staten Island Garden Club at Rosebank, N. Y., on Friday afternoon, November 5.

Charles F. Kessler, salesman for his brother William, of 113 West 28th street, New York City, and Miss M. Bente, were married at the bride's home, 327 W. 28th street, Saturday, Oct. 23d.

We learn with much regret that Mr. Fred Sander of St. Albans, England, has been ill but are glad to hear that he is now getting better. All the workmen in the Sander establishment, except a few elderly men, have gone to the front in the army and they have been replaced with girls.

John Carman has resigned his position as foreman at Bellefontaine, Lenox, Mass. under Mr. Jenkins, also the secretaryship of the Lenox Horticultural Society, and is going to Pittsburgh as superintendent of the estate of Col. J. M. Schoonmaker, Sewickley Heights.

At the last meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society Lewis Barnes was elected secretary in Mr. Carman's place and Jesse Frampton assistant secretary.

SOLVING THE POTASH PROBLEM.

Several new methods of increasing the supply of American potash have recently been brought to the attention of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, of the Department of Commerce. One of the most promising of these efforts to find a substitute for German fertilizers is a patent taken out a few weeks ago by a Canadian for a method of using the potash in ordinary feldspar.

The process is a simple one, consisting of heating the feldspar with limestone and iron oxide at a temperature of about 2,200 degrees Fahrenheit, which produces a partly fused mass that is easily decomposed by a weak acid. From this product the potash salts can readily be extracted for further purification. The inventor has been in consultation with Dr. Norton, the expert who has been looking after the potash and dyestuff situations for the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, and it seems very possible that a greatly simplified method of transforming feldspar into fertilizer will soon be available.

A practical try-out for another method of obtaining potash fertilizer will soon take place at a New Orleans distillery where molasses is used in large quantities. It is a fact that 106 tons of potash are wasted daily by the twenty-five or more distilleries in this country that subject molasses to processes of fermentation. The New Orleans company is planning to install the process of saving the potash in distillery waste recently brought to the attention of the public by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. It should be possible to make fertilizer from this otherwise worthless material at a price that will meet competition even after the war is over.

FREAKISH FACTS AND FACTLESS FREAKS.

Culled from the columns of our exchanges.

Janesville Wis., Oct. 25—Clarence Hammens, a dahlia fancier, discovered a bulb in his garden which has grown entirely through a large root of an elm tree some two inches in diameter, cutting it neatly in two as though with an axe.

—Press-Telegram.

After hearing a talk by William Gloeckner on "The Florist Business" at the weekly luncheon of the Rotary Club at the Ten Eyck today, more than one Rotarian decided that after all the only people in Albany who are making any money are the florists.

—Albany Journal.

A freak potato, presenting four interesting studies, was brought into the office of the Post last night by James F. Leavey of 10 Leon street, Somerville, who raised the potato with others at the Eagles Rest Cottage, North Weymouth. One view of the play of nature potato shows the outline and features of the human face; another pose strongly suggests the hippopotamus; a third, is a likeness to the mushroom, and a fourth position shows the spud resembling the monkey's head and face.—Boston Post.

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:

DAMAGES AWARDED FOR INJURY BY GAS.

The suit of John Donaldson of Patchogue, N. Y., against the Newtown Gas Company for damages done to his greenhouse stock in his greenhouses at Elmhurst, L. I., has been settled. The Company paid Mr. Donaldson over $2,700 in settlement. William H. Siebrecht, Jr., of Long Island City, was Mr. Donaldson's attorney.

The settlement of this suit is of more than usual interest inasmuch as the gas main which caused the trouble was practically new, having been laid only two years prior to the damage and, furthermore, no one ever smelt gas in Mr. Donaldson's greenhouse. Nevertheless, the growth of his stock of Easter lilies was stunted and his callas destroyed. Experts who were called into the case pronounced illuminating gas as the cause of the injury to the plants and flowers and this was substantiated by certain experiments which Mr. Siebrecht caused to be conducted.

Shortly after this leakage Mr. Donaldson sold his property in Elmhurst and moved to Patchogue. His son, Alexander Donaldson, now conducts the florist business at his father's old place. The first winter that the son put through in the same house, there was another leak, or a continuation of the same leak, which resulted in another suit against the same Gas Company.

Now is the time to buy your HOT BED SASH

We are the Largest Manufacturers of Hot Bed Sash in this country

All our sash are made of No. 1 Gulf Cypress, free from sap and knots.

The bars are beveled at bottom to admit extra light.

He Is Just Aching for a Chance to Get a Grip on Your House; If You Are Not Ready to Knock Him Out We Are Ready to Quickly Make You Ready

JACK FROST has already blown his chilly breath at you. Next, he will be shaking his fist.

The first thing you know he will sneak in that house of yours, in which the heating is not ready, and nip the noses of your plants.

That would cost a pretty penny. A lot more than it would to send at once to us for the fittings you need; the boiler you ought to have; or have our trouble men come and quickly help you out.

If you need a boiler and are within 25 or 30 miles of our factory we can deliver it at once by motor truck, at a slight expense to you for cartage.

But when it comes to sending by freight—well you know how the railroads are sometimes, and this may be one of those temper-busting times. So don't delay ordering.

Our new Supply Book shows you every fitting we make—new or old.

The boilers are there, and tables that will tell you exactly how much they will heat.

Pick out what you need.

Send your order at once.

If you want to see one of us, call up on the phone—tell the operator to reverse the message on us.

Wholesale Florists

A. L. YOUNG, Pres. and Treas.
H. R. SCOMMODAU, Vice-Pres.
F. LIGHTFOOT, Sec'y.

54 West 28th St.
NEW YORK

We are pleased to announce the incorporation of A. L. Young & Co., which has been organized with a broad charter to conduct a Wholesale Florist business and any other business appertaining thereto, on co-operative principles, and which will therefore not be a close corporation. It will be open to all interested in the florist business, growers, retailers, etc., to become members and participate in the conducting of a business which they are all more or less interested in and thoroughly acquainted with, offering all an equal opportunity for promoting the welfare, progress and prosperity of their own business, and sharing in the benefits and profits of their own enterprise and industry.

We believe this the ideal method of conducting a wholesale florist business, especially under present conditions. It is desirable to secure a number of practical co-workers, therefore the capital stock has been divided into preferred shares at the popular price of $10.00 each. Full paid and non-assessable.

The President is reliable and capable and has conducted a profitable business successfully for over ten years and will continue, together with the co-operation of other members thoroughly trustworthy and reliable, to conduct this business even more successfully, which started July 1, 1915, entirely free from any liability or debt of any kind.

No officer shall receive any salary for his services as such until a minimum dividend of at least 6 per cent. has been earned on the stock. Systematic audits and reports compiled by competent accountants will be made at regular meetings.

The earnest support already given is gratifying, and is a sufficient guarantee of the success of the company and an assurance of the still greater success it is destined to become.

Only people interested in the florist business are invited to join us and become members. Send for particulars. Do not put this off until next month or next week. DO IT RIGHT NOW.

Yours for business,

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Azaleas

The best azaleas for early forcing, to be had in bloom easily by Christmas, are Simon Mardner, Apollo, Deutsche Perle, Pauline Mardner and Vervaeana. Before the azaleas go into their pots a thorough soaking of the root balls is necessary. The inner core of the ball when once dried out, remains in that condition ever afterward, no matter how regularly and thoroughly the pots are watered. The failure of plants to do well may in nearly all instances be traced to dry roots. After being potted they should not be exposed to sunshine for eight or ten days, nor to frosty weather at any time although a very cool and airy place suits them. Those that are needed for Easter can be plunged in cold frames until later when you will have time to pot them up.

Cinerarias

Plants from seed that was sown from August 15 up to the first week in September and grown in flats, should now be ready for 3-inch pots. Use a soil composed of three parts of fibrous loam and two of leaf mold with a good sprinkling of sand for the first potting. Keep close for a few days until the roots take hold of the new soil, when they should be given a place near the glass in a house where the temperature runs near 40 degrees at night. For the second potting and others that are to follow leave out all leaf mold, but give them a rich compost of two-thirds fibrous loam to one-third of well-decayed cow manure with a dash of guano and soot. Fumigate often for the aphids. Never let them approach anything like a pot-bound condition before giving them a shift until flowering size is reached. Those that are intended for Christmas should be kept in a temperature of about 40 degrees to 45; anything higher will ruin your crops of flowers.

Cyclamen

Every good florist has lots on his mind at all times so it is very easy for him to overlook some of his plants. Cyclamens that you sowed the first half of September should be nicely above ground now. See that they are placed well up to the glass so as to keep them sturdy, and when they are large enough to handle shift into other flats. Here they can grow without being disturbed for another two months. Let them have a light compost for which one-half each of loam and leaf mold with plenty of sand will be suitable. Keep in a warm house at 55 to 60 degrees at night. Keep the surface soil frequently scratched. In transplanting these little cyclamens don't leave the little bulb on the surface, but put it just below. They will soon work their way to the top. Be careful in watering so as not to sour the compost.

Orchids

Watering should be done fairly early in the morning, so that the moisture dropped on foliage and benches will dry up before night. Syringing overhead should be gradually discontinued. When done at all, let it be on the mornings of clear days. Do not play the hose directly on the plants as this makes too heavy a stream. Always use a fine misty spray. A decreased water supply all around will be necessary now. It is always safe to underwater rather than overwater. This question of ventilation is not half considered. It is the rock on which many would-be orchid growers perish. Too many still persist in keeping orchids too hot and stuffy. Outside of the purely East Indian, tropical kinds, all like air in abundance. Cattleyas and Laelias above all enjoy plenty of fresh air. There are really but few days in the year when neither top nor bottom ventilators can be open. In the case of strong winds, enough will get between the laps of glass to satisfy them.

Poinsettias

These plants are not so easily kept in good condition when the late fall approaches. We have arrived at the critical time for poinsettias. Careful attention is required as to ventilation, firing, etc., and watering carefully from now on is of great importance. It cannot be good policy to apply water which is near the freezing point. Some plants may not be as particular in this respect as others, but poinsettias will not stand for sudden changes in temperature or for water much below the temperature of the house they are in. It is better to go over your pans, pots and benches often to prevent any from remaining too dry and on the other hand it will give a chance for any that are wet to dry out. Do not feed at all until the bracts are forming; then give it twice a week in moderately weak doses. Some soot with the manure helps to keep the leaves green.

Time to Start Bulbs

The time taken under ordinary condition for the different bulbs to form enough of roots to enable them to be forced with any kind of success are—Paper white narcissus, 6 to 8 weeks; Roman hyacinths, 8 to 10 weeks; Dutch hyacinths, 14 to 16 weeks; daffodils, jonquils and narcissus, 11 to 16 weeks; lilies such as Harrisii, longiflorum, gigantum, formosum, speciosum, etc., will take at least 16 to 18 weeks. Of course the time will vary either one way or the other according to the strength of the bulbs.

Although most of the trees are bare, summer flowers still linger in the gardens in a large section of the country where usually gardens are desolated by the time November comes in. There are salvias, cannas, cosmos, ageratum, French marigolds, petunias, some roses and even dahlias, still in sufficient quantity to make the suburban plots look bright and to make quite a showing in the wholesale markets. We like to see them. They work no very great injury to the indoor flower trade and we shall have to face winter dreariness soon enough.

While it is generally acknowledged that the flower business has made but little progress during the season of 1915, it appears from our observation and according to reports from various sources that the landscape gardening industry and the trade in hardy garden ornamental material have been enjoying a season of rare prosperity. Perhaps the enforced staying at home since the outbreak of the European war has conduced partly to this result and it is quite probable that the automobile, which has unquestionably had a reverse influence on the florist business, has given a new impetus to the laying out of suburban homes. No line of horticultural work holds out better promise for the ambitious young man than that of hardy ornamental gardening.

A notification has been received by all the wholesalers in New York to the effect that, at a joint session of the Association of Retail Florists and the Greek-American Florists' Association, it was the sense of the meeting that wholesale florists do not sell at retail and calling for an immediate statement of the wholesalers' position on the matter. No doubt the retailers know what they are doing. We hold no brief to speak for them or for the wholesalers or to proffer advice, both sides being presumably able to take care of their respective interests, yet, as unswerving advocates of organized co-operation we should much prefer to see questions of this character made the subject of friendly joint consideration between representative men of both interested parties. Knowing how averse the leading wholesale men in New York are to selling anything at retail we are at a loss to understand just why these wholesalers have alone been selected to receive a communication such as that referred to. The retail people may have some basis of complaint which does not appear on the surface but one naturally wonders, at this juncture, what their attitude is towards those large wholesale growers, for instance, who are openly competing for retail business while at the same time placing a considerable part of their product on the wholesale market. And, further, how can an organization of retail store keepers, none of whom are producers, consistently take such an issue with the legitimate wholesalers, if a combination of several of its own members is in the field as a competitor in the wholesale trade? We are heartily in accord with the proposition that wholesale dealers should keep strictly out of the retail business. But the rule of fairness demands that, in exchange for this protection, the retail dealer is in honor bound to extend to the wholesale dealer cordial support to the full extent of the latter's facilities for serving him. In this direction much more might be said as all those "close to the firing line" well know, but probably we have gone far enough for the present.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Watch the Feeding

With the weather staying warm it will be necessary to be very careful with the feeding, and see that it is applied at the proper time, and then withheld when it should be. As soon as a crop is well cut off the plants should be allowed to dry out just a trifle, being careful of course not to carry it too far. As soon as the plants are dry enough they can be watered well, being careful to make sure that the water penetrates through the soil, leaving no dry spots anywhere. To make this sure it may be necessary to water twice over the bench fronts where the plants will naturally be drier than anywhere else. Then if they are not showing any breaks to speak of they can be allowed to dry out fairly good again, after which they will break quite freely as a rule. As soon as the plants have quite a number of breaks all over they can be given a little liquid manure or bonemeal and as soon as the breaks lengthen out a little they should receive a light mulching if they need it. The surface of the benches will tell this. If the mulch that has been put on is pretty well gone and the soil in the benches lies exposed to the sun and air, it is time to apply more. If, however, there is plenty of rough material on the benches to keep the water from washing around when watering then it will not be necessary to apply any more manure, depending on the liquid to furnish all the necessary plant food, using plenty of bonemeal to go with it. However, it may not always be advisable to use too much liquid, especially if the plants show signs of getting soft. If this happens it will be well to run the houses a shade cooler, and keep the liquid away until the plants show signs of starving. This can be seen on the new growth which will become somewhat stunted in appearance.

The Coal Bins

With the warm sunny weather all along, growers are apt to neglect to order or have on hand sufficient coal. This is bad management for the warm weather will no doubt be followed by a severe cold snap, and coal will burn rapidly then. Keep the coal coming as fast as it is used so that in case of early snow there will be no heating problem to bother about. Considerable coal can be saved by keeping the boilers clean all the time. See to this as the boilers should be brushed every other night. There are no especial brushes required for this; a piece of old burlap on a stick will generally answer the purpose and nearly all the boilers built now can be cleaned while the fire is going full blast, as most of them are arranged to open one flue or part at a time.

Storing Manure

Manure for mulching which has to be kept outside in the weather will leach out a good deal, and this will mean loss. There is no way to prevent this except to have one of the sod heaps only three and a half feet high, and then keep the manure pile on top of this. Any liquid that may drain through the manure will be quickly absorbed by the sod in the heap and there will be little waste. Needless to say the heap should be covered with straw or hay or leaves or anything to keep it from freezing in the winter so that it will be ready to use at any time.

Soot

The prices that roses have been bringing the last few weeks will enable growers everywhere to indulge in little luxuries every now and then. Soot may be considered a luxury for commercial growers, but it will certainly put additional color into the roses if applied at the proper time. It can also be added to the liquid manure but we prefer to apply it directly to the benches, using only enough to slightly blacken the surface of the soil. After this a little more can be applied whenever it is needed. It is best applied when the buds are about to show color. It is quite strong and may damage the foliage somewhat if too much of it is applied all at once. Never apply it at the same time with bonemeal, or to benches that have been limed recently. The lime in the bonemeal or in the benches liberates a large portion of the ammonia in the soot all at once and this is waste, even if there is no harm done to the plants and flowers.

THE CLEVELAND FLOWER SHOW

The Cleveland Flower Show, more than ten days before the opening of the exposition at the Coliseum on November 10, finds itself with only two small spaces unsold. When it is considered that there is more than 65,000 square feet of space in the exposition building and that this area is to be filled with a representative display of horticulture and all that pertains to the trade one is able to gain an impression of the magnitude of the Cleveland Show.

Among the exhibitors to enter the lists since the last reports by the executive committee is Hubert V. Pearce, Detroit, steam heating engineer. There will be about sixty exhibits of appliances of the business in addition to the display of commercial and private growers, nurserymen and foreign exhibits.

One of the latest features secured is to come from the botanical garden, Washington, D. C. Superintendent Hess has promised to send examples of several of the rarest and most interesting plants from his collection and expects to personally accompany the shipment and attend the show throughout its progress.

The burden of bringing together these varied and representative exhibits for the most pretentious show ever held in the Middlewest has fallen upon the general committees although there has been heartiest co-operation on the part of all the local societies and clubs interested in flower culture.

CHRYSANTHEMUM TIGER (EXHIBITED AS 111-1-13)

At the solicitation of the management of the Cleveland Flower Show, President Wilson has kindly supplied the name for this new yellow. A seedling from Chrysolora, several shades darker than its parent. It is supremely fitted for the rank and file of growers, especially those who are unable to plant early, as its characteristics stamp it as a commercial of special merit. Fine incurved form producing flowers double to the center from September buds, sturdy semi-dwarf growth, with beautiful foliage and very rigid stem; height about 4 feet from June 1st plantings. Best bud September 5th. One of Elmer D. Smith's novelties.

in Class 87. The American Rose Society will hold a meeting on Thursday the 11th.

The Bowling Tournament.

The Bowling Tournament will be staged at Erie Bowling Alleys, Thursday, November 11th, starting at 11

A. M., five-men teams bowling first. Individuals will follow and the roll off of five high men in the individual and high man on each team will compete for the H. P. Knoble prize, a life membership in the S. A. F.

THE FALL FLOWER SHOWS

SAN FRANCISCO FALL FLOWER SHOW.

The Grand National Fall Flower Show was brought to a very successful close on October 26 after running for six days. Members of the trade are agreed that it was the most elaborate and satisfactory show ever held in this city. The exhibits were excellent, the prizes strongly competed, and the attendance large, interest being stimulated by a large number of special events arranged in connection with the display. While all seasonable flowers were included in the prize list, chrysanthemums were the main feature. These exhibits were arranged to excellent advantage under the central dome of the Palace of Horticulture. The quality of the flowers was the subject of favorable comment both among members of the trade and the general public. It is certain finer specimens were never shown here before, and it is doubtful whether a better showing could have been produced in other sections of the country. The silver cup offered by the Chrysanthemum Society of America for the best ten blooms, one variety of chrysanthemums on long stems, was awarded to the Lynch Nursery of Menlo Park. The Hitchings & Co. prize for the best six vases chrysanthemums, six varieties, three blooms of each on long stems, went to T. Etow of San Mateo. The gold, silver and bronze medals offered by Wm. Wells and Chas. H. Totty for three blooms of the Earl Kitchener chrysanthemum, were awarded to the Lynch Nursery, Mrs. C. R. Waters of Menlo Park and Shibuya & Ishida of Stege, respectively. Percy Ellings of Menlo Park won the medal given by the National Association of Gardeners for the best six chrysanthemums of six varieties. The Elmer D. Smith prizes for the best six white, yellow and pink chrysanthemums went to the Lynch Nursery and the Hillsborough Nursery. Shibuya & Ishida were awarded the H. W. Buckbee prize for the best vase of twenty-five blooms chrysanthemum Mrs. W. H. Buckbee. Besides these special awards for chrysanthemums many other prizes were offered for chrysanthemums, roses, dahlias, begonias, orchids, etc. The large room at the entrance of the building was used for dahlias, begonias, annuals, etc., while the orchid display and some of the other exhibits were arranged in some of the side rooms. The gold medal for the best display of orchids in flower arranged for effect with other plants went to John A. Carbone of Berkeley.

Among the special features, Pelicano, Rossi & Co. were awarded the only prize for table decoration, competed for five successive days; also silver medal for the most artistic bridal bouquet, and first prize both for the best arranged hamper or basket and the most artistically arranged basket of cut flowers.

Other names which figure prominently as winners were E. James, H. Plath, H. J. Kessel, San Mateo Co.

Conservatories, Domoto Bros., Mrs. J. Roos, F. Agari, Mrs. R. E. Darbee, Geo. H. Young, Ferrari Bros., McLellan & Co., J. B. Smith, G. A. Pope, Bessie Boston Dahlia Co., Ruth C. Glendell, H. E. Bothin and John Valance.

MORRIS COUNTY GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' SOCIETY.

The 20th Annual Flower Show of this society was a complete success in every respect. The same committee, Wm. H. Duckham, Chas. H. Totty and Arthur Herrington have arranged every show since the shows started 20 years ago, so it is an old trick with them. The big groups put up by Robt. Tyson and John Downing, were the works of finished artists. The table decorations, which were just chrysanthemum flowers, were very attractive and drew crowds of the ladies. The vegetable exhibits were of the highest order and filled one large hall. We had two new carnations—Peace from Frank Dinda, Farmingdale, L. I., and Laura Weber from Chas Weber, Lynbrook, N. Y., the former a white, and the latter a pink. They showed up well, but the standard kinds were to the front. The best carnation in pink was Enchantress Supreme, and White Enchantress held its own, and more in white. Champion, shown by Wm. Duckham was easily the best in the reds. Princess Dagmar scored in crimson.

In red roses, Hoosier Beauty had it "all-over" everything. A vase of Lady Alice Stanley was considered by many the best in the show but Ophelia had so many admirers that it was hard to get near it. I mustn't forget Totty's vase of Gorgeous, not in competition; it was in a class by itself.

Duckham's table of orchids deserved special mention as did also Peter Duff's specimen plant of Lady Lydia. In Totty's new chrysanthemums No. 20 pink scored 89 points; Wm. Rigley single white, 90; Mrs. H. Gibson, 89.

There were 104 classes in the schedule and competition was lively all through. In the chrysanthemum bloom classes eight 1st were won by C. H. Totty, six by John Downing, five by Ernest Wild, four by James Fraser, three by Wm. Duckham and one each by George Fisher and Peter Duff who also was 1st on specimen plant. In the rose classes L. B. Coddington got five 1st. L. A. Noe three, C. H. Totty, Hamilton Farm and J. Wagner two each, and L. M. Noe one. Winnings in carnations were Ernest Wild four, Wm. Duckham, F. Brease and Hamilton Farm two each, J. G. Douglass, G. Ficher, Thos. Dornier and Springfield Floral Co. one each. Other awards were—Peter Duff for violets, Robert Tyson for plant group and for Lorraine begonias, Jas. Fraser for pot chrysanthemums, W. H. Duckham for orchids and J. K. Linaburg two 1st for greenhouse grapes. The entries in the classes for fruit and vegetables and farm produce were numerous and of high quality. E. R.

CHICAGO GRAND FLORAL FESTIVAL.

The regular meeting of the executive committee was held at the Hotel Morrison, October 28, the members in attendance including A. Henderson, W. N. Rudd, W. J. Keimel, August Poehlmann, N. J. Wieter, Geo. Asmus, Guy W. French, E. F. Kurowski, N. P. Miller, Payne Jennings, Robert Brenton, H. B. Howard, K. Patterson, James Morton and M. Barker. Reports of the various sub-committees were presented, showing well matured plans for the big exhibition, to be held at the Coliseum, November 9-14. Widespread interest in the event is evident from the correspondence coming to the officials from all sections of the country, and the distribution of large quantities of posters and posterettes with liberal notices in the newspapers have awakened unusual enthusiasm locally. The competitive exhibits from leading growers will be well worth the attention of the trade in themselves and it is certain there will be a good array of new plants and flowers in the various sections. Many novel features are promised by the management, including elaborate floral dances and fashions, ancient and modern, in the use of flowers for personal adornment. Some contracts for trade space are still pending as this notice of the show goes to the press, the list of those closed being as follows with the value of space taken:

Chicago firms—W. W. Barnard Co., $111; Buchbinder Bros., $60; O. J. Friedman, $39.60; Ideal Lighting Co., $27; Kroeschell Bros. Co., $25; W. H. Kidwell & Son, $54; Frank Oechslein, $43.20; Poehlmann Bros. Co., $43.20; Raedlein Basket Co., $66; Schiller, the Florist, $66; Vaughan's Seed Store, $120; Ernst Wienhoeber Floral Co., $63; Geo. Wittbold Co., $54; C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, Wis., $43.20; A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., $72; Haeger Brick & Tile Co., Dundee, $55.80; D. Hill Nursery Co., Dundee, $96.

LENOX HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

The fifteenth annual fall show was held in the Town Hall, Lenox, Mass., on October 26-27. Although the number of exhibitors were less than in the previous two or three years, the hall was well filled, all the exhibits being of the highest class and very tastefully arranged. In the centre was a large circular group of plants arranged for effect, shown by Giraud Foster, gard. E. Jenkins. One of the leading features was the magnificent group of orchids exhibited by A. N. Cooley, Pittsfield, orchid grower, Oliver Lines. Cut chrysanthemums were well shown, the winners in the leading classes being G. Foster, who won the Society's cup for the best vase of 10 blooms with the variety Mrs. G. L. Wigg, A. N. Cooley and Mrs. W. E. S. Griswold. A silver cup offered by W. H. Walker of Gt. Barrington, for the six best blooms in the show was won by A. N. Cooley. Roses and carnations were well shown, the winners in roses being

F. E. Lewis, Ridgefield, Conn., gard. W. Smith, C. Lanier and G. Foster. In carnations Mrs. W. Griswold and Mrs. R. Winthrop were winners in the leading classes. There was the usual keen competition in the vegetable classes, G. Foster winning the special prize offered by Mrs. W. E. S. Griswold for the best collection of 18 kinds, by the narrow margin of 1½ points, Carlos De Heredia, gard. Geo. H. Thompson, being placed second. In the class for 12 varieties one point separated the collection from Mrs. R. Winthrop, gard. S. Carlquist, and that from C. Lanier, gard. A. H. Wingett, in the latter's favor, this prize carried with it the silver cup offered by R. & J. Farquhar & Co. The prize offered by Peter Henderson & Co., for the best 10 varieties of potatoes was won by C. Lanier. There was a good show of fruit. Lord & Burnham's prize for 12 dishes of apples was awarded to A. Swift of Lee. W. M. Salisbury won the silver cup offered by Hitchings & Co. for the best two bunches of grapes in the show.

There was a good attendance on both days and a vote of thanks is due to all exhibitors and the committee of arrangements who helped to make the show a success.

BOSTON FALL SHOW.

The annual fall exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society is being put in order in Horticultural Hall, Boston, as we go to press. We cannot tell anything about the awards until next week and some of the exhibits are at time of writing incomplete, but we have seen enough of the show as it is to unhesitatingly pronounce it one of the best, if not the very best, in the long series of Boston fall shows. This quality does not lie in the chrysanthemums—pot plants or flowers, or in any one other feature, but in the variety and finish of the exhibits individually and collectively and on the impressive arrangement as a whole.

The large exhibition hall space is flanked by four stupendous groups of flowering and foliage plants, two on the left and two on the right, banked high against the walls, from A. M. Davenport, Kaneyama & Serada, R. & J. Farquhar & Co., and W. W. Edgar Company, respectively. Each group is unique in arrangement of colors and contour and we do not envy the job of the judges in deciding between at least two of them on 1st award.

The centre of the hall is devoted to the pot plants. There are no very prodigious trained specimens but there is a fine showing of well-grown plants of moderate size, W. H. Elliott and A. M. Davenport being prominent contributors. Mr. Davenport is a new competitor in the heavy group classes and he has made a magnificent start. In addition to the afore-mentioned entries he has a fine group of Lorraine, Cincinnati and Melior begonias and half a dozen superb plants of the Winter-flowering Begonia Mrs. Heal which illumine the scene with an unrivalled glory. Other groups in the large hall comprise one of choice flowering plants from Mrs. J. L. Gardner in which lancifolium lilies, bamboos and Jerusalem cherries make a beautiful combination; an extensive collection of conifers and broad-leaved evergreens in pots and tubs by Breck-Robinson Co., and another of like character from M. P. Haendler, of Old Town Nurseries.

There are two superb displays of orchids, long groups of elegant specimen plants in many genera from Wheeler & Co., of Waban, and F. J. Dolansky of Lynn, both commercial growers for cut flower purposes. No private estate could excell them. There are also two orchid specimen plants of rare merit. One is Laelio-Cattleya Moira (Mantini × Fabia) with a spike of three great blooms, from A. W. Preston, gard. John L. Smith. The other a specimen Cattleya Trianae from George W. Stewart. Two trained plants of Heavenly Blue Morning Glory from Mrs. C. G. Weld come in for much admiration, each nearly five feet in height and covered with big flowers and hundreds of buds. E. S. Webster showed Begonias Mrs. Heal and Optima, the latter a new one in the winter-flowering section with deep salmon flowers.

In the chrysanthemum cut flower section D. F. Roy, gard. for Col. Converse, presents an array of 71 gigantic blooms, never excelled in any previous show. W. D. Hathaway of New Bedford has an extensive display of dahlias in all classes, flowers as perfect as in the height of the season. Waban Rose Conservatories present mammoth vases of roses Hadley, Mrs. Moorfield Storey, Mrs. Bayard Thayer and Mrs. Russell. William Sim makes a display of pansy blooms such as he alone makes. They are close to perfection. W. W. Edgar Company exhibited two mammoth vases of chrysanthemums arranged with bronzy oak foliage, one being the variety Robert Halliday and the other Charles Razer. The retail florists are represented by ten decorated dinner tables, the taste shown being much ahead of that in any former competition here. The classes for small baskets and other dainty floral receptacles drew out some very artistic arrangements by Wax Brothers, Penn the Florist and Mrs. Coran. Further details next week.

INTERNATIONAL FLOWER SHOW, NEW YORK.

April 5-12, 1916.

Five months might seem a long period to those of us who are not engaged in preparations for the next big flower show to be held in New York, although to the men who are working like beavers to make it certain that the 1916 show shall overshadow all previous shows, the time seems all too short. With monthly meetings, and a division of the general committee into sub-committees, the work of preparation is well advanced; but with the idea generally imbued among the workers that the next show must present new features, new ideas, and, above all, show progress from an expositional point of view, five months for further preparation is a period all too small.

The idea of the Rose Garden, so well carried out at the exhibition last spring, bids fair to become a most important feature of the next show, for the reason that the premiums offered are on a most liberal basis, and sufficiently attractive to ensure six or more exhibits in the class set apart for displays of this kind. Just think of it—six Rose Gardens!

The rock garden, a much cherished institution on the other side of the water, and an object of curiosity to many of our budding horticulturists, is to be featured strongly at the April show, and those who are able to compete for the $250 and $150 prizes offered would do well to get busy with their exhibits.

The charts showing the space available for trade exhibits are already well marked with reservations and proposed reservations of exhibitors, and any firms desirous of securing choice of locations should lose no time in communicating with the Secretary.

The committee is a little embarrassed just now over the problem of housing the number of large exhibits promised, and it seems quite probable that three floors of the big Grand Central Palace may have to be utilized for the exhibition instead of two as heretofore.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Roslyn, Pa.—Edward Towill has reason to feel quite optimistic concerning a lot of very promising seedling roses—about a dozen in all—which he has in training. One is a very bright pink single, of Fireflame style.

Obituary

Harry Allen.

Harry Allen, son of Charles H. Allen, of Floral Park, Long Island, N. Y., died Saturday, October 30th, and was buried Tuesday, November 2d, on his twenty-sixth birthday.

Dennis Dwyer.

Dennis Dwyer, a member of the florist concern of Dwyer Brothers, of Brooklyn, N. Y., died at St. Anthony's Hospital, Woodhaven, on October 30. He was born in Brooklyn.

Edward G. Eggeling.

Edward G. Eggeling, a prominent florist of St. Louis, Mo., died on Saturday, Oct. 30, from throat trouble after a brief illness. Mr. Eggeling's store on Grand avenue was one of the oldest in the city, as it was started by his father right after the civil war. Mr. Eggeling was 43 years old and leaves a widow and one daughter. He was a member of the St. Louis Florist Club, which sent a floral offering to the funeral, on Monday, November 1.

Charles Thomas Lee.

Chas. T. Lee, florist, of South Brooklyn, N. Y., died on Thursday, Oct. 28. He was a resident of South Brooklyn for thirty-five years. He was born at Taunton, Mass., in 1839, and during the entire Civil War served as a member of the Seventh Regiment of Massachusetts. He enlisted as a private and for bravery in action was promoted until he was discharged a first lieutenant. He was wounded at the Battle of the Wilderness. He is survived by his wife, Emma Louise Marsh, and a son, Charles Reed Lee, who is also a florist.

Albert C. Huebner.

The sympathy of the trade goes out to a well beloved fellow craftsman, Paul Huebner, landscape gardener for the Reading R. R. system, in the loss of his son, Albert C. Huebner, who was killed in an automobile accident at Akron, Ohio, on Oct. 30th. The funeral took place from the family home in Philadelphia on November the 4th. Interment was at Northwood cemetery.

Mr. Huebner was 31 years of age and up to a few years ago held an important position in the Purchasing Department of the Rapid Transit Co. Since leaving that concern he has been connected with a big manufacturing concern with headquarters in Chicago. While not connected with the horticultural world in a business way he was well-known to many of us and much liked. The members of the Railroad Gardeners Association will remember him well as he took his father's place as host to them when they held their last convention in Philadelphia—the elder Huebner being at that time in the hospital.

George Economopoulos.

George Economopoulos passed away very suddenly on Wednesday, October 27, at the University Hospital in Chicago. Though but 37 years of age, he was a pioneer in the retail trade of the city, for he had been 24 years in the florist business. He came here from Zaraphona, Greece, when a boy and sold flowers in the Union Depot. Later he had a small store on State street and still later the basement of the store, which he has occupied for the past ten years, on the corner of Adams and Wabash, and which is one of the best corners on the street. Mr. Economopoulos and Frank Williams, deceased, and Gus Pappas, of Des Moines, Ia., were partners under the name of The Alpha for many years. Four years ago Mr. Williams' share was purchased and The Alpha now owns the two stores at Chicago and Des Moines. The funeral was from the Orthodox Greek Church, La Salle and Oak streets, and the floral offerings were unusually fine. Mr. Economopoulos was not married, but has a mother and sister in Greece and a brother and a nephew in Chicago. Interment was at Elmwood and a special train carried out a large number of friends.

F. W. Timme.

Another of the pioneer florists of Chicago passed away on October 27 at his home, 4616 N. Tripp avenue. Frederick William Timme was born in Madgeburg, Germany, in 1843, and came to America when a boy of fourteen. He came to Chicago at the close of the civil war, in which he served. For three years he was private gardener for Allen Pinkerton and for fifteen years he held a similar position for Potter Palmer and for the last thirty years he has been in the florist business for himself, at the above address, where he was active till four years ago when his son took charge. He made a study of his work and put thought into it as well as labor. He had the distinction of being the first Chicagoan to grow carnations, bringing the stock here the year after they were brought over from France. Some of the older varieties were originated by Mr. Timme, and one called Lucia was recognized by the Horticultural Society of Chicago in 1892. He was also well known as the writer of frequent articles for the trade papers, under the title of Timme's Timely Teachings. He is survived by Mrs. Timme, who was Isabel Johnstone, of Crystal Lake, Wis., one son, William Frederick, and one daughter, Mrs. Harry Blewitt, of Des Plaines. The funeral took place October 30 at Mee's Chapel and interment was at Crystal Lake. Six brothers-in-law acted as pall bearers.

TRANSPORTING A SPECIMEN PLANT

The problem of sending one of his big trained chrysanthemum plants from Ardsley, N. Y., to Cleveland, Ohio, for the Cleveland show, has been finally mastered by Mr. Canning. The plant, which is about 16 feet across will go on a platform car, under a movable greenhouse specially constructed for the purpose. On account of its width the plant will be tipped diagonally and an ingenious arrangement of rollers and shock absorbing bearings will keep the plant so nicely balanced that it is expected to make the journey without damage to a single bloom. The variety is Wells' Pink.

Its companion plant, a specimen of R. F. Felton, 17 feet in diameter, will be displayed at the Museum of Natural History in New York this week.

LONG ISLAND PLANT GROWERS

Twice in each year the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers participate in an inspection tour of the various establishments where greenhouse plants are grown for the New York florist trade, spending a day among the Long Island places and another day one week later with the New Jersey growers. The visit to Long Island took place last Friday, starting at Long Island City and finishing at Flatbush. The party comprised A. L. Miller, J. H. Fieser, Julius Roehrs, Harry Dreyer, George Scott, Alfred Zeller, John Birnie, H. C. Steinhoff, L. Schmutz, Jr., Harry Schmutz, W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., Henry Baumann, Paul Fischer, Chas. Koch, Jos. Baumann, H. A. Wagner, Jr., C. Madsen, K. Christensen, Anton Schultheis, Jr., Herman Schoelzel, T. B. De Forest and W. J. Stewart. The growers visited were A. Schultheis, College Point; Louis Dupuy, Dreyer Bros. and Keller Company, all of Whitestone; H. D. Darlington and Louis Enne, Flushing; John Miesem, Elmhurst; A. L. Miller, Jamaica; H. A. Wagner, John Scott, Louis Schmutz, Chas. Koch and Chas. Zeller & Son, all of Flatbush, Brooklyn. After a glimpse of these thirteen establishments—or rather, twelve, for Miesem grows only lilies—one is moved to marvel how or where this prodigious stock of Boston ferns, ericas, poinsettias, ardisias, cyclamen, primulas, genistas, pot chrysanthemums, azaleas, solanums, dracaenas, oranges, begonias, pandanus, ficuses, and the long list of less abundant things is ever marketed. Even the visiting growers themselves were amazed at the stupendous aggregate of ericas and Boston ferns of all the popular forms that confronted them in this little trip around one limited section of the great metropolitan district. Azaleas have been coming in freely and there will doubtless be enough of them for both Christmas and Easter for most of the plants were received in good condition. Judging from the number of young ardisias coming on in several of the larger places there will be no scarcity of this favorite next year.

One of the prettiest sights was a house of Jerusalem cherries at Schultheis' place that fairly sparkled with the myriads of berries, and also we cannot pass without mention of one of several houses of chrysanthemums in 6-inch pots—the best the writer ever saw. Here and at Dupuy's, Keller's and Darlington's, are ericas—principally melanthera—that must number high in the hundreds of thousands, in all sizes from "fingerlings" up to 6-year-old giants 4 to 5 feet high, of which Keller shows a whole house. Darlington has extensive ranges of frames filled with countless ericas and heated by subterranean boilers. Besides the extensive plant houses filled with the highest-class stock in the country, the Keller Company has quite an acreage of outside nursery. At Louis Dupuy's, Mr. Dupuy being absent at the funeral of Mrs. Dorval, Mrs. Dupuy did the honors. At Dreyer's it is ferns, ferns, ferns, and plenty of dwarf poinsettias and heavily fruited oranges, among other things. Louis Enne has an imposing range of houses, including a large new house just completed by Hitchings & Co., for sweet peas. Good taste is displayed in the planting of the entrance and driveway of Mr. Enne's place with lilacs, rambling roses and other fine hardy material.

A. L. Miller's establishment is a never-resting hive of activity. Men and wheelbarrows everywhere and the houses and grounds are the picture of neatness. There are four new houses of Lord & Burnham construction and heating. Mr. Miller is trying out the new Salvia Greggii in all conceivable ways as a future pot plant for the Christmas holidays. C. H. Wagner and John Scott have no end of ferns. There are veritable forests of them, and the "Home of Scottii" bids fair to hold its prestige for a long time yet. C. H. Wagner, Jr., is a shining light in the Wagner place, where cement walls and other improvements are being installed. Louis Schmutz has two places in Flatbush and both were visited. One is the old Meisner place and it is a pleasure to go through an establishment where artistic arrangement of the stock is so much in evidence. Zeller's is another place where one is impressed with the neatness and scrupulous care which count for so much. Young ferns and promiscuous plant stock are the specialties. At Chas. Koch's callas are a special crop and are blooming well already.

It was quite a privilege to see all these lucrative establishments in the short space of a late October day. Separated as they are, a trip of such extent would be impossible were it not for the now indispensable automobile, a luxury that is no burden to the prosperous Long Island grower. A sumptuous mid-day repast, presided over by that master of the art of masterful diplomacy, A. L. Miller, president of the association and frank and ingenuous friend to all who come, was enjoyed at Middle Village.

The Providence Journal for Sunday, October 24, devoted the greater part of an entire page to an illustrated story about George L. Stillman, the noted dahlia grower of Westerly, and his products. Mr. Stillman is looked upon by most of the dahlia specialists as invincible in the shows.

The value of horticultural merchandise arriving at the Port of New York for the week ending October 23, is given as follows: Clover seed, $14,783; grass seed, $1,187; fertilizer, $665.

THE SEVEN BEST CARNATIONS.

Will you kindly publish in HORTICULTURE seven of the very best carnations grown for the market, in order according to value, including size, prolific growing, and value on the market?

Thanking you, Very truly,
M. B.

Long Island, N. Y.

WHITE.—1st, White Perfection. 2nd, Matchless will take its place after we get on to its little trick.

White Wonder with some people pays better than White Perfection.

LIGHT PINK.—1st, Enchantress Supreme or Gloriosa. 2nd, Alice looks good to me but have not had it long enough.

DARK PINK.—1st Winsor or Good Cheer. 2nd, Ward is very good every way except prolificacy; makes not enough flowers and splits sometimes.

SCARLET.—1st, Beacon. 2nd, Herald does well, but in winter Beacon is better.

CRIMSON.—1st, Harry Fenn. 2nd, Pocahontas.

VARIEGATED.—1st, Benora.

The above have so far always paid their board and mine when properly handled. They are my favorites; other growers have theirs.

G. THOMMEN.

Billerica, Mass.

Our records would show the following varieties to be the best seven in the order named: Beacon; Enchantress Supreme; White Wonder; Benora; White Enchantress; Pink Delight; Gloriosa.

This refers only to the return per plant in dollars and cents as the matter of size, number of flowers produced, value in the market all contribute to this same end.

The variety Matchless has not been taken into consideration in making up this list nor has the old variety Enchantress. We question if the variety Enchantress would make a place, but Matchless might, depending on the locality where it is grown.

L. J. REUTER.

Westerly, R. I.

Answering your inquiry, my experience has been that the following are the best paying carnations in the market: White Wonder, White Enchantress, Enchantress Supreme, Pink Delight, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Dorothy Gordon, Beacon.

Yours,

E. W. FENGAR.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

WASHINGTON.

Sealed proposals will be received at the office of the Supervising Architect, Treasury Building, Washington, D. C., until November 13, for planting trees, shrubs, etc., on the grounds of the Federal Building at Steelton, Pa. Drawings and specifications may be had on application to the custodian of the building or at the Washington office.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has ordered the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe and other railroads to apply the fourth class rate, with a minimum carload weight of 15,000 pounds, to all future shipments of sphagnum moss from City Point, Mather, Sparta, Tomah, and other points in the State of Wisconsin taking the same rates, to Oklahoma City, Okla., and has condemned the charge under the fifth class rating, with a minimum carload weight of 24,000 pounds as unreasonable. This action was taken on the complaint of the Barteldes Seed Company, of Lawrence, Kansas, and a traffic organization of Oklahoma City.

Nursery stock from Geneva, Dansville, and Brighton, N. Y.; North Abington, Mass., and Dresher, Pa., will hereafter take a rate of 37 cents per hundred pounds in carload lots, and 68 cents per hundred pounds in less than carload lots, to Lakeland, Minn. Wooden tree labels from Derry, N. H., will also take these rates. The L. L. May Company, of St. Paul, Minn., had filed a complaint with the Interstate Commerce Commission attacking the rates assessed by the railroads as being considerable higher than those applied to similar shipments to Stillwater, Minn. The Commission concurred and ordered the railroads to place the above quoted rates in effect on or before December 30, 1915.

One of the most successful chrysanthemum shows in the history of the Department of Agriculture has been in progress in the greenhouses at the north side of the grounds. An innovation this year is the lighting of the houses to permit of people visiting the show after the hours usually observed for closing. Many of the exhibits are very noteworthy. Among the new varieties is Queen Mary white, and Mrs. William H. Walker sulphur yellow. It is said that this is better than either the Bob Pulling or Mrs. R. C. Pulling which were declared to be the best yellows at last year's show. James Wilson, white, shows fine form this year. William Saunders, bronze, is exceptionally good, and Amarantha is also worthy of mention.

A number of very excellent window displays were made last week for All Hallowe'en. At Gude Bros. store the window was banked with cornstalks and in the center were placed very attractive baskets of flowers. At the store of George C. Shaffer pumpkins were hollowed out and filled with asters, small chrysanthemums and other flowers and laid on a moss covered floor. At the back of the window were standards of cornstalks and a rustic fence went across the entire width. One of the best of the windows was that of J. H. Small & Sons, where Old Mother Goose in appropriate costume and perched on a broom as if flying towards the skies was the central figure. Back and at the sides of this were palms, ferns, high standards of cornstalks, and vases of attractive looking chrysanthemums forming a sort of semi-circle within which had been heaped a large number of pumpkins.

An interesting discussion on the comparative advisability of fall and spring planting of trees, shrubs and hardy herbaceous plants was participated in by experts on the subject. Chrysanthemums from S. J. Goddard adorned the banquet table.

These two have seen many changes and vicissitudes in the flower trade since their first skirmish as seller and buyer respectively.

A beautiful five-piece silver service is seen this week at Poehlmann Bros. It is offered by this firm for the most tasteful arrangement of a basket of cut flowers, at the Grand Floral Festival. The basket of flowers is each year becoming more popular.

The news of the sudden death of Geo. Economopoulos early Wednesday morning was a shock to the trade, very few of whom knew of his illness. He was about the market as usual on Monday. A little later on the same day came the news that F. W. Timme, one of Chicago's pioneer florists, passed away. A more complete notice of both will be found in the obituary columns.

The store operated by Mrs. and Geo. Lubliner, at 36 S. Wabash avenue, has been purchased by Schiller, the Florist. The transfer includes all the fixtures and the lease on the store for three years. Miss Bert Schiller will have charge and will be assisted by Chas. Zinns. This store will make a feature of floral gifts for all occasions, something new. The Schillers now have three stores, one on the west side, one on the north side and now the new Gift Shop in the loop.

George Hallam, the North Side florist, is seriously ill with pneumonia at his home in old Allegheny.

Julius W. Ludwig has just been elected a member of the Board of Directors of the Frosinn Singing Society.

Henry Meuschke, treasurer of the Ludwig Floral Company, has been appointed to take charge of the floral booth in connection with the bazaar to be held in December by the affiliated German societies.

Beginning with November 9th and ending on December 3rd, Norman Grubbs will conduct a number of exhibits and contests, principally corn and onions. Experts will be present from the Pennsylvania State College and award prizes for the quickest maturing and highest yielding products, and determine upon the varieties best adapted to this locality.

Among the commercial florists and private gardeners who will attend the Cleveland Flower Show next week are the following: W. Jarvis Smith, Joseph Koenig, Julius W. Ludwig, Gilbert Ludwig, E. C. Reineman, James Moore, E. C. Ludwig, DeForrest W. Ludwig, David Fraser, Aloysius Anthony Leach, Ernest R. Bolton, Ernest Guter, James Wiseman, Joseph Devlin, Henry B. Keiller, Fred Burki and William Usinger.

On last Tuesday evening a preliminary meeting was held in the office of the H. C. Frick greenhouse, to consider the advisability of organizing a club for all private gardeners and horticultural amateurs in Western Pennsylvania. About fifteen men were present and decided to call a meeting a little later in the East Liberty branch of Carnegie Library. Several financiers, owners of large estates and interested in the horticultural features thereof, have promised their co-operation and support.

ST. LOUIS

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, celebrated their silver wedding on October 28. Many beautiful presents were sent by friends.

Miss Matilda Meinhardt, well known in the ladies' circle in the Society of

A VALENTINE HEART.

Used in a Window Scene at the Jones Russell Co.'s Store, Cleveland, Ohio.

American Florists, surprised her many friends by her announcement of her engagement to Mr. William H. Boaz, a wealthy real estate man. Mr. Boaz is a widower with several children and has a beautiful home in Kirkwood.

The officers of the Florist Club, with the Spring Show Committee, and committees on the carnation meeting preparations, held a very interesting meeting October 28 at the home of Frank Windler. It was decided to call a special meeting of the club in order to place the regular meeting day one week later, as many of the members will be away attending flower shows at Cleveland and Chicago, so the next meeting will be held at the Missouri Botanical Garden, November 18. This will come right at the height of the Chrysanthemum Show at the garden, which opened this week to continue throughout the month. After the meeting the members sat down to a fine lunch, at which a great deal of talk on making interesting meetings was indulged in.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON The market is tending downward as a result of the heavy influx of chrysanthemums which now begins to assume the proportions of an avalanche. Roses are feeling the stress and are in excess of requirements despite the optimistic assertion of a rising young salesman at the market that they are "scarce and kiting every minute." Carnations move slowly. Violets are not up to standard quality, the singles being particularly poor thus far. Calendulas and antirrhinums are in good supply now.

BUFFALO Quite a change in condition is noticed this week. Receipts are heavier all around and the demand has fallen off. The supply of everything has increased over 100 per cent. Chrysanthemums come in more plentifully, also carnations. Roses are a little overplentiful to hold up prices, though considerable business was had at the end of last week.

CHICAGO The increase in the amount of stock coming into this market, reported last week, still continues. Chrysanthemum season is at its height and the big flowers are coming in now in all colors. The rainy summer evidently has not affected most of the varieties for they are firm and come out of the boxes in splendid shape. Pompons are filling the counters. The early ones are late and the late ones are early, so they are here in great quantities now but will have a short season. Carnations are not so much in demand as before but stock is excellent and sales are fair. The supply of roses is also a little ahead of the demand which makes it easier for the retailer whose trade uses the cheaper grades of stock. The warm weather is not so favorable for violets. Sweet peas are coming in limited quantities. Long stemmed American Beauties are of splendid quality and the price keeps up accordingly. The supply of short and medium Beauties is not large. Potted chrysanthemums are offered at several of the wholesale houses.

The market is pretty well supplied and is more than able to care for all present demands. Prices are not quite as high as they were. Chrysanthemums are in a very heavy supply. Roses are plentiful. The same is true of carnations and lilies. Dahlias and cosmos proved quite a factor in All Saints Day business and served to keep down the prices for this day. The first sweet peas came in last week. Many of the violet offerings are of the very highest quality.

NEW YORK The flower market is much more brilliant with stock this week than it is with customers and trade is very irregular. Chrysanthemums of all degrees are having their innings and are getting to that condition of abundance when a haggle is an indispensable part of every sale. Roses are coming in freely also and their movement is hampered for the time being by the overpowering presence of the chrysanthemums. Among the newer roses that stand out impressively as sure winners we must make mention of Stanley, which is a leading variety among Traendly & Schenck's daily receipts. It looks as though it might carry to California and back again in good order. Cattleyas are not over-plentiful and many of those seen are insignificant blooms. Violets do not come forward very fast and probably will not while the weather remains so warm. There is still more or less outdoor garden stock coming in, cosmos being especially good in this class. Lilies, carnations and lily of the valley are normal and call for no special mention at this time. Callas are beginning to appear here and there.

PHILADELPHIA What little change has taken place in the market during the past week may be summed up in few words. Business demand remained about on an even keel but supplies with a few exceptions were much larger and so the general average of prices has declined. The increase in supplies is especially pronounced in chrysanthemums and carnations. Roses also come in more freely but not to such a degree. The most draggy on the rose list have been the Killarneys, both pinks and whites. Beauties and Russells go better and there is a good demand for Hoosier and Hadley among the reds. Another favorite red to be seen around is Leonard's thirty-three—whatever that is! Maybe some old variety that Leonard is keeping the real name of under his hat for the time being. Richmond seems to be down and out in this locality—not that the public don't like it, but that the growers refuse to grow anything that fails to show square-foot record the year 'round. The Polyantha class seem to be wonders when it comes to keeping qualities. We have seen some lots two and three weeks in the cooling rooms still fresh and fragrant. Sweet Marie is especially notable in that connection. They say the ladies like a bunch of these for corsage wear as well as they do a bunch of cattleyas. Gardenias continue scarce. They say they dropped their buds in September, which accounts for the scarcity. We fancy there's another reason — too many grown in recent years and the result was "a lemon." Now the pendulum has swung to the other extreme. The best of the chrysanthemums now arriving are Razer, Enguehart, McNeice and Chieftain; a few good Bonnaffon also which is unusually early for that fine variety. There is an orange yellow one called Strafford that is in great vogue. It is only medium size but a great handler and keeper. Calendula and mignonette are among the new minor items that have made their advent; also a few cypripediums. Orchids generally are not so redundant as they were and better prices are being realized.

The bright sunny PITTSBURGH days are producing quantities of flowers of practically all kinds, the market value still remaining about the same for all. However, the legitimate trade is feeling the effect of the market gardeners, who are disposing of their chrysanthemums and other blooms at less than the wholesale prices. There are plenty of home-grown lilies and roses and fine fancy dahlias continue to come in from the New Jersey producers. Hallowe'en was never as generally and elaborately observed as this year, and consequently brought large compensation to the dispensers of Southern smilax, and artificial autumn leaves.

The continuation of summery weather SAN FRANCISCO is held responsible for the increased supplies of flowers which have been arriving the past week, also for the slight falling off in retail business. Everybody who can possibly do so is off for the exposition now that the close is drawing near and rain can be expected any day. The abundance of chrysanthemums overshadows everything else in the market and they have not been cleaning up so well the last few days as they did previously, although the quality is fully as good as earlier in the season, and new varieties continue to arrive. The only ground for complaint is the oversupply. Quantities are now being shipped and effort is being made to stimulate this demand in order to relieve the local market. Pompons are still offered freely, both cut and potted. As other potted plants are rather scarce, these are meeting with considerable popularity. Dahlias are holding out remarkably well, and for this late in the year show very good quality. There is no longer a cry of shortage of roses, with the exception possibly of Cecile Bruner, which has a big call both locally and for shipping. A good many violets are being shipped also. There are plenty orchids for all requirements, and the demand is fairly good. A few callas made their appearance the past week, but the quantity was too limited for them to be much of a feature.

The commission men ST. LOUIS say the market was all that could be expected the last week, but are looking for a greatly increased supply this week owing to the very warm weather which is bringing out the stuff in big lots. The increased supply of chrysanthemums has caused the downfall of roses and carnations and the market is crowded up with these. Other flowers are all in plenty and trade is very light.

The glut of chrysanthemums which WASHINGTON now prevails has worked havoc with the flower market generally and all other stock is in over supply. There are fewer local roses coming in, but there are more than enough roses to fill all demands. Lily of the valley and longiflorum lilies are no longer reported as scarce. The warm weather has prevented a ready movement of single violets, which are now coming in fine shape.

Southern Wild Smilax
KNUD NIELSEN
Evergreen, Ala.

as well as of the doubles which made their appearance last week. Sweet peas are again to be had and there is a small offering of yellow daisies. Orchids are no longer in oversupply and sold well during the week. Up to this time the frost has not been severe enough to clear the market of outdoor flowers and these are quite a factor in the day's business. Plenty of carnations are now to be had. American Beauty roses are selling better. Some very fine snapdragon was offered during the week.

BELGIAN ENTERPRISE.

McHutchison & Co. received from Belgium last week 458 packages of azaleas, etc., per steamers Ryndam and Oosterdyk. This week they received 666 packages more per S. S. Martensdyk and Rotterdam. This list excludes shipments of Holland origin. Considering the position of the Belgian growers, the difficulties of getting permits to ship—first from the British and then from the German authorities, the problem of getting transportation, etc., the Belgian growers certainly deserve great credit for their energy and resourcefulness.

Philadelphia There are said to be twenty-two applicants for the position of landscape gardener for Fairmount Park to succeed the late Oglesby Paul. Most of them are high-class men and eminently fitted to fill the position. Consequently it will probably turn on a matter of either family or political influence or both, so that merit need not feel bad if it does not happen to have enough of these two important ingredients to land on top. Merit may perhaps not have been clever enough to choose its own grandfather.

Dear Sir: Some time ago we ordered a copy of Thomas' Book on Roses. We promised to send you postage as soon as we learned the amount. The book was so good that we forgot all about postage until today. Please forgive our lapse of memory.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

FLORISTS' CLUB OF PHILADELPHIA.

The regular monthly meeting was held on Nov. 2nd. Exhibits consisted of a new rose from the Florex Gardens much after the style of Russell, but fuller; and five seedlings from Edward Towill showing quite some promise in the future progress of the Queen of Flowers.

The main entertainment of the evening was the debate: "Is it for the benefit of the business at large to keep flower vendors off the street?" For two hours the wit, wisdom and philosophy waxed and waned but there was not one dull moment and the crowded meeting was so primed that the chair had finally to call time on them. As one member expressed it to the writer after the meeting—it was as good as two hours at Keith's.

John Westcott, Robert Craig, Charles H. Grakelow, Harry S. Betz, Charles E. Meehan, Robert Kift, Alfred M. Campbell and Mr. Zeiger were the star orators of the occasion.

On the question finally being put to a vote the result was about eight to one in favor of removing the present restrictions against selling posies on the street and a petition will be sent to the authorities to that effect showing that that body was not properly informed some years ago as to the sentiment of the trade when it passed a restrictive ordinance on the subject.

The essay committee presented their program for February, March and April which was adopted as follows:

FEBRUARY: "A Review of the newer carnations: their value and promise: as shown by tests of the past season." Assigned to Robert T. Brown of the Cottage Gardens Co., New York.

Members are requested to bring to this meeting anything new or interesting, especially in carnations as this will be distinctly "Carnation night"—February being the month this flower shows the zenith of its splendor.

MARCH:—"The modern winter-flowering Sweet Pea—its origin and development to date." Assigned to Howard M. Earl, manager for W. Allee Burpee & Co., pioneer developers of the Sweet Pea in America; and supplemented by Alban Harvey, of Brandywine Summit, one of the most successful commercial growers of the Sweet Pea in this locality—with remarks and exhibits of the most up-to-date varieties.

Exhibits are also requested from the Widener conservatories, and all other growers who have anything interesting to show in the Sweet Pea.

APRIL:—"A symposium on the newer Roses: what they think of those they have tested during the past few seasons." Assigned to Stephen Mortensen, Edward Towill and Martin Samtman.

Richness and variety in the rose family (from a commercial cut flower standpoint) has made great progress recently. A dozen years ago we had about five varieties now we have nearly thirty to choose from.

Samuel S. Pennock, president of the American Rose Society, is hereby authorized to request in the name of the club, a donation of twelve blooms each of all the standard varieties available from the different growers and to stage same for the information and delight of our members and their friends. Any other member of the club who may have something new or interesting is also requested to exhibit, so as to make this a gala night for "The Queen of Flowers."

The program for the December and January meetings has already been reported in HORTICULTURE. Altogether the prospect for a lively winter in the pioneer Florists' Club of the country is good.

When you can get a man like John Westcott, who will be seventy-five if he lives to the 16th of next December, to get up and make a speech such as he did at this meeting almost on a minute's notice, you can bet there's a whole lot of life in the venerable organization yet. He surprised us all and covered himself with glory.

Liveliest and best attended meeting in many a long day and at no expense to the club for free eats or drinks; and the December meeting will be still better. Don't miss it.

The New Haven County Horticultural Society held a very interesting meeting last week. It was the summing up of the work at the annual exhibition in September. The president of the society, Herbert F. Clark, gave out hundreds of dollars in bank checks and hundreds of dollars in other valuable premiums to the fortunate exhibitors. In turn President Clark was presented with the Hitchings cup which he had won. This cup was presented by the secretary of the society, W. E. McIntosh, who took occasion to praise the president for the very fine blooms which he had grown.

NEW YORK WHOLESALE FLORISTS' PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION.

The annual banquet of this association was held at the Hotel Breslin in New York on Thursday, October 28, and was a great success. To the committee in charge, A. H. Langjahr, P. J. Smith and Wm. P. Ford, great credit was accorded for the able manner in which all details were arranged. The banquet room was very tastefully decorated with autumn leaves and yellow chrysanthemums, and on the large table was a centre-piece of Hoosier Beauty roses. Each member wore a gardenia boutonniere. A fine musical programme added to the enjoyment of the repast. Coffee and cigars being served, P. J. Smith introduced Walter F. Sheridan as master of ceremonies, who ably officiated, as might be expected of him. He first called upon Frank H. Traendly, president of the association, and to the great surprise of that gentleman, proceeded to pass sentence upon him for all the good he had done for the association during the eight years he had been at its head. After compelling his attention until everything in the way of nice things had been said of him, he presented him, on behalf of the association, with a beautiful gold clock and candelabra to match, as a token of the appreciation in which he was held by his fellow-members, and of his faithful service as their presiding officer.

Mr. Traendly, who for once in his life was taken completely unawares, upon recovering his composure, first assured himself that the clock was running on good time and was in good working order, then feelingly expressed his thanks, and those of Mrs. Traendly for the testimonial, promising to use his best endeavors to still further advance the interests of the association, and to continue its efficiency. Each member present added a few words of appreciation to those of the toastmaster, and, it might be said, increased the discomfiture of the gentleman under sentence.

After these proceedings, a special meeting of the association was held, at which business coming properly before the association was disposed of. Much enthusiasm over the work of the organization was evinced, and many suggestions were made looking to a further extension of its scope. The impression prevailed that there could be no better organized body of business men today than that found in the Wholesale Florists' Protective Association, whose only aim is to improve, if possible, the wholesale market conditions in New York, and to advance and protect the interests of its members in every way. The secretary-manager, Ward W. Smith, was also warmly commended for the able manner in which he had fulfilled the duties of his office. At the close, announcement was made that Mr. Traendly had that day been appointed by President Welch a mem-

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:

The Department of Floriculture is busily engaged making the final plans and arrangements for its Autumn Flower Show and Exhibition of Floral Arrangements. It has been decided to open the show on Sunday, November 7, from 2 until 10 P. M., in order that more people from the surrounding cities may have an opportunity to visit the show. The show will continue through Monday and Tuesday, November 8 and 9, being open from 10 A. M. to 10 P. M.

From the present indications it begins to look as if it would be necessary to use part of the second floor of the building in order to accommodate the various exhibits. Several of the florists in this section have offered to exhibit, for they fully understand the opportunity for advertising which this show with its free admission offers. Also several other members of the trade have signified their intention to send in exhibits of new varieties and other specialties, for they realize that the florists of this section are much interested in the show. A few of the private gardeners around the state are also intending to send something of interest. This is a show for everybody and space will be provided for anyone who wishes to send in anything of interest.

At the request of the Northampton and Holyoke Gardeners' and Florists' Club special classes, open only to their members, have been arranged. Much interest is being shown by the students in floriculture who are anticipating the competitions provided for them. Mr. Butler, of Northampton, will be on hand to give suggestions to the students in floral arrangement.

The chrysanthemums in the college greenhouses are coming along nicely and include some very fine blooms, so that a wealth of these flowers will be available. There will be a large exhibit of named varieties of the different types which should prove of interest to the growers. Chrysanthemums will be freely used in baskets, large vases, and as pot plants. Besides these and various floral arrangements the department will also have groups of house plants, Christmas plants, foliage plants, etc. There will be two large groups composed of foliage and flowering plants. There will be collections of books for amateur gardeners, of various types of ornamental containers for the home and other things of interest to the general public.

Once again the department wishes to invite one and all, and sincerely hopes that it may have an opportunity to welcome many of the florists and gardeners.

Notes.

Last Friday the formal dedication of Stockbridge Hall took place. Among the prominent speakers were W. H. Bowker, of Concord; W. Wheeler, Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, and President K. L. Butterfield.

The floriculture department is placing exhibits in several classes at the Northampton and Holyoke Florists' and Gardeners' Club show in Holyoke this week. A. S. T.

The Working Principle of the METROPOLITAN PATENTED EAVE
In A—B—C—Language

If you light a match and hold it—the heat won't bother you until the fire touches your fingers. Now take a nail, hold it at one end and apply a lit match at the other—in a moment you will have to drop it because the heat has been conducted to your fingers.

That's the working principle of the Metropolitan Patented Eave, and that's why it is self-ice-clearing.

More than 90% of the Metropolitan Patented Eave is in constant contact with the inside heat, and being of one continuous piece of cast iron, the heat penetrates right through to the outside.

That's why no snow or ice can accumulate on a Metropolitan Greenhouse.

Heat cannot penetrate eaves that are made up of two or more sections.

The Metropolitan Eave is but one of the many improvements we have made in Greenhouse construction.

Two Pipe Framers, at Columbus, Ohio

FOR H. W. Kropp, we built three Ridge & Furrow houses 28x190 feet and one 28x109 feet.

Mr. Kropp had some old time, narrow, wooden houses, which in their day had been money makers for his fathers. But they would not produce the kind of stock demanded to-day.

It was a case of build modern houses, or go out of the business. Of course growers don't go out of business. They keep getting into more and more business. It's the way the growers have of growing.

Hill and Dupre carry on their business under the name of the Indianola Floral Company. Their flower shop, in the heart of Columbus, is as attractive as it is prosperous looking.

In their two houses 28x190 feet and 12x81 feet, they grow a lot of their potted stock; carnations and ferns.

More and more, the shop owners are also owning their greenhouses.

It means just that much more profit for the shop owners.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Ardisias

These popular holiday plants should be kept from 50 to 55 degrees at night. If kept too warm and overhumid they will make a premature growth of foliage which is not wanted at this time. Turn the plants around frequently so that the sun may reach them on all sides. To develop the coloring of their berries, they require a sunny house and abundant ventilation. Give them plenty of room between so that the berries will have a chance to color up. It is important to look carefully to watering because when allowed to become too dry or too wet at the roots the plants will soon show permanent injury.

Callas

These plants when grown in pots soon exhaust the soil and should have some liquid manure once or twice a week. Those growing in beds or benches will not need feeding as yet but with the coming of spring when the beds are full of roots mulching and feeding must be resorted to. Fumigate with regularity for fly and thrips for these are difficult pests to eradicate when they have secured a firm foothold. Give a temperature of not less than 60 degrees at night. Dampen down the walks two or three times a day, especially when the temperature goes up with the sun-heat, for callas delight in a moist growing atmosphere. Those that are growing in pots soon dry out now so give them plenty of moisture at the roots.

Crotons

There is no excuse to have crotons overrun with mealy bug, thrips and red spider. Use the hose on them with proper force once or twice a week. To keep them symmetrical they should be turned around frequently. To develop their coloring they should have as much sunlight as they can possibly stand. Some varieties can not bear as much sun as others, which peculiarity can easily be noted and such plants given a little shade. Crotons like lots of heat so see that the temperature does not fall below 65 degrees at night with 10 to 15 degrees more with sunshine. If the plants are very much potbound their color can be intensified and the plants otherwise benefited by giving them some liquid manure about once a week. Plants that have grown too lanky or that are out of shape can be propagated by mossing now as well as at any other time of the year.

Next Week:—Cattleyas; Violets; Pot Evergreens for Winter; Primulas; Sowing Fern Spores; Storing Cannas, Dahlias, etc.

French Bulbs

Roman hyacinths and Paper White narcissus for early cutting must now be placed in heat to have them come in time for a trade not far off now. If the boxes are still in outside frames, in sheds or under the benches of a cool greenhouse, they must now be brought forward and the bulbs be gradually inured to a higher temperature, letting them have 45 degrees for four or five days, when real forcing may begin. But assuming that the boxes and pots were brought into greenhouses directly from outdoor trenches, that an abundance of roots were present at the time, and that these greenhouses, although styled cool could not be kept much below 50 degrees, the growth of the bulbs will have advanced to such an extent that the flower buds will by this time be plainly showing. If this be so actual forcing may be said to have already begun, and in the case of Roman hyacinths, a gradual rise to 65 degrees will bring out the blooms in about fifteen days.

Rhododendrons

Rhododendrons for the past two seasons have sold well especially at Easter. When received they can be placed in soil in some root house or cool pit and the roots kept moderately moist, wetting them as you did the azaleas. When being potted they want a very porous soil, such as two parts of fibrous loam, one part of leaf mold and about half this quantity of sand. Keep them in a cool place, anywhere just above freezing. By February bring them into a cool house where they can be started up slowly. Be sure when ordering that you get the varieties that are suitable for forcing and that they are well set with buds. In February they can be brought into a temperature of about 45 degrees at night which can be increased to about 62 degrees at night. At this stage they like a moist atmosphere and should be freely syringed, but must be removed to a more airy and a cooler house when their flowers begin to open.

Storing Hydrangeas

By this time hydrangeas should be well ripened up. Take off any dead leaves and store the plants in some place that is kept near the freezing point but not below it, say a cool shed or pit at 35 to 40 degrees, but no higher. Give them a look over now and again so they will not become dust dry. They will have plenty of time if brought in about the middle of January, as Easter is the 23rd of April.

emphatic action by the oldest florists' club in the country. It requires some courage to take such a stand, but of what use is a club without courage?

The
 new "drive"

Clubs and societies, like business firms, must keep moving ahead with the trend of the times or otherwise they will lose ground and drop behind. That the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, the oldest organization of its kind in this country in uninterrupted activity, appears to be fully alert to the opportunities and demands of the hour is well demonstrated in the progressive character of the measures that are being adopted to ensure the highest efficiency in all its departments. The great exhibition which has just closed was in many respects a distinct advance over its predecessors in its appeal to the public interest and plans are now being perfected which it is believed will still further enhance the scope and prestige of all the Boston exhibitions of the future. The value of the chief special prizes will be increased and schedules for the important shows will be issued three years in advance. Innovations equally radical in character are contemplated in connection with meetings for discussion.

Good
 fertile ground

Speaking of exhibitions, the record of attendance at the show of the Horticultural Society of New York last week, as given in our account of that event, on another page, inspires confidence in the dependability of the New York public as patrons of floral exhibitions, if such were lacking. A turnout of over 20,000 people an hour for a period of four hours on a Sunday afternoon, certainly means much in inspiration and encouragement for all who take an active part in these efforts to engage the attention and excite the interest of the multitude of city dwellers in the products of the florist and gardener. True, it was a "free" show and, furthermore, quite a percentage of the people there might have visited the Museum even had there been no flower show at the time, but the fact that all these took occasion to inspect and admire in detail all these triumphs of horticultural art counts for much in educating these people up to the standpoint where they will be prepared to willingly pay to see a flower show. Good seed has been sown in fertile ground and there can be no question as to the fruit.

Unrequited service

The Rhode Island Horticultural Society has sent out a circular letter to its members and friends calling attention to the important part the society has played in the development of horticultural and allied interests in the State, and appealing for donations to ensure the carrying out of the excellent program provided for the balance of the year. Providence, where the headquarters of the society is located, is reputed to be, per capita, one of the wealthiest, if not the wealthiest city on the American continent and there should be no grudge or reluctance on the part of the people of that city to provide generously for this organization which has served them so faithfully and well with free lectures, free exhibitions and all the good influences which such a society exerts on a community. The Rhode Island Society was organized in 1845 and incorporated in 1854, so its good work covers a period of seventy years. Its meetings and exhibitions are frequently referred to in the horticultural literature of sixty years ago and it appears to have been doing its duty without intermission ever since. Horticultural societies merit better consideration from people of means than seems to be their lot in most cases. There are other places besides Rhode Island where the same dilemma exists.

The
 championed

As recorded in our news columns last week the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, at its recent meeting, seriously tackled the old vexed question of the street flower vendor and after a full debate from all view points decided by an overwhelming vote that the street man provides the only practical outlet for the surplus stock of the grower and wholesaler under present conditions. The result will be a petition on behalf of the club to the city authorities asking that the ordinance restricting flower selling on the public streets be rescinded. With this recognition the despised street "fakir" is advanced to the position of street "vendor." We shall watch with much interest the outcome of this

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Mildew on Outdoor Roses

Mr. Arthur Ruzicka,

Dear Sir: Can you give me some formula to be used for mildew other than sulphur flowers, on outdoor growing roses? I would like to overcome mildew on outdoor roses and up to the present time have not been successful.

What would you advise? Can you give me information as to where I could procure new German roses?

Would like to know of some German rosarians in Germany.

Thanking you, I am, gratefully,

M. H. S., Walla Walla, Wash.

Mildew on outdoor roses is much more difficult to control than in the greenhouses, for outside you have no control of heat or cold, dry or wet, so that it may be almost impossible to keep your roses free from mildew. Spraying three times a week with Fungine will do a good deal to prevent the disease, and all mildew will be killed instantly on coming into contact with the spray. Grape Dust is also used, but is objected to at times because the leaves must be dusted with it. Sulphur mixed with a little lime can also be used, but this too will be objectionable because of the dust on leaves. Fungine will not mark the foliage, will cleanse it if anything. In spraying white roses in full bloom, be careful not to let the spray hit the flowers very much, as it is liable to discolor these.

I have never been on the Pacific-Northwest coast, so perhaps some rose growers either in your state or in California could help you more than I can. As for names of German firms in Germany, I am sorry to say I know none, and doubt very much that you could get into communication with any firms over there at present, because of the war. There are some good firms advertising in HORTICULTURE, who make a specialty of rose growing, and who have acres and acres of acclimated stock, in all the leading varieties, and I would advise you to look over these firms' catalogues or write to them, and I am sure that you will get better satisfaction than importing from a foreign country. Perhaps some one connected with the German Embassy or Consulate in this country could furnish you names of these firms, or some of HORTICULTURE's readers may know of German firms who make a specialty of growing roses.

Blackspot on Roses

Mr. Arthur Ruzicka,

Dear Sir: Will you kindly explain to me why you recommend ammoniacal copper solution for blackspot on roses, at the same time recommending Fungine?

I have used the latter for several seasons with excellent results. A short time ago I took over a place, which had a large stock of the older insecticides in the potting room, and the only fungicide was the copper solution. I invariably spray roses each week with Fungine, but at this place could not order until the other fungicide had been used up. I sprayed a couple of weeks ago with the copper, using the prescribed dose and all the young growths were scalded. It was a dull day and what surprised me was the fact that a batch of Alternanthera Jewel and nana compacta that were on a shelf on one side of the house that did not come in contact with the spraying were literally scalded. Can it be that the ammonia fumes in the compound were too strong or what? I mixed in a wooden pail as I always do Fungine.

I shall never use the copper solution again but shall stick to Fungine. It is the best fungicide I know and I would not be without it.

Yours truly,

W. R. F., New York.

Speaking from personal experience, we have not had a serious case of spot for a long time, and we have had little occasion to use either copper carbonate or Fungine for the disease mentioned, and as we are interested in roses commercially, we have not been spraying regularly, in order to keep operating expenses as low as possible. I do not remember recommending a prepared solution of the ammoniacal copper carbonate such as you mention, having always preferred to use home-made mixture whenever we had occasion to use same. From your letter I would be of the opinion that the mixture was old, and possibly badly settled to the bottom of the container. If this was the case, the amount of ammonia poured off would be out of proportion with the other materials in the mixture, and the chances are it would be too strong. You mention spraying on a cloudy day: this, I think is a mistake when using the copper mixture for a spray. I would much prefer a clear day, when the houses can be aired freely, so there will be little danger from the fumes. Of course with nicotine solutions it is different, and these should be used on cloudy days when there is little air on the houses in order that full benefit of the spray may be obtained. Fungine is a very good article, and has been advertised freely, and I think I am right in assuming that all progressive growers should be familiar with it. I would recommend a number of patented articles that are real good to have around the greenhouses, but there would be growers who would fail to get the desired results even with the most minute directions, and the outcome would be that I would be accused of accepting pay for doing so. That is why I recommend mixtures that are home-made as far as possible, and if the grower does not get the results expected, his failure can usually be traced to his own mistake. This is also true of using prepared articles, but they can always be blamed for not being mixed right or something, but when the grower mixes his own he can find no fault with the mixture as he made it himself.

THE FALL FLOWER SHOWS

Boston

We were able to give a fairly descriptive summary in our last issue of the situation on the opening day of the annual Autumn Exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. The prizes had not then been awarded, however, and these with the new exhibits in the following days and other items of interest furnish material for a few further notes this week.

A significant fact which many will readily note is the rapid advancement of the commercial florists in the competitive classes as compared with the situation a few years ago when the plant groups and specimens and orchid collections were mostly contributed by the private gardeners. A glance over the list of awards which follows will be sufficient to show the drift of present development. It is gratifying to be able to state that the attendance was just double that of last year.

New York

The Horticultural Society of New York has good reason to feel elated over the success of its Fall Show which was held at the American Museum of Natural History on November 4 to 7 inclusive. There were many notable displays by commercial growers and private gardeners of high repute and the public appeared to take an unusual interest in it all. On Sunday, the last day, the attendance reached 88,593 between the hours of 1 and 5 P. M., making the stupendous total of 194,024 visitors during the four days.

The annual chrysanthemum show of the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held on November 1. J. Keene of the Mt. Bruno Floral Company made a splendid display of chrysanthemums, roses and carnations which won a special certificate of merit. A. C. Wilshire with single flowered chrysanthemums, John Walsh with cattleyas and W. H. Whiting with promiscuous plants were among the prominent contributors.

mum plants for which John Canning, supt. for Adolph Lewisohn has become famous were again the central feature of the spacious foyer of the Museum. The varieties were R. F. Felton, Lady Lydia and Greystone. The Felton plant reached the unprecedented spread of 17 ft. and, in addition to the 1st prizes won by the trio, this plant got the $100 sweepstakes cup for the best plant shown. The honors in the other chrysanthemum plant classes were all with Samuel Untermyer.

The cut flower classes for commercial growers were cleaned up by Charles H. Totty and Scott Bros. In the non-commercial, Adolph Lewisohn captured four 1sts, Mrs. F. A. Constable, gard. Jas. Stuart, four; Edwin Jenkins one, Mrs. Payne Whitney, gard. L. R. Forbes, one; A. Iselin, Jr., gard. Jos. Tiernan one, and Frederick Sturgis, gard. Thos. Bell, one. Arthur N. Cooley, gard. E. W. Edwards; D. E. Oppenheimer, gard. Alex. Macdonald, and Mrs. Pauline Boettger, gard. Rudolph Heidkamp, were close 2nds in second classes. For dinner table decoration of chrysanthemum flowers only, open to all, the winners were A. Lewisohn 1st, Mrs. Payne Whitney 2nd, Mrs. P. Boettger 3rd.

The rose entries were excellent. Chas. H. Totty won the silver medal for best new variety not in commerce. The other commercial classes were monopolized by F. R. Pierson Co. and L. A. Noe. J. B. Duke, gard. A. A. Macdonald, S. Untermyer, H. C. Sturgis, gard. Henry Kulberg, were the high liners in the non-commercial classes.

In carnations Cottage Gardens won 1st and the silver medal sweepstakes, and Springfield Floral Co. 2nd, J. A. Macdonald, gard. R. Hughes winning four 1st and Mrs. Payne Whitney and H. C. Sturgis one each in non-commercial. A. Lewisohn on begonias, F. R. Pierson Co. on Nephrolepis display and Mrs. P. Boettger on specimen Bostoniensis and Mrs. F. A. Constable in all the palm and cibotium classes followed by Mrs. Boettger as 2nd, was the story of the foliage and decorative plant section. Lager & Hurrell won all the commercial orchid prizes including the silver medal for Cattleya Olivia. The non-commercial orchid exhibitors were George Schlegel and Clement Moore and the collections from these two famous establishments were superb, as usual. A specimen of Brasso-Cattleya Maronæ superba by Clement Moore won the sweepstakes silver medal as the best orchid shown.

The list of special prizes when same are given with discretion by the judges and not merely used to indulge the promiscuous exhibitors, will often give a more intelligent idea of the intrinsic merits of a flower show than a perusal of the awards in the scheduled classes. In this exhibition the following special awards were made:

Bobbink & Atkins, collection of chrysanthemums, special mention; Mrs. F. A. Constable, for specimen of Adiantum Crowianum, cash, for two specimen palms, cash, for collection of Nerines, silver medal; Mrs. H. Darlington, gard. P. W. Popp, for display of dahlias, cash; J. B. Duke, general display from Duke's Farm, gold medal and cash; H. Gaut, vase of bronze seedling chrysanthemum, No. 19, certificate, vase apricot seedling chrysanthemum, special mention; Adolph Lewisohn, for two bush chrysanthemum plants, cash; Jas. A. Macdonald, for carnation seedlings, special mention; J. A. Manda, for specimen Cattleya labiata, silver medal; W. A. American Institute.

The American Institute Chrysanthemum Show opened on Wednesday, November 3, continuing for three days, and was in all respects fully equal to any of its predecessors. The chrysanthemum blooms were very fine as were the roses, orchids and carnations. Max Schling made a sensational display of decorative flower work which attracted much attention from visitors and a display was also made by G. E. M. Stumm showing artistic arrangements in baskets, vases, etc., that was at once interesting and educational. In the very lengthy list of prize winners we find frequent mention of the names of Chas. H. Totty, Scott Bros., Wm. Vert, gard. to Howard Gould; Ernest Robinson, gard. to Mrs. M. F. Plant; Robt. Jones, gard. to Percy Chubb; Fred. Hitchman, gard. to R. Pulitzer; W. F. Gordon, gard. to S. Chicago

As we go to press the Grand Floral Festival is fast getting into shape and though the hour of the formal opening has scarcely arrived, there are troops of visitors coming through the doors. The Coliseum building, the home of so many floral shows, never looked more beautiful, with its festoons of wild smilax draping the roof to the very top, through which myriads of electric lights look down upon the most artistic arrangement of cut flowers ever shown in this building. The chrysanthemums are queen of the day as was expected and the tall vases are filled with blooms reaching to a height of twelve feet. Much of the floor space is taken by the allied trades as well as by growers and retailers who responded more generously than in many of the past events. Much interest centers round the vases containing 100 large chrysanthemums arranged for effect, the cash prizes being an interesting item. Exhibitors from the east and from the west have added their part to the good showing made by the local trade. The formal opening is expected to be honored by the presence of Mayor Thompson and the many special features which include an orchestra, fancy dancing, and young ladies dressed in evening gowns to demonstrate how flowers may best be worn, all have stimulated an interest in the show and there is every indication now that it will be a grand success.

One of the first awards was for (Class 16) display of chrysanthemums arranged for effect. Geo. Wienhoeber captured first prize of $200 for this entry with a very elaborate collection arranged in vases covered with dark velvet which gave a very pleasing and striking effect.

A CHRYSANTHEMUM DISPLAY AT PIERCE'S CONSERVATORY, SCHENLEY PARK, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Cleveland

With a large number of trade exhibits and a record breaking attendance of florists from all parts of the country, the Cleveland Flower Show opened auspiciously on Wednesday, Nov. 11. Prominent growers in attendance were of a single mind in pronouncing the show a success from every standpoint and without qualification many of them said it is the best show they ever attended.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America staged a display estimated at more than 100,000 blooms. Special interest centered in the contest of Ohio private growers for the James W. Corrigan cup, valued at $500, and is the largest of more than $10,000 worth of cups and medals offered for exhibits on the part of private growers. It was won by H. S. Firestone of Akron.

The special $250 cup was easily won by Adolph Lewisohn, Ardsley, N. Y., whose mammoth plants fifteen feet in diameter and bearing more than 1,200 blossoms, arrived at the show in fine condition under personal escort of John Canning, superintendent of the Lewisohn estate. Mr. Canning also exhibited in several other classes.

The individual exhibits number more than 2,000. This includes commercial exhibits, garden accessories, literature, etc. There is a floor space of 65,000 square feet in the Coliseum and every available inch is covered, leaving only adequate aisle space. The retailers' section is complete with a variety of examples of table decorations and other practical suggestions for the use of flowers about the home, and in connection with society events.

The tea garden, a feature in charge of the Women's Committee of the show, proved a popular attraction from the moment the show opened. To avoid overcrowding it was found necessary to charge a small admission for entrance and even with this restriction the capacity of the garden has been taxed throughout the afternoon and evening. At intervals examples of society dancing and vocal selections are given from the stage and refreshments are served at all times. Visiting florists commented favorably upon this feature and it is indicated that no flower show of the future will be complete without a tea garden.

The local florists who have worked earnestly for many months to make the show of interest to the trade, are gratified with the large attendance of florists present on the opening day. It was stated by many that considering there is no convention, the show has attracted a remarkable attendance of trade people. No show held west of New York and Philadelphia has had a similar attendance and many others will arrive tomorrow and on succeeding days of the exhibition.

E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., was a big winner, capturing the C. S. A. silver cup with a display of Turners, the sweepstakes prize for the best twelve blooms with a staging of Odessa, and figured in several other winnings, including the prize for best fifty blooms, in variety.

Frank Allan, Grosse Point, Mich., also won in several classes. He captured the sweepstakes for best eighteen blooms with a showing of Turners and the special vase of fifteen blooms, three varieties.

Philadelphia

This annual event took place the past week, opening on Tuesday and closing on Friday. A very creditable display was furnished in all departments. Three of the biggest exhibitors of former shows were missing this year, the Widener and Hunter conservatories being absent on account of the recent demise of the owners and the Newbold display from some change of policy in the management of that estate. The chrysanthemum was of course the main feature and we have never seen finer flowers in the cut bloom section. The pot plants were also very creditable.

A magnificent display of orchids was staged by Louis Burk, consisting of eighty-four distinct species all beautifully arranged and accurately labeled. He was awarded four firsts and a crowning compliment in the shape of the Society's gold medal as an additional appreciation.

Two fine groups of foliage and flowering plants put up by Dodds and Robertson added greatly to the general effect in the main hall. The first honors went deservedly to Mr. Dodds, whose staging and arrangement was not only in the finest taste, but the rich and varied specimens were unusually abundant for the limited space allowed.

The front of the stage was occupied by a fine collection of foliage plants and ferns from the Dreer nurseries at Riverton. The Robert Craig Co. staged a small but select collection of crotons, dracenas and cyclamens which showed excellent finish and culture.

The outer and inner vestibules and the lower hall were occupied by the trade displays of the nurserymen and seedsmen—Adolph Muller, Thomas Meehan & Sons, and Harry S. Betz showing excellent displays of evergreens. Thos. Long showed here his big specimen ferns including the famous Davallia with a spread of some ten feet or so and running four feet in height.

The Michell display was unique this year being an enclosed square of hardy chrysanthemums in pots mixed with boxwood specimens—a walk all round, and in the center an elevated acorn, which opened and shut by clock work, showing pot of hyacinths inside—the whole brightly illuminated by electric bulbs. Surrounding this, lower down, were plants and bulbs of a seasonable nature—all very attractive in arrangement.

The Dreer seed store display consisted mainly of pottery and sundries very well arranged. H. Waterer also had a small display of bulbs and sundries and the greenhouse men, Lord & Burnham, Hitchings, and King, were out in force with sash and frame samples and pictures and order books.

Tarrytown

The seventeenth annual flower show of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held in Music Hall, Tarrytown, N. Y., Nov. 3d to 5th inclusive. The hall was completely filled with exhibits of the finest decorative plants and cut blooms, notably among which was a fine display of palms, foliage and flowering plants, exhibited by William B. Thompson, supt. R. M. Johnston. This exhibit was awarded the Untermyer silver cup for the most meritorious exhibit.

The principal exhibitors were Finley J. Shepard, supt. Chas. R. Russell; Joseph Eastman, gard. Robert Angus; Emil Berolzheimer, gard. Wm. Jamieson; Mrs. F. E. Lewis, supt. James Ballantyne; William B. Thompson; Adolph Lewisohn, gard. John Canning; Mrs. S. Hermann, gard. Abel Weeks; David L. Luke, gard. John Elliott; Mrs. S. Neustadt, gard. David Gordon; Hugh Hill, gard. Robert Grieve; Mrs. I. N. Seligman, supt. M. MacPherson; Richard Delafield and Paul M. Warburg. Notably among the exhibits was a fine display of ferns and baskets of Ophelia, Francis Scott Key, Sunburst, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Mignon and Hoosier Beauty roses, exhibited by F. R. Pierson Company; also a fine collection of pompon and other chrysanthemums, exhibited by Scott Bros., Elmsford, N. Y. These two displays were for exhibition only, the exhibits for competition being entirely from private estates.

The Society's silver medal was awarded to Finley J. Shepard in Class 1, for seedling Croton Roxbury. Certificate of merit was awarded to Mrs. A. McEwen for an exhibit of standard seedling single chrysanthemums; also certificate of merit to Jacob Ruppert for six standard chrysanthemums, Miss Cornelia A. Ruppert. Cultural certificate was awarded to Finley J. Shepard for Phoenix Roebelenii, and to John C. Scheepers for specimen lilac in flower. There were two exhibits from the local schools that attracted considerable attention—one from the Washington Irving High School, Tarrytown, and the other from Elmsford. Honorable mention was awarded to Mrs. Rockwell Kent for a vase of cosmos.

Special cups and cash prizes were awarded in forty-three out of two hundred and one classes, the donors being F. R. Pierson, J. F. Detmer, J. D. Archbold, Mrs. F. Herrmann, I. T. Bush, W. F. McCord, Chas. Vanderbilt, Hugh Hill, D. G. Reid, Mrs. W. C. Osborn, Wm. Rockefeller, W. B. Thompson, Pierson U-Bar Co., Mrs. H. Darlington, H. Graves, Jr., Chas. Mallory, Mrs. F. E. Lewis, Mrs. H. Chrysanthemums, orchids, plants vegetables and fruit were staged on the first day. On the second day were roses, carnations, centre pieces, etc.

The judges for the first day were John T. Burns, New Canaan, Conn.,

The 13th annual show of the N. W. County Horticultural and Agricultural Society of Mount Kisco, N. Y., was held in Civic Hall, Mt. Kisco, Oct. 29, 30 and 31st, and was in all respects equal to any show of former years, both in quality and quantity. Competition was very keen in chrysanthemums, roses and carnations. BUFFALO.

Local papers advertised the annual city flower shows beginning on Sunday and holding over for two weeks. Sunday last, the opening day, saw throngs of visitors, especially at South Park, where Supt. Elbers reigns. Mr. Elbers was more than pleased to see such a flow of flower lovers. At times it was so congested that exits were opened for the people to get outside.

Mr. Elbers has a fine show. Poinsons and specimen plants are not extensively grown this season but these were found at the Humboldt conservatories where Supt. Chas. Keitsch has supervision. There are not as many single blooms grown here as at South Park. Palm and cactus houses in both parks were also well patronized.

TEXAS FLOWER SHOW.

Reports from Houston assure us that everything is in readiness for the flower show, and reports from over the state indicate that the attendance is going to be very heavy. The fact that special rates will be made on all railroads is going to prove very beneficial to the florists, and the nearer the date for the show arrives the greater the list of exhibitors grows and something very unusual will now have to happen to prevent our having a big show in every respect.

It is indeed very gratifying to note the excellent interest shown by florists and supply houses out of the state and from the way reservations for space are being asked for the trade displays will be worth any one's visit to Houston to see. Reports are pouring in from all parts of the state from florists who will make exhibits.

The show will open with an automobile parade with beautiful girls bedecked with chrysanthemums. Two hundred florists from within the state and fifty florists from without the state are expected to attend. The Auditorium will be packed to its capacity with exhibits and headliner features for drawing crowds, living models displaying gowns and showing the uses of flowers, such as shoulder sprays, corsages of various types, etc. The ankle bouquet will be featured and a bridal party using bridal bouquets will be made a feature. One hundred per cent. better show and attendance than last year is assured.

SAN FRANCISCO.

At the National Fall Flower Show held at San Francisco, in the exposition grounds, on October 21 to 26, gold medals were awarded as follows: Lynch Nursery Co. for 12 chrysanthemums, 12 varieties; Shibuya & Ishida for 100 chrysanthemums, 10 varieties; John A. Carbone for display of orchids; San Mateo County Conservatories for group of stove and greenhouse plants; E. James for collection crotons; H. Plath for collection of ferns; E. James for collection of Nephrolepis; Pelicano-Rossi & Co. for table decoration. Also numerous silver and bronze medals.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The New Bedford Horticultural Society held a chrysanthemum show on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, in point of quality the very best in its history. The Free Public Library where the exhibition was staged proved much too small for the exhibits. The two rival estates—that of Col. H. E. Converse, represented by supt. D. F. Roy, president of the Society, and that of Galen L. Stone, represented by supt. A. E. Griffin and assistant George Holliday, put up some wonderful blooms and in the contest for the T. J. Grey & Co. cup ran neck and neck, Mr. Roy winning out. Mr. Griffin captured the Converse cup and the Benson cup and Mr. Roy the Standard cup. Other prominent prize winners were H. S. Walsh, Post & Gray, Peckham Floral Co., J. V. Pierce, H. A. Jahn and James Garthly.

NOTES.

The Maine State Florists' Society held its first chrysanthemum show at Bangor, Maine, last week. Among the exhibitors were J. W. Minot & Co., Portland; C. S. Strout, Biddeford; Mount Desert Nurseries, Bar Harbor; P. M. Olm, Bath; E. Saunders, Lewiston; P. Burr, Freeport; Miss A. M. Clark, Ellsworth; A. J. Loder, Bangor, and the horticultural department, University of Maine.

The Menlo Park (Cal.) Horticultural Society held its fall show at Menlo Park, Cal., on the last three days of October. As that is in one of the important nursery districts of the Bay section, considerable interest was given to the event, both by professionals and amateurs, and in some lines, especially chrysanthemums, the exhibits were about as good as those shown the week before at the Exposition. In fact, most of the mum growers, and several in other lines, who exhibited at the Exposition also participated in the Menlo Park show. In mums, provision was made for both private gardeners and commercial growers, as well as a free-for-all class; and the entries included a good showing of dahlias, roses, carnations, flowering plants, etc. D. Bassett, P. Ellings, J. M. Daley, G. Nunn and D. W. Dale were in charge of the show.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

A regular meeting of the New York Florists' Club was held in the club's rooms, Grand Opera House Building, November 8.

A. L. Miller, for the Flower Show Committee, reported progress. F. R. Pierson, chairman of the general committee, also made a brief report and handed in a check for $297.44 as the balance coming to the club on the settlement of the affairs of last spring's show.

Resolutions on the death of Edwin Lonsdale were read and adopted, as also were resolutions on the death of Lawrence W. Kervan. The death of Edw. Walz, a member, was announced, and A. J. Manda, J. A. Shaw and Geo. Hildenbrand were appointed a committee to prepare resolutions of sympathy with the deceased's family. F. W. Wagenführ, Philip F. Kessler and John Donaldson were appointed a committee to prepare resolutions on the death of Mrs. Victor Dorval. A. M. Henshaw, for the transportation committee, made a final report on the preparations made for the party going to the Cleveland Flower Show.

The committee on nominations presented the names of the following as candidates for election to office at the December meeting:

For president—Harry A. Bunyard, Henry Weston and Philip F. Kessler; vice-president—Chas. Knight, Alex. E. Hogg and G. E. M. Stumpp; secretary—John Young and J. Harrison Dick; Treasurer—Wm. C. Rickards, Jr., and Roman J. Irwin; trustees—Joseph S. Fenrich, Chas. Schenck, Ed. Sceery, W. R. Pierson, Robt. G. Wilson and Max Schling. Mr. Bunyard declined his nomination for president, as also did Mr. Dick for the secretaryship.

There was an animated and rather harmonious discussion on "The Chrysanthemum Situation," in which Messrs. A. J. Guttman, W. H. Long, J. T. Scott, A. Herrington, G. E. M. Stumpp, H. A. Barnard of England, and others took part. Taken from the different standpoints of grower, wholesaler and retailer, it was agreed that while the chrysanthemum was at times "a bit of a nuisance," the trade could not get along without it, and the public liked it. A good word, however, was put in for the singles and pompons, which seemed to gain in popularity each year. Some complaint was made of shipments by some growers of varieties which did not appear to keep, wilting badly when in the hands of consumers, and causing loss and annoyance to the retailers handling them.

It being "Chrysanthemum Night," there were several exhibits staged for the attention of the committee on awards, as well as exhibits of other flowers. The following is the list with the awards:

By Philip F. Kessler, Chrysanthemum Julia Lagravere, grown by W. W. Matthews, Great Neck, N. Y., vote of thanks; Pompon Western Beauty, by the same grower, vote of thanks;

NEW LONDON HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

This society held its annual Chrysanthemum Show at the Court House, New London, Conn., on the 3rd and 4th inst. The society congratulates itself on the success it obtained. Fruit was scarce compared to last year's display but the quality was a trifle better. Vegetables and flowers were better than last year and much keener competition. E. Robinson, foreman of the Branford Farm Greenhouses, staged grapes, roses and cattleyas. The leading varieties of chrysanthemums were, Mrs. H. J. Jones, Bob Pulling, Odessa, Nerissa, Meudon, F. S. Vallis, Wm. Turner, Mrs. Gilbert Drabble, F. T. Quittenton, Mrs. H. Stevens, Glenview, etc. H. E. L.

PITTSBURGH GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB.

The gathering of members for the meeting November 2d in the Fort Pitt Hotel was the largest of the season. It was Chrysanthemum Night, which always is very popular. Wm. Falconer, having sent a note that he would be unable to attend the meeting on account of a celebration of his birthday being in progress at his house, congratulations and good wishes were 'phoned him from the club. It developed that about ten members were expecting to attend the Cleveland Flower Show and arrangements were made looking toward their going in a body.

H. A. Dreer, of Philadelphia, made a large display of the late outdoor flowering chrysanthemums, both pompon and aster-flowering varieties. The blooms were in good order for so late in the season, and were very interesting and a vote of thanks was tendered the exhibitor. The exhibit of the large greenhouse-grown chrysanthemums was very fine, and shown by many exhibitors, although curiously enough the displays were all by private gardeners and the Bureau of Parks, except in one instance.

As has been the case for the last few years the largest blooms shown were those of Wm. Turner and Gilbert Drabble. Wells' Late Pink brought out favorable comment. The single C. L. Hutchinson was thought better than Garza, and singles Roupel Beauty, Dorothy Dunn and Betsy Presbrey were very fine. A potted plant of a yellow sport of Anna was shown. The exhibits of chrysanthemums were of such a high order of merit that the club did not attempt to designate shades of excellence in their awards of certificates, but awarded cultural certificates to the following:

Herman Rapp, gard. with D. T. Watson, Leetsdale, Pa.; M. Curran, gard. with Mrs. Horne, Sewickley, Pa.; A. A. Leach, gard. with H. J. Heinz, Pittsburgh; H. B. Keillor, gard. with A. Peacock, Pittsburgh; Bureau of Parks, Northside; Bureau of Parks, Schenley; T. Tyler, gard. for C. D. Armstrong, Pittsburgh.

various annual reports were read and accepted, the officers elected for the ensuing year are as follows: President, Mrs. W. Scott Fitz; vice-president, Eric H. Wetterlow; treasurer, John Jaffray; clerk, Leon W. Carter; librarian, P. A. Gilmore; executive committee, A. E. Parsons, Wm. Till, Herbert Shaw, James Salter, Axel Magnuson.

A vote of thanks was extended to Ernest Townsend for display of chrysanthemums, including a nice lot of seedlings, also to Mr. Warner for collection of pansies.

The treasurer turned over to the society the title deeds to the land recently purchased near the R. R. station by the society, and where it hopes soon to erect a Horticultural Hall. Contrary to reports recently circulated there is no building committee appointed as yet. The sale of Lee's Hall, where the society had its headquarters for many years necessitated their moving to new quarters. The next meeting will be held in Lane's Hall, School street, Nov. 19th, at 7.30 P. M.

AMERICAN DAHLIA SOCIETY.

A meeting of the Executive Board of the American Dahlia Society was held at the office of Secretary Joseph J. Lane, 11 West 32nd St., N. Y. City. Those present were as follows:

Richard Vincent, Jr., president, White Marsh, Md.; Frank R. Austin, treasurer, Tuckerton, N. J.; George L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I.; Hugo Kind, Hammonton, N. J.; John Merritt, Farmingdale, N. Y.; L. K. Peacock, Berlin, N. J.; Geo. W. Kerr, Doylestown, Pa.; James Kirby, Huntington, N. Y.; James Duthie, Oyster Bay, N. Y.; J. Harrison Dick, N. Y. City; Joseph J. Lane, N. Y. City.

The subject of nomenclature was discussed at great length and a letter read by Prof. Hall, Chairman of the Nomenclature Committee. Among other suggestions put forth were the registering of new varieties and the publication of 4,500 names of Dahlias and types, the appointment of local committees, like the Chrysanthemum Society, etc. Mr. Vincent suggested that a life membership be offered for a stipulated sum. The subject was laid on the table until next meeting.

A committee was appointed to solicit terms and places to hold our show in 1916 and get the best offers to bring up at the April meeting. This comprised Geo. W. Kerr, F. R. Austin, Frank R. Stillman, James Duthie and Richard Vincent. Mr. Peacock suggested that a leaflet be gotten up about the Dahlia Society and his suggestion was accepted. Mr. Peacock agreed to pay for 10,000 of these leaflets and mail them out with his catalogue.

A Publication Committee was appointed by the President, comprising Messrs. Kerr, Dick and Peacock, it being understood that the Secretary was to act as editor of the bulletin. The Secretary argued for the establishment of a sinking fund to tide the Society over any expenses that might be incurred during this first year in the form of investments, such as the printing of reports of the Nomenclature Committee, etc. Mr. Peacock started the fund with a contribution. This was followed by one from Messrs. Austin, Vincent, Kirby, Duthie, Stillman, Merritt and Kind.

FLORISTS' CLUB OF WASHINGTON

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., was held November 2. There were quite a number of exhibits and the evening was made pleasant with a discussion as to the qualities of the flowers on view. The largest individual exhibit was that of Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., who sent some seventy-five varieties of hardy pompon chrysanthemums. The several vases of Ophelia shown by David J. Grilbortzer, of Alexandria, Va. and the display of the new rose, Mrs. Moorfield Storey, by Otto Bauer for the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Company, attracted considerable attention.

What was considered to be the handsomest snapdragon to be had at the present time was exhibited by John Gutman, of Congress Heights.

Guttman & Raynor express much confidence in the future of the new rose, Prima Donna, which they are especially featuring.

The MacNiff Horticultural Co. are working night and day to try to keep up with the volume of business that is coming in, and find it impossible to take care of it all properly. The sales they are having this fall are unquestionably the largest that have ever been conducted in this country, of nursery stock from Holland combined with local consignments.

At a meeting of the International Flower Show Committee, held in New York on Monday, November 8, Arthur Herrington, Madison, N. J., was appointed manager of the show to be held in the Grand Central Palace, New York, next April. At the meeting, also, details concerning the show were discussed, and the work of preparation seen to be well advanced.

The Co-operative Flower Market stockholders' annual meeting was held on Saturday evening, October 30, at Hurlburt's Hotel. Perry Green and Carl Strieferd were elected directors. The treasurer's statement showed an excellent financial condition.

CHICAGO.

Mrs. Frank Oechslin is again very ill.

Fifteen florists from St. Louis and vicinity arrived Tuesday to visit the flower show. Most of them are going on to Cleveland and will return to Chicago.

A visit to Sam'l Pearse's place on Higgins avenue, will be a delight to lovers of the big flower, for they are in their prime this week. The collection includes all colors and curves and the tables in the large service shed gave one the impression that a chrysanthemum show was in progress.

The J. C. Moninger Co. are exhibiting a miniature greenhouse at the Cleveland Flower Show. It is a complete model of an iron frame greenhouse true to a scale of $\frac{1}{8}$. It occupies a space of 8x12 ft. and is under the personal charge of Mr. Kurowski, vice-president of the firm. This firm is so busy that the steel department is working nights to fill orders.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The silver loving cup offered to the florist making the best exhibit of flowers at the Maryland State Fair, recently held in Laurel, Md., was again awarded to Gude Bros. Company, who exhibited a large collection of roses, chrysanthemums and dahlias.

C., successfully defended himself in the case brought against him by the Merchants' Transfer and Storage Company, which alleged that it had delivered in error to him a consignment of bulbs from abroad intended for another party. They sued to recover the value of the bulbs, the duty thereon, and other expenses amounting to $166.90. A jury brought in a verdict for the florist but the plaintiff has since filed a motion for a new trial.

DIRECTORS OF THE CHICAGO FLOWER GROWERS' ASSOCIATION.

FOR BETTER COLLECTIONS.

The wholesale florists of St. Louis have sent out the following circular letter to the retail trade:

To Our Patrons:

to make a series of changes for the betterment of both the wholesaler and the retail florist.

In the future all statements rendered on or before the first of the month must be paid on or before the 15th of the month. There are no exceptions to this rule. In all new accounts, payments are not settled in or before that date, goods purchased the next day and thereafter will be sent C. O. D. When the account is put in good standing.

Thanking you for your position in the trade and hoping that you will continue to favor us, we are,

Respectfully,

Geo. H. Angermueller, H. G. Berning, C. A. Kuehn, Wm. C. Smith, Wm. Flo. C. Wundler, Wholesale Florists.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON We have seldom seen the wholesale flower market in so unpromising and hopeless condition as at this time, and the worst feature of it is that prospects do not favor any immediate improvement, but on the contrary, the bottom does not seem to be reached yet, and we may see it much worse before it is any better. Chrysanthemums, lilies and carnations are congested beyond description. Roses are probably just as badly accumulated but the surplus is tucked away in the storage boxes and consequently does not tell its predicament as openly as do those things which must stand around in vases in full view. Orchids, lily of the valley, violets and, indeed, every other flower common to the trade at this season are in supply far beyond the needs of the dull market now prevailing. Naturally, there are no fixed values at such a time.

BUFFALO Business quiet. Receipts heavy on most lines and especially on roses of which there is an enormous supply and the demand weak. Chrysanthemums are plentiful enough though at the end of last week they cleaned up well. Turner, Bonnaffon, Dr. Enguehard, Adelia, Ivory, Josephine, Maud Dean and Brutus are all of exceptional good quality. Violets moving only fair, plenty of carnations and lily of the valley. Lilies about equal the demand. Beauties scarce and price holding firm.

CHICAGO Flower Show week and chrysanthemum season at its height, give the market a gala appearance. All other flowers are temporarily in the background. Business is fairly good and all kinds of stock are moving, though there are days when the market could take care of more orders for the warm, bright sunshine is bringing the flowers along at a rapid rate. There are a great many chrysanthemum plants coming into the market all this week, nearly all the large houses keeping a good supply or taking orders from sample plants. Carnations are rather ahead of demand. Roses of all kinds are to be had in any quantity and American Beauties are in good supply and of excellent quality.

CINCINNATI The market is somewhat overloaded with stock, while the demand is not all it might be. The daily cut of chrysanthemums is more than able to care for all demands upon it. Both Pompons and the Anemone varieties are in a large supply. The rose cut, too, is very large and excellent. Carnations and lilies are each plentiful.

NEW YORK The market is more than supplied with every possible line of cut flowers. The heavy crop that comes naturally at this particular date in which chrysanthemums take the lead, of course, is aggravated by the continued series of warm, sunny days which pushes everything along at a rapid rate but which awakens one compensating possibility—that when the wintry blasts do come, there will be "something doing" for every good flower that strikes the market. At present, nothing is scarce and the retail people get their stock at their own price and in quantity as they choose to take it. They all report trade as exasperatingly slow.

PHILADELPHIA General conditions have remained fairly good. On the whole there is not very much to complain of. Roses continue plentiful and in fine shape, American Beauty, Russell and Hadley being leaders. There is also an extra fine showing in Shawyer at present and we have never seen Ophelia to better advantage. The Killarneys are fine but too many, which hits the returns and raises a storm. The producer sits at home and smokes his pipe and waits for his check. When it isn't big enough—wow! look out! Does he blame the market? No, siree. There are cutthroats and scoundrels around and he hies him to the city and starts in to raise Cain. O yes, there are still a few such left. They don't keep track of the market by frequent visits to the city but instead froth at the mouth when things are not up to their exaggerated anticipations. Carnations are about as satisfactory as could be expected. The best demand is for the higher grades. The vast majority are medium flowers however, and so plentiful as to be rather draggy. The chrysanthemum is of course right in the flush of her splendor as the Queen of Autumn. Roman Gold is a remarkable favorite—not so big but fine form and color and a great keeper. But the par excellence is still Bonnaffon. Probably more good points to the square inch than any other variety of its color. It sells well no matter how big the flower. In holiday market, and many of the pompons the best sellers are the indoor grown. These are better as to color, form and finish than the outdoor and always get the preference. No other ills worthy of mention in Pennsylvania for the time being. Massachusetts has annexed a citizen of East Providence, this state, and made him governor, but never mind, we take that as a compliment.

The wonderfully beautiful weather that has made the present autumn distinctive, is proving detrimental to the wholesale florists and these retail firms as well. All flowers in season are plentiful and of the best. Last Saturday the football game happily made big inroads on the chrysanthemum growers and dispensers.

The trade has been hoping for a good rain, which would stimulate trade and clear a lot of unseasonable stuff out of the way, but only a little shower has fallen so far. There is quite a lot of small outdoor stock coming in every day—stocks, cosmos, etc., even a few zinnias, and most of it finds a market. It looks as if this week would finish the gladioli and dahlias, after a long season. The market is fairly glutted with chrysanthemums, and the finest kind of stock goes begging. A great many growers and dealers are making heavy shipments east nearly every day, but fail to clean up the offerings, and the Chinese chrysanthemums are a drug on the market. Pompons are extensively used. Cooler weather has helped the violets, which are about at their prime; even the shipping varieties seem to be reaching the east in fine shape and shipments have increased rapidly this week. With them also are shipped many Cecile Brunner roses, of which there is a fine large crop, but not any too much for requirements. Carnations are showing up well now, but receive little attention. Roses are good and most varieties fairly plentiful, but the daily arrivals are pretty well taken up by the local trade. Of Killarneys, only the white variety now finds much favor. Russell is very popular and Ophelia is as big a seller as ever. In flowering plants, the supply of cyclamen is gradually increasing, and potted chrysanthemums are also quite popular. There will be a large supply of cyclamen, from all indications, on the plants now blooming are exceptionally fine. Orchids are offered freely and rather less attention is given to gardenias.

ST. LOUIS

All of the past week the market has been in an overcrowded condition and prices have dropped considerably. The weather has been too good for good business. Chrysanthemums are at their height now and nearly all varieties are coming into this market in big lots. Roses and carnations have hardly any fixed value. Violets have been ruined by the warm spell and have little demand. Some extra fancy Spencer peas are now coming in and they sell well. Fine lily of the valley and lilies are in good supply and demand.

WASHINGTON

The market continues overstocked, with chrysanthemums predominating. Good chrysanthemums are selling well. There is, however, a surplus of cheap stock and much of this must be thrown away. The weather continues too warm for violets and the sale on these is decidedly draggy. Sweet peas meet with as plentiful as they have been, while there are more lilies and lily of the valley than during the previous week. Some exceptionally fine roses are now being offered. Dahlias have passed off the market for this season. The retailers say that business is up to, if not in advance of standard, and present indications are that a very busy season is ahead.

MASSACHUSETTS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

"The best show that the department ever gave," was the general comment on the flower show held at the college this week. The show was opened Sunday noon by ex-President
Taft, who in company with President Butterfield made an inspection of the whole show. The exhibits were the result of the co-operation of the Northampton and Holyoke Florists' and Gardeners' Club and of the students in floriculture.

The Northampton and Holyoke Florists and Gardeners are especially to be complimented on their exhibit of carnation, Butler & Uhlman, R. S.
Carey, Keyes, Sinclair and G. Strugnell being the contributors. An extraordinary exhibit was that of some foliage plants by W. P. Downer of Smith College. The student decorative was also of excellent calibre.

In the senior flower basket competition, first was awarded E. J. Cadarelli, of Boston, for a basket of Major Bonnaffons arranged with oak foliage and tied with yellow chiffon. C. E. Wildon, of Melrose Highlands, 2nd, for a basket of Mary Colliday and Irene Craig chrysanthemums, the handle tied with pink chiffon. S. W. Hall of Saxonville 3rd for an arrangement of Mrs. Russell roses and blue ribbon. R. L. Chisholm, of Melrose Highlands, received honorable mention for a basket of Major Bonnaffons and barberries.

Campbell received 1st for a table arrangement of Peter Pan chrysanthemums. E. S. Duffill, Melrose Highlands, 2nd with yellow pompons and oak leaves. J. T. Dizer, East Weymouth, 3rd for a table of Hadley and White Killarney roses. M. R. Lawrence, Falmouth, received honorable mention for a table of small yellow chrysanthemums. A shower bouquet of gardenias and valley and a basket of marguerites by Mr. Butler, Northampton, together with a bouquet of Aaron Ward roses made by Prof.
Nehrling were the center of much favorable comment.

The rooms were all decorated with southern smilax and oak branches.
Among the potted plants, those especially worthy of mention were a standard chrysanthemum exhibited by Geo.
Strugnell, Holyoke, and some cypripediums exhibited by Mr. Sinclair, Holyoke.

RESOLUTIONS ON THE DEATH OF LAWRENCE W. KERVAN.

Adopted by the N. Y. Florists' Club.

Lawrence W. Kervan, our brother, has joined the innumerable throng. Those of us who knew him best loved him the most. His was a noble character, genuine, unselfish, generous, true as steel. He was a friend worth while. Full of hope and good cheer, he always looked on the bright side of life, and his companionship was an inspiration. Notwithstanding his 72 years of labor and vicissitude, he had the heart and enthusiasm of youth. Such men are needed here. It is not easy to become reconciled to such bereavement as his family suffered when he passed away. Patient and resigned, in much physical suffering, he taught us all the lesson of brave submission to the inevitable, and the faith in immortality. He was not afraid to die; to him there was no sting to death. The grave has lost its victory. It was but crossing, with suspended breath, a little strip of sea to find "His loved ones on the other shore.

More beautiful, more precious than before."

Mr. Kervan was born in New York City. He was a veteran of the Grand Army of the Republic, and in the Gallery of the National Museum at Washington his portrait will ever remain a monument to his loyalty and love of country. He built up the most successful business in evergreens in the world—this also a monument to his unflinching business integrity. He was never heard to speak ill of any man. He was respected by every man who knew him. His name is honored and unsullied, a blessed heritage to his family.

Be it resolved that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the club, and that a copy be sent to his bereaved ones.

(Signed) PERCY RIGBY,
SOL HAUFILING,
J. AUSTIN SHAW.

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:

$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

HENRY A. DREER, Seeds, Plants, Bulbs, and Supplies, 714 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, PaUNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS.

The Floricultural Club of the University gave a reception on Saturday night to the members of the faculty. This affair was well represented and was a great success.

Professor White, of Cornell, visited the University on Monday, November 8. After a brief visit, he left for Ames, Iowa, where he expects to visit the University. Although the visit was only a short one, we certainly were glad to have Professor White with us.

Over 3,500 people attended the Fourth Annual Chrysanthemum Show, which was held in the Floricultural Greenhouses on Sunday afternoon, November 7th. A large number of people who were not able to see the show on Sunday, on account of the crowd, came out the following day. Two houses 30x110 feet were devoted almost entirely to chrysanthemums. One of these was used to stage 2,000 seedling plants of anemones, pompons and singles. Nearly all of these plants are products of the Floricultural Division. Besides the small-flowered types, there were at least 800 plants of the commercial varieties. The masses of color, however, were not so great or varied as in the case of the other plants and, therefore, more of the attention was centered in the small-flowered type. This show has become a popular event with the university and town people.

A NEW "RED DEVIL" GLASS CUTTER.

The "Red Devil" Tool people, Smith & Hemenway Co., Inc., of New York, have added a new glass cutter to their large line of 40 styles of cutters, known as No. 3. This new cutter is of the magazine type, having three extra steel cutting wheels in an airtight chamber in the removable handle behind the head, in addition to a wheel in the head. In all it has four wheels. A new wheel can be instantly put into place by removing a piece of wire in the head. This cutter is fitted with genuine hand-honed cutting wheels, used for stripping plate, sheet or cathedral and rough glass. It has a scientifically shaped handle with a small end and a large finger rest which will not tire the hand. It is handsomely finished, having a polished head and a red enameled handle. This cutter retails for only twenty-five cents and is a high grade tool, despite its price.

The Working Principle of the METROPOLITAN PATENTED EAVE

In A—B—C—Language

If you light a match and hold it—the heat won't bother you until the fire touches your fingers. Now take a nail, hold it at one end and apply a lit match at the other—in a moment you will have to drop it because the heat has been conducted to your fingers.

That's the working principle of the Metropolitan Patented Eave, and that's why it is self-ice-clearing.

More than 90% of the Metropolitan Patented Eave is in constant contact with the inside heat, and being of one continuous piece of cast iron, the heat penetrates right through to the outside.

That's why no snow or ice can accumulate on a Metropolitan Greenhouse.

Heat cannot penetrate eaves that are made up of two or more sections.

The Metropolitan Eave is but one of the many improvements we have made in Greenhouse construction.

Hausman Brothers' Sweet Pea House At Hilton, N. J.

THIS is another one of our recently erected jobs, within short distance of our factory.

It's one of the ones we will show you on that motor trip we have asked you to come and take with us any day we can arrange it for your convenience.

We can tell you about our houses in these Ads. till the cows come home; but after all is said and done, there is nothing like actually seeing the houses.

This Reconstructed Construction of ours does not begin to show up its advantages in photographs. When you go into one of the houses and see the wide rafter spacing; the 20 inch glass; the absence of a third of the posts and columns; and then look carefully into all the details of all the construction features; then you begin to see why we have been making so much noise about it.

This house of Hausman Brothers is 40 x 125 feet. The rafter spacing happens to be 8 feet, 4 inches, and the glass 16 inches. It gives you a splendid opportunity to compare the narrow spacing house with the wide ones we will show you.

Perhaps you may prefer the narrow.

We believe, however, that the wide one has distinct advantages in its favor.

When can you take that motor trip with us?

Of course, whether you have a transom sash like Hausman Bros.; or the regular ones closing on the foundation sill, you will want our new jack-knife, close shutting arms. You can then make the walks narrower than usual.

If anyone tells you that our jack-knife, close-shutting arms do not give as wide an opening to the sash, you can promptly prove to them it is not so.

Here is the proof. The opening is exactly the same as the old, stick-out-in-the-walk kind.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Prove.

Cattleyas

All such varieties as C. Dowiana, C. Eldorado, C. Harrisoniae, C. Loddigesii, C. marginata and C. Bowringiana, as they pass out of flower will need new feeding material. Where the compost is in good condition it is not necessary to repot them—a top-dressing will suffice, but where the compost is sour it is better to repot them. Every subject should be carefully looked over and when the material looks dry give the whole mass a thorough soaking. Watering should be done early enough in the day from now on so as to get the atmosphere dry before closing up time or night. During the winter months water must not be applied indiscriminately or a good deal of damage will follow. Give ventilation on all good days.

Violets

Keep a temperature from 40 to 45 degrees at night, with 10 degrees warmer when possible during the day. Syringe occasionally on bright days for red spider. At all times give all the air that outside conditions and weather will permit, at the same time putting a little heat on in order to keep the air dry. Don't start and water the whole bench when there are only a few places dry. It is a good plan every morning to examine the beds in order to find the dry spots. To keep them too wet is as bad as keeping them too dry; we must guard against these two extremes and if we expect to keep our plants in a healthy growing and flowering condition the soil should be kept as evenly moist as possible all the time. It will soon be the days of dark and gloomy weather, which means more fire heat. Fumigating each week will keep the plants clean of fly; but should not be given too heavy.

Evergreens in Pots for Winter Use

Now is the proper time to get a good lot of these potted up and they can be set under cover outside for some time, which will help to keep the foliage in better color and give the plants time to make some roots before they are sold. Every year there is more demand for evergreens in pots or tubs. On the approach of winter the florists of all large cities are called upon to have something to break the bareness of the entrances to hotels, stores and dwellings. These should be available in all sizes. When plants are wanted for inside or where freezing will be very slight, Euonymus japonica and its varieties will make excellent plants to break the monotony of so many conifers. Make an assortment of the many varieties of, retinosporas, *arbor vitae*s, juni-pers, yews, spruces, etc. Where you want trailing evergreens, Euonymus radicans and English ivy can be used to good effect.

Primulas

Give the primulas room to spread out. From now on a temperature near 50 degrees at night will suit them well. Keep them as near the glass as possible. Four, five and six-inch pot plants and make-up pans, fancy dishes, and baskets arranged for Christmas sales, should by this time be almost full grown. Plants that are wanted for late winter flowering should have their last shift now. Five-inch makes a very good size, but where exceptionally large and fine plants are required a six-inch pot can be used. A suitable soil can be prepared by intermixing equal parts friable loam, leaf mold, and cow manure, and enough of sand to keep it open. With proper protection from frosts there is no better place for these plants than a cold frame until late in December.

Lily of the Valley for Christmas

A period of four weeks—rather a little over from the day the pips are planted in the pots—until they are ready to sell. Take five-inch and six-inch pots (or half pots will do), fill them full of pips, spacing the pips properly, having the neck even with the rim of the pot, allowing the three-quarter-inch long pips to project above. It is too early yet to force freshly imported stock. If not on hand, order some cold storage pips now from any supply house advertising in HORTICULTURE. Perhaps the main thing is to be able to maintain about 85 degrees for bottom heat with a few degrees less on top. If at all well-grown a six-inch pot of lily of the valley with several dozens of flowers and trimmed with red water-proof crepe paper always sells well at Christmas. When the flowers are beginning to open, give more air and be very careful about watering so as not to let any rest on the bells. Gradually inure to the light and air to harden them up.

Storing Cannas, Dahlias, Etc.

Most of the cannas and dahlias are lifted by this time and placed in the shed. Before they are put away for the winter see that they are correctly labeled. Cannas will do fine in a violet house under the benches or some place as cool. Dahlia roots will require a dry place in some shed that does not fall below 45 degrees in the coldest weather. Gladioli will do in the same place. Gloxinias and tuberous-rooted begonias should be gradually dried off and packed in dry sand in a temperature of about 50 degrees.

Horticulture,
in the ascendant

Our task with the fall exhibitions for 1915 is now almost finished. We have done our best to give publicity and due credit to all, in the limited space at our disposal from week to week. Of necessity, considerable detail matter has been cut out from the voluminous mass reaching us from so many sources, but it has been our earnest endeavor to retain as much as possible of whatever has had educational value or interest for the greatest number of our readers. Each exhibition described has its individual features of superiority or distinction. There is something to be learned from all. It does not detract from our estimate of the achievements of other cities that we have given so much more space to the show in Cleveland.

We could discern in this affair phases and potential possibilities different from and of wider significance than in the case of any other of the 1915 exhibitions and we feel that results as recorded are certain to have a distinct effect on future efforts of a similar character. One direct outcome of the Cleveland success is the movement already started to vivify and establish as an active working force the hitherto somewhat nebular organization known as the Ohio Horticultural Society. The right spirit seems to have been thoroughly aroused in the right place and in the right way and that is always good news.

that make for success

That was an almost invincible motto which the Cleveland flower show promoters adopted as their shiboleth in their big undertaking. All such affairs mean hard work—harder than is ever adequately understood or appreciated by those not directly involved—but it is all to little purpose unless there is complete harmony and hearty cooperation within and without. The Cleveland workers not only adopted this but lived up to it from start to finish; and that had much to do with the great success which they achieved. It was a shining example of efficient team work, despite the fact that it was a new experience to many and that the facilities and accessories available in halls accustomed to be used for flower shows had to be extemporized, and the result presents an object lesson for us all. The day of deficits in public floral exhibitions is gone forever if all interests, private and commercial, will unite and work on some lines of “get together” and “pull together,” coupled with intelligent initiative and aggressive modern publicity promotion methods. That the interest in flowers in the time to come will be vastly increased in the community where such successful demonstrations of the florists’ art are given, no one can question, and thus the ultimate purpose of the Cleveland enterprise was worthily accomplished.

The status of the trade exhibition

The annual conventions of the Society of American Florists and, recently, the National flower shows conducted by that body, have been highly esteemed for the unique advantages they have provided for the craft from places widely separated to meet together for mutual social intercourse and for trade purposes. The events of the past week, however, prove that this latter distinction does not necessarily belong exclusively to the national conventions but that it is possible for a locally managed affair to consummate a very potent attraction on similar lines. The fact of the remoteness of the national society’s meeting place this year undoubtedly had some influence in making possible the unprecedented trade gathering under local auspices which was witnessed at Cleveland last week. The magnitude of the trade exhibition thus brought together and space paid for, the attendance of our six hundred trade and professional visitors from far and near and the expressed satisfaction with the amount of business transacted by the trade exhibitors—all this in the absence of any discussions, elections or other organization proceedings, affords food for thought. This event, so successfully carried out should, and doubtless will, be regarded as sufficiently important for consideration by the executive body of the S. A. F. as to the particular part played by the trade exhibit as an influential factor in the popularity of the annual conventions and the attendance thereat. Cleveland’s exploit certainly has opened up a new and far-reaching vista of possibilities.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Blind Wood on Shawyers

We have never experienced any trouble with Sawyer going blind in the winter, and so far this variety has done wonderfully well with us. We do find, however, that if the plants are growing very freely, and are not given sufficient plant food, here and there will be a shoot that will seem to lose its bud while it is very small, and thus appear blind. We go over these few and take the top off with the first leaf, and the growth that will start nearly always produces a good bud. This can also be done with the shorter blind wood which is natural on a rose plant. We find that nearly always the top eye and leaf will go to one side, the other eyes and leaves forming the straight stalk. If the top is taken out the growth will nearly always bring a bud. We find that Sawyer likes to be planted late, say after the first of July, and then kept going. It will stand much more drying out than the Killarneys and nothing better could happen to a bench or house of Sawyers just when they have finished a crop than a good drying out. This will make them break much better and stronger, and as soon as they start good, liquid manure, bonemeal or whatever is available should be applied in liberal doses. This will push them right along, and there will be very little blind wood. Weak, mildewed stock we find is generally the result of too much water, not enough air and feed. When the plants are growing real good it is almost impossible to overfeed them. Growers requiring long stems will find this an ideal rose, as we find it will cut mostly specials and extras, only a few No. ones and no No. twos at all. In cutting, cut all bottom breaks away down to two eyes above the bench, as it is almost impossible to cut them back far enough. They will break much stronger if cut away back.

The Thanksgiving Crop

In the long run it does not pay to run the houses warmer around the holidays to increase the cut of roses, unless there is a very heavy crop on the plants so that nearly all the wood is in bud. When it happens this way, then an increase of two to four degrees will not prove harmful and will help open up a good many flowers that would otherwise come late. It should never be done only under the circumstances just mentioned, for if there is not a very heavy crop the wood that is just coming on will become soft and will show the effects of the warm nights for quite a while. Keeping the plants well watered when a crop is on will also help push the buds along; in fact plants with a big crop just beginning to show color should never be allowed to become at all dry. This of course does not apply to plants with a bud here and there, but to Killarneys, etc., say when there are ten or more buds on each all to be cut in a week or ten days. With the warm weather that we have had all along the chrysanthemums should be out of the way pretty well and prices for roses should come up. Roses should never be held back for a long time and then dumped on the market on the day before Thanksgiving. The buyers know a pickled rose the minute they lay their eyes on it and the grower who will hold up his stock for shipment before a holiday will fool no one but himself. The grower shipping in a good grade of stock of standard quality, well graded and always of a uniform cut, will come out far better than anyone who will send in pickled stock every now and then in hopes of realizing a cent or two more during the holiday rush. The former will have buyers waiting to take their stock as soon as it reaches the market, and the latter's stock will as a rule lie and wait for a chance buyer to come along. Ship only fresh cut stock and win credit not only for yourself but for the Flower Business as a whole.

Last Chance to Clean Up

Winter will soon be here and the ground covered with snow. It will not be possible to do much cleaning up so no opportunity should be lost to burn up the remaining few heaps of brush and so on, and leave the grounds clean for the winter. It is surprising what a large number of insects, mice, etc., will make their home in a heap of brush all winter, ready to come out in the spring and attack the garden or anything which we would like to grow. Do not burn the leaves. We have yet to find a place where the soil in the garden or fields contained all the necessary humus, and leaves will give us a good deal of it, if only they are taken care of. As a rule the maple leaves, and others coming from ornamental trees will fall when they are still yellow and not dried up altogether, and if they are plowed under, or added to the manure, they will decay very rapidly and enrich the soil considerably. Where stock is kept, these leaves can be used to good advantage as bedding and will then work into the manure very nicely. Where the manure is to be used for mulching later we would not use too many, but for field work it is impossible to have too much leaves in the manure. Many people are of the opinion that brush will not burn on a wet morning, but this is not true. A little dry straw or hay to start the fire, and any brush will burn up well except perhaps apple tree branches. Even these will quickly disappear if they are cut up a little.

THE BANQUET.

The banquet given to the visiting florists and gardeners on Friday evening, November 12, was a very enjoyable occasion. The spacious banquet hall of the Hollenden Hotel was well filled with ladies and gentlemen representing all sections of the country and all departments of the business. The tables were prettily decorated with dainty handle baskets of pompon chrysanthemums and roses in the centre and large blooms, with greenery, on the cloth. A "cabaret" entertainment with music and singing provided abundant animation and fun until the hour had arrived for some brief speaking.

George W. Smith, chairman of the entertainment committee, introduced Frank Williams, of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., as toastmaster, who stated that up to the previous evening the receipts had fully covered all the expenses of the show and attributed the success of the enterprise to the harmony and hard work which had prevailed among all concerned from the highest to the humblest. He read congratulatory telegrams from Patrick Welch, president of the S. A. F., and from Alex. Henderson, on behalf of the Chicago Floral Festival. He then called upon the following named gentlemen, each of whom responded entertainingly: Herbert Bate, president of the Cleveland Florists' Club; William Kleinheinz, president of the Chrysanthemum Society of America; Jos. Hill, president of the American Carnation Society; S. P. Baldwin, chairman of the flower show executive committee; R. Vincent, Jr., president of the American Dahlia Society; W. F. Gude, Washington representative of the S. A. F.; Irwin Bertermann, president of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery; A. Pochelon, secretary of the F. T. D.; J. F. Ammann, a judge; Wm. Nicholson, a judge; F. R. Pierson; E. G. Hill; H. P. Knoble, chairman of the Florists' Club executive committee. This pleasant occasion closed with the singing of "America."

COMMENTS BY A DOWN-EASTER.

The management of the Cleveland Flower Show was given unstinted praise at the banquet and elsewhere generally by the visitors for the splendid enterprise shown and results attained in the publicity campaign. Most striking and unique in this line was the series of arrows pointing out the way to the exhibition hall. These were of wood, painted green and lettered in white. In connection with a heavy mass of mountain laurel that could be seen from afar, these arrows were attached to the electric light poles on the streets leading from the railroad station and other principal points and converging at the Coliseum. No one, however strange to the city, had occasion at any time to inquire the way.

The special table decorations and feature retail florists' displays were placed on Saturday. A large space was enclosed for them, with latticed arbor entrances on four sides. There were daintily decorated tables bearing the names of numerous Cleveland florists, too numerous for individual mention here. Knoble Bros.' arrangement with central fountain, Smith & Fetters' Co.'s lovely bridal work, and several artistic arrangements by the Gasser Company were among them. This extensive retailers' department was a show in itself and the space was at all times uncomfortably crowded with admiring throngs of ladies.

One of the notable speeches at the banquet on Friday evening was that of E. G. Hill who although always eloquent and clever, quite outdid himself on this occasion. He asserted that no show in America or Europe had equalled this one and in eulogizing Pernet-Ducher and others who had spent their life in developing new and improved roses and other plants, took occasion to vigorously lampoon the vain-glorious and empty pretensions of Luther Burbank as compared with what these great, yet modest and unassuming, men had accomplished for the noblest profession open to mankind.

The Coliseum is not an ideal hall for the display of flowers. Low studded, without galleries or alcoves, or auxiliary rooms, with its vast floor space of 65,000 feet unbroken except by the main entrance, this structure offers little opportunity for impressive effects, vistas, or other striking decorative possibilities. But such as it was, the management had taken full advantage of, and after the unavoidable confusion of the opening day it presented a very bright and attractive appearance.

E. G. Hill said in his banquet speech that he never before had so many ribbons and cups to carry home and the decisions of the judges met his unqualified approval! He and C. H. Totty were large factors in the big bloom section. The pompons and singles were only second to the large blooms as a factor and, as Mr. Vincent declared, if they were not there it would have left a great vacancy.

On Saturday, the following telegram was sent, which tells its own story: Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Pocantico, Hills, N. Y.

Entertaining sixty thousand school children, mothers and teachers this fine bright morning at Cleveland Flower Show as your guests. Thursday forty-one thousand. Yesterday forty-five thousand. Largest party in history and an honor to giver of it. No accidents. Show big success. We thank you. Cleveland Flower Show. S. Prentiss Baldwin.

Over 100,000 school children were privileged to see the show on the forenoons of Thursday, Friday and Saturday. In a continuous file, two and four abreast, they came, and for hours each day the touching scene continued. It will be long remembered as one of the most impressive features of Cleveland's big horticultural event.

The Tea Garden as an adjunct to any large flower show, first given prominence in New York, seems to have quickly established itself in the approval of the "society" people. The experience in Cleveland was similar to that in New York and the Tea Garden must hereafter have its place in all well-regulated exhibitions.

There were many massive plant and flower groups, not for competition by the Nag-ir-roc Garden, Wickliffe. The letters of this mystic word reversed, read "Corrigan"; the name of one of Cleveland's philanthropists and donor of the coveted Corrigan Cup. E. A. Bause is superintendent and Fred. Altknecht gardener in charge.

The official handbook and program was made doubly valuable by the introduction of original practical contributions on horticultural subjects from a popular standpoint, including both house and garden plant topics. Descriptive lists of unusual flowers worth growing were particularly praiseworthy.

The new rose shown for a name by C. H. Totty and christened "Cleveland" is a good deep pink but it needs the prime quality of fragrance. Gorgeous, also shown by Totty, captivated all with its delicious fragrance and shell-pink petals deepening to peach pink in the heart of the flower.

All expenses were covered by the receipts up to Friday noon and the receipts from that time until Sunday night were "velvet," thus assuring the return of all guarantee subscriptions with a substantial dividend and a proportionate rebate to trade exhibitors on space purchased.

The attendance on Friday evening reached its high tide. Five fire wardens were posted in various parts of the hall and at one time the chief was about to order the doors closed against any more admissions. The foyer was completely blocked with the crowds seeking entrance.

The "Smoker" on Friday night at the Moose Club was enjoyed by a large number of the male visitors and local people. A cabaret entertainment and "Dutch lunch" were the conspicuous features in the program.

The stipulation that in nearly 100 classes in the premium list a special prize of $5 in gold would be given to the section man or actual grower of the stock taking first prize undoubtedly stimulated competition.

The vases, etc., were, as a rule, freshened up with new flowers as they became untidy and altogether the show was much more attractive at the closing of the fifth day than it usually the case.

A large crowd was continually seen at the booths where the Women's Florist Club of Cleveland offered flowers for sale. The receipts from this quarter must have been considerable.

The Richmond Cedar Works supplied the cedar bark which was used to decorate the columns in the Coliseum and the electric light poles on the streets leading to the show.

The blue badge of the local committees was in evidence continually. Posted like sentinels in every part of the exhibition hall the boys were everlastingly "on their job."

The registration of visitors was acceptably conducted under the amiable direction of George W. Smith. There were 643 registered visitors recorded, representing 551 firms.

A heavy non-competitive exhibitor was W. G. Mather, president of the Ohio Horticultural Society. George Jacques is superintendent of the estate.

Canada showed up well in the many chrysanthemum exhibits by the Dale Company and splendid long-stemmed roses by J. H. Dunlop.

Cyclamen must be rapidly growing in popularity in the middle west judging from the very large number of exhibits staged.

The music was excellent and the change of performers each day was a well-considered and potent attraction.

A. J. Loveless, of Lenox, Mass., showed a handsome yellow sport of Thanksgiving Queen, a noble flower.

Cleveland will probably be a candidate for the National Flower Show following that at Philadelphia.

There was an excellent and well-arranged display of hot-house grapes by O. C. Barber, of Barberton, O.

Craig's croton exhibit was a gem, or rather a cluster of gems. Smith & Fetters purchased it.

Wm. Tricker had a beautiful aquatic display in a rock-rimmed pool with spray fountain.

Carnation Belle Washburn, exhibited by Bassett & Washburn, strikes us as a fine thing.

THE FALL FLOWER SHOWS

Chicago

Another flower show has become history and already those whose hard work and untiring energy for many weeks past made this one of the best exhibits ever held in the great Coliseum, are laying plans for another year and a still better show. The attendance was not so large as the affair deserved, but this is due in part to the fact that the time of the show was coincident with that of the chrysanthemum shows in each of the larger Chicago parks and they are each year drawing larger crowds. The special new features of this show were the giving of more space to the cut flower exhibits and the more artistic setting of the same; the bringing of the musicians to a large stage on the main floor, the barefoot dancing and, to some, most important of all, demonstrating how to wear cut flowers, which seems almost to have become a lost art.

The retailers in general did not take the opportunity to advertise their business and to educate the public in the use of flowers, but those who did received a most gratifying amount of publicity and the prizes awarded were the smallest part of the results. Booths were attractively arranged and maintained in perfect condition each day and thousands stopped and admired the tables and other features. The retailers exhibiting were A. Lange, J. Mangel, Geo. Wienhoeber, J. Simpson, E. Wienhoeber, O. J. Friedman, Geo. Wittbold Co., Schiller the Florist and W. H. Kidwell & Co.

The largest prizes offered were for chrysanthemums, flowers arranged for effect. 1st prize, $200; 2nd, $150; 3rd, $100. 1st was awarded to Geo. Wienhoeber. The display consisted of an assortment of large chrysanthemums arranged in one large and four smaller vases of rectangular design, covered with green velvet and placed on a green rug, the tallest in the center and the others the corners. There were no ribbons or other accessories. 2nd was won by O. J. Friedman and 3rd by J. Mangel. The arrangement of the large chrysanthemums in each entry was above the ordinary in artistic skill and no part of the show attracted more attention. Each booth deserved special mention. They were full of suggestion for the arrangement of flowers in the home and the public lingered longest in front of the booths.

Groups and tables of plants for commercial purposes were shown by A. H. Schneider of Oak Park; A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; C. C. Pollworth, Milwaukee, Wis.; Poehlmann Bros. Co. of Morton Grove; Ernest Rober, of Wilmette; Vaughan's Seed Store, of Western Springs; Frank Oechslein and Geo. Wittbold, of Chicago. Lincoln Park also had a large and finely arranged bed of palms and decorative plants.

The space taken by the private gardeners was especially attractive, four large beds of potted chrysanthemums and one of crotons making that part a delightful riot of color relieved by the large specimen ferns. A new exhibitor appeared this year, J. E. Tilt, of Chicago, gard. Wm. Allen. All the private gardeners entered into the work with enthusiasm and their displays did much toward making the whole a success.

The young ladies demonstrating the use of flowers for personal adornment were in evening dress and arm bouquets, ankle bouquets, how to wear flowers in the hair and how to carry flower-bedecked swagger sticks and parasols, all served greatly to interest the public and a very high-class orchestra added its full share each day.

A beautiful sight which met the eye as the visitor entered the room was the large glass case containing the dozens of silver cups and the 20-inch silver punch bowl, all of which were given by the Chicago Greenhouse Manufacturers.

The visitors register contained 250 names of out of town visitors, and it is fair to presume that a large number failed to register.

List of Awards.

In the chrysanthemum classes for 50 blooms of specially named varieties, there were many notable entries. First prizes were awarded as follows: three to E. G. Hill Co., three to Poehlmann Bros. Co., and one each to Fritz Bahr, Bassett & Washburn, F. H. Lemon Co., Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association and Vaughan's Seed Store. A. Lange won first in the vases of singles and pompons, and Elmer D. Smith & Co. in collection of named varieties. Other exhibitors of prominence in this section were Kroeger & Keenan and Wietor Bros. On chrysanthemum display the contributors were Geo. Wienhoeber, O. J. Friedman, John Mangel, Schiller the Florist and Geo. Wittbold, to whom prizes were awarded in order as given.

In the rose classes for one hundred blooms each, there was splendid competition, the winners of first prizes being Cudahy Floral Co., one; Poehlmann Bros. Co., three; Peter Reinberg, three; Bassett & Washburn, two; Geo. Weinhoeber, one. Poehlmann's Hadley was the winner in red, Bassett & Washburn's Shawyer in any other color except red. In the vases of fifty, Poehlmann Bros.' Francis Scott Key won in the "any other color" class. Other awards in this section were Poehlmann Bros. Co., three; Reinberg, three; Bassett & Washburn, two; A. Lange, two; Gullett & Sons, C. Cutler and George Weinhoeber, one each. Poehlmann's Lady Stanley won in the class for twelve any new variety, and E. G. Hill's Tipperary for twenty-five any variety not in commerce.

Carnations also made a grand showing in the classes for vases of one hundred each. Bassett & Washburn's Matchless won in white, Welter's Enchantress in pink, Reinberg's Rose Pink Enchantress in light pink, Poehlmann's Mrs. C. W. Ward in medium pink, Welter Bros.' Rosette in dark pink, Welter's Champion in red and a seedling from Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association in "any other color." In the classes for vases for fifty, J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. and Bassett & Washburn had three 1sts each; W. C. Manke, Welter Bros., Poehlmann Bros. and V. Besdek, one each. Poehlmann Bros.' White Perfection won as "any other white" and their Akehurst as best introduction of 1915. Welter Bros. won 1st with Bonfire as best introduction in red, and with Alice as "any other pink" and best introduction in its color of 1915. J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. won with Conquest as variety not otherwise provided for, and Princess Dagmar as the best crimson. In the classes for twenty blooms, several novelties came to notice, including Comet, Ellen Washburn and some seedlings by Anton Then, one of which took the sweepstakes, and seedlings by Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association.

In the classes for specimen chrysanthemum plants, Iowa State College took four prizes, Vaughan's Seed Store four, and Poehlmann Bros. one.

In the display of orchids, Poehlmann was first, and for orchid cut blooms, Chas. W. McKellar.

For ferns and foliage plants, Poehlmann Bros. took five 1st prizes in the different classes, Schiller the Florist two, Geo. Weinhoeber two, Wittbold the Florist, F. Oechslein, Gustav Bendal, H. N. Bruns, Vaughan's Seed Store and Merriam Park Floral Company, one each.

Other interesting awards were: Basket of plants, 1st, Geo. Weinhoeber; 2d, Schiller. Display of carnations, 1st, John Mangel; 2d, A. Lange. Basket of chrysanthemums, Geo. Weinhoeber. Lange.

Allied Trades.

The Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co. made the only exhibit in its line. They showed a full-sized greenhouse, of iron frame with curved eaves.

Perhaps the most novel of the large exhibits was that of the D. Hill Nursery Co., who used a large central space in the form of a Japanese garden, with rock, water, bridge, etc. This gave opportunity to show their evergreen trees.

Other exhibitors in this department were the following: Kroeschell Bros. Co., the Kroeschell boilers, one of which was on the floor; Raedlein Basket Co., baskets; Buchbinder Bros., refrigerators; Haeger Brick & Tile Co., Dundee, Ill., flower pots; Ideal Lighting Co., Davenport, Ia., self-watering window boxes; W. W. Barnard Co., seed packeting machine in operation; Vaughan's Seed Store, seeds, bulbs, etc.

he planned the floor. The exhibits were up to the usual high standard and the entries were larger than in former years. The groups were again the main feature of the show. Chrysanthemums, roses and carnations were very good. The trade exhibits were as follows:

Collection of single and pompon chrysanthemums and roses, A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn. Collection of single and hardy chrysanthemums, Scott Bros., Elmsford, N. Y. Fern "John Wanamaker," C. A. Peterson, Tarrytown, N. Y. Collection of Japanese and pompon chrysanthemums, Elmer D. Smith, Adrian, Mich.

There was a very interesting and attractive exhibit of seedling anemone chrysanthemums from Carl D. Schaeffer, superintendent of the Richard Mortimer estate. Mr. Schaeffer has worked hard to improve the anemone type, and by the quality of his exhibit, his efforts have not been in vain. The judges awarded them a certificate of merit.

H. M. Tilford, gard. Joseph Tansey won in the 18 bloom class with the following chrysanthemums:

R. C. Pulling, Mrs. Wm. Tricker, Mrs. J. P. Mitchell, Rose Pockett, Mrs. G. Drabble, Pockett's Crimson, Kewanee, Ernest Wild, Mrs. Bogg, Wm. Kleinheinz, Mrs. W. H. Walker, F. S. Vallis, Kate Ainsley, A. Griswold, Earl Kitchener, Elberon, Mrs. Surrey, Nakota.

David Wagstaff, gard. Thos. Lyons won in the six bloom class with:

Jas. Fraser, Wm. Turner, Elberon, Mendon, Mrs. Bogg, Mrs. G. Drabble.

Mr. Wagstaff's "Mrs. G. Drabble" won the prize for the largest bloom in the show.

NEWS NOTES.

Raleigh, N. C.—J. L. O'Quinn is now located at 119 West Martin street, to which place he moved following the big fire of Nov. 6, which completely destroyed his former place of business. Mr. O'Quinn's stock and fixtures were destroyed by water and by the falling in of the walls of the building in which he was located.

Philadelphia — Chas. H. Grakelow opened his new flower store at Broad and Cumberland streets on the 19th inst. The property is 125 feet deep and 25 feet front and has a fine conservatory in the rear. The front store has been fitted up in the best modern style with all the latest devices to attract trade. We understand that Mr. Grakelow has spent over fifteen thousand dollars on this stride forward from his old store at 15th and Cumberland. So it looks as if the fakir whom Mr. Grakelow pretends to stand in such fear of would have to get a hustle on him. Very few of the fakirs have any fifteen thousand yet to spread out with.

Editor of HORTICULTURE:

Your editorial in issue of November 13th, calling attention to the overwhelming vote of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, that the street man provides the only practical outlet for the surplus stock of the grower and wholesaler under present conditions, is misleading. In the cut flower business as in any other industry self interest is the dominating force in every large community. The growers and the commission men outnumber the retail florists three to one, which is about the percentage of the representation found in the Florists' Clubs. At the meeting referred to, about one-third of the membership, or some 75 members, a very good attendance as meetings go, were present. Not over twelve retailers were in evidence and when a vote was called after the discussion, it was this small representation against the growers and wholesale men who made up the balance of the assembly. Of course, the vote was almost unanimous in favor of the street vendor because of the self-interest which so closely identifies his business with theirs. The fact that vending of any kind is forbidden by law on any of the principal business streets on which it would pay the fakir to operate, and that if by any legal process the way could be opened, it would also permit all street men in other lines, does not concern these gentlemen. They have flowers to sell. They want a broader market and like the man in the crowd they push ahead not caring whose toes they tread on. This question of the fakir will never down. It was a live issue twenty-five years ago. Today should the street men have to retire it would in some localities prove disastrous, causing great financial loss. Many successful retail men have risen from the ranks of the street men. So that storekeeping with all its attending expense must have been found more profitable.

So, Mr. Editor, this action while it may seem to have been the almost unanimous opinion of all the interests of the trade, was but the expression of the men who grow and those who handle the flowers for them, prompted by their self interests in striving for a larger market, whether it interfered with the regular channels being of little or no concern to them.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

CLEVELAND.

Frank Friedley has purchased the greenhouse property of the James Eadie Company and the Friedley Co. will run them for plant growing for the Cleveland market.

All the local flower stores made especial efforts to have their show windows artistic and noticeable during the continuance of the show. To mention one and not all would be unfair, for all were creditable.

The writer took occasion to visit the beautiful Gasser home on Saturday, November 13, and found Mrs. Gasser in the garden gathering flowers, having an armful of rudbeckias, verbenas, marigolds and other garden flowers as bright and perfect as in August. Truly a most unusual autumn. Cosmos was seen in abundance in many of the suburban gardens.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

A host of trade friends will be pleased to learn that George B. Hart, Rochester's high-pressure wholesale florist, was chosen supervisor by a big majority in the recent election.

The active spirits here, encouraged by the success achieved in the floral department of the recent Industrial Fair, and further stirred by Cleveland's exploit, are already laying plans for next year and expect to completely fill with exhibits the large building in which they occupied only a part of the space this year. The Rochester Horse Show at this Exposition is admittedly the most notable annual event of its kind in the country and the flower show was rated as second only to the horse show in the successful features of the 1915 event.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The appropriate name of "Alaska" has been given by F. Burns, of San Rafael, to a new white dahlia which he recently originated.

Angelo J. Rossi acted as marshal of the parade of farewell to the Liberty Bell, on November 11, as he did on the occasion of its arrival.

Joseph's, the Grant avenue store, will celebrate the first anniversary of its opening on Nov. 16. The business has made good progress from the start.

T. A. Monroe, formerly of Golden Gate Park and lately manager of the nursery for the Exposition, will have charge of the sale of the stock to be disposed of from the grounds after the closing.

Pawtucket, R. I. — M. J. Leach & Sons have purchased the stock and fixtures of the Quality Flower Shop, 144 Main street, and will continue the business. No tidings as yet have been received of John W. Seamans, the former proprietor, who disappeared several weeks ago.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mrs. Nettie Supper is now with George C. Shaffer, having severed her connection with Gude Bros. Co.

Donald Malcolm, who for several years has been employed at the store of Gude Bros. Co., has been appointed a sanitary inspector in the health department of the District of Columbia.

An examination is to be held in Alexandria, Va., on Dec. 8, by the Civil Service Commission to secure eligibles for the position of assistant superintendent of plant introduction field station.

William F. Gude and Adolphus Gude were the Washingtonians who attended the flower show in Cleveland, Ohio, last week. They took with them a choice collection of roses from their houses.

On Thursday, Fred B. Kramer announced that, with the view of encouraging children in the study of plant life, he would offer for Friday and Saturday a Pteris Mayii in a four-inch pot and four tulip bulbs for ten cents. This offer was for children and young people only but the streets were well filled with adults carrying home the plants. His large display window was cleared out and four employees put to work repotting the ferns and a heavy business was done.

A committee of retail florists, accompanied by Attorney Burton T. Doyle, last week called on Major Raymond Pullman, superintendent of police, and took up with him the subject of street vendors. The florists told of how these men were a menace to legitimate trade and asked that some action be taken to discourage them. It was suggested that they be subjected to some sort of a license. They were informed that the action desired was not within the province of the police department, but Major Pullman promised to take the matter up with the District Commissioners.

Gude Bros. Co., are extremely gratified at the results obtained from their annual chrysanthemum show held during the week at their store. The attendance was both large and appreciative. The entire first floor for a distance back of nearly 130 feet was a mass of color. The store was illuminated with red, white and blue electric lights and the salesroom was lined on either side by masses of palms, ferns and autumn blossoms and spruce trees. Here and there were stands on which rested vases, covered with birch bark, containing specimen William Turner chrysanthemums. The plate glass mirrors were outlined with spruce and vines entwined in which were yellow pompons. In the long work-room were vases of roses, carnations, and chrysanthemums. On the mezzanine floor had been placed a Victrola, which played during the store hours, and another smaller machine which contained a record imitating the song of the mocking bird. To this latter was added the songs of a half dozen canaries in cages.

Newport, R. I.—Robert Hunnicks, one of Newport's noted gardeners, and Miss Clara Langford, sister of Samuel Langford, another well-known gardener, were married on the evening of October 28 in the rectory of Emmanuel church, in the presence of relatives and a few immediate friends. After the ceremony the bridal party motored to the home of the groom on Slocum street, where a bridal supper was served and a number of handsome gifts were shown. This will be the future home of Mr. and Mrs. Hunnicks.

MASSACHUSETTS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE NOTES.

Last Tuesday the classes in Floriculture visited the greenhouses at Smith college. Mr. Downer showed the students around explaining many interesting things. Of especial interest were the aquatic and the cactus house. In the cactus house, besides various species of cereus, opuntia, agave, eucalyptus, etc., there was a very large specimen of the night blooming cereus which Mr. Downer explained had fifty flowers at one time last summer. On Wednesday evening Mr. Thurston spoke before the Landscape Art Club on annuals and perennials.

Boston—Visitors in Cleveland from this section last week included William Nicholson, W. R. Nicholson, E. Allan Peirce, Sydney Littlefield, Wm. J. Stewart, Eber Holmes, A. J. Loveless, Mr. and Mrs. B. Hammond Tracy and Frank Murray.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON More seasonable weather and the approach of the Thanksgiving holiday already begin to make their impress on the flower market. At present moment the upward trend is felt more than it is seen but it is in the air and it makes everybody feel better. American Beauty roses have stiffened up about 25 per cent. and carnations have made a similar advance. Violets have jumped to double their price of last week and will undoubtedly go higher within a day or two. Football games favor the violet as well as the crimson chrysanthemums, such as Harvard, Mrs. G. W. Childs and Cullingfordii. Lily of the valley sells up to the limit and there are not too many orchids. Chrysanthemums as a general proposition are still very draggy and sell cheap. Roses of the standard run are also low but are booked for a good advance very soon.

There is too much BUFFALO stock in the market considering the small amount of business. Everything along the line practically has to be forced on the buyers. Roses and carnations come in abundance and prices are all cut up. It was impossible to hold up prices under such conditions. Chrysanthemums have been coming in quantity, pompons accumulating to some extent. Lilies, violets and other stock are moving very slowly. Cold weather with snow flurries have now set in and this will check the supply.

Business moved along CHICAGO in a very satisfactory way the past week and the middle of November shows the half month footings are of good proportions. The first fall of snow occurred on the night of the 15th when a cold wave swept over Chicago and the ground was well covered in the morning. The effect of the flower show on the market was good. Previous to its opening a sort of reaction had come from the brisk opening of the fall business but sales were lively when the attention of the public centered on the big exhibition at the Coliseum. Stock has been coming very fast and the drop in temperature and cloudy sky are acting as a desirable check just now. Chrysanthemum season is on the down side, the heaviest cuts having been made by most growers. There is plenty of good stock of all kinds and an abundance of green.

The market is far CINCINNATI from being what it might be. Receipts are very heavy and are not cleaning up at all. Low prices naturally result. The demand from out of town is pretty good. Roses continue in heavy supply. Among the offerings are some very fine American Beauties, Killarney and White Killarney, Taft, Sunburst and Hoosier Beauty. Carnations are not having a very good market. Chrysanthemums are very plentiful. The cut of lilies and callas is more than adequate. Violets, orchids and lily of the valley are all in a good supply.

The wholesale stores NEW YORK are heavily overcrowded with chrysanthemums. They run very fine as to quality, better in size, finish and uniformity than ever before, we should say. But they are away beyond any demand sufficient to clear the store-rooms of the enormous accumulation which becomes a daily increasing problem for the wholesale dealer. Roses are also seen in large numbers and they, together with the violets are the principal stock of the street vendors. A favorite combination with these curbstone dealers just now is violets and Mrs. Aaron Ward rosebuds, the contrasting colors making a pleasing impression and indicating that the street fakir is not devoid of color discrimination. While the roses and violets, as well as other standard flowers, are all badly stagnated, it is nevertheless quite likely that if the chrysanthemums were out of the way the market would have little trouble in assimilating the stock and we should not be surprised to see the really good chrysanthemums come to an abrupt ending before long, especially if the weather continues as mild and stimulating as it has been thus far. Thanksgiving Day is a week distant at present writing and many things can happen in the meantime. One of the really good selling things of humble antecedents is the calendula. These are eagerly sought by the first-class stores at the price of the best carnations. Referring again to the chrysanthemums, it is to be noted that the proportion of pompons in the wholesale markets is much larger than in past seasons and the varieties are well selected as to color and form. There is already some stevia being brought in.

General conditions have been a little draggy and prices generally in favor of the buyer. But as we write today (Nov. 17) things have improved and there is a little more life and a promise of lively demand for Thanksgiving week. American Beauty roses are very plentiful and very fine quality; but of course they are not bringing the prices they should. The same applies to the whole list of roses. If we were to specify leaders the Russell and ophelia would certainly head the list. Carnations have been too plentiful but have slackened off a little in the past few days and are now in more normal shape. The golden flower is queening the autumn in true regal style, happy and glorious, the bright particular stars in her galaxy at present being the Chadwicks, the Eatons and the Bonnaffons—not forgetting our good old standby among the pinks, Dr. Enguehard. Orchids are scarce. The best cattleya we notice at present is Carnations and roses were so many last week that a considerable amount went to waste. Prices are low in all the grades. Fancy stock is the only kind that has any demand. Violets, lily of the valley, sweet peas and lilies have had quite a nice demand at normal prices.

frosty mornings have killed the less hardy stuff in private gardens and stimulating the demand for cut stock. Chrysanthemums are still quite abundant. The call for roses has been especially heavy this week and practically everything is bought up most of the time before the day is fairly started. Beauties are still a little scarce and Cecile Bruner is far short of requirements. Violet shipments are larger than ever, the rain having benefited the stock. There is a good supply of carnations. Lily of the valley has been a little scarce, but the supply is about normal again. Other lilies are not much of a factor, only a little cold storage stock being offered. Orchids are doing very well, both as to supply and demand.

Chrysanthemums
WASHINGTON continue to be the leading factor in the day's business. Roses are not bringing what they should, despite the fact that the supply has decreased somewhat and those received are of good grade. Carnations also sell low. Cattleyas are quite scarce and lily of the valley is very plentiful. The cooler weather has brought violets into better shape but their movement continues slow. William Turner is the leading chrysanthemum at this time. Bonnaillon in the yellows is selling well. There are far more whites than can be moved to advantage. Pompons sell but moderately, either potted or cut. American Beauty roses are very good. Mrs. W. R. Hearst, the dark pink sport of My Maryland, was seen last week in prime condition.

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$1.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

The annual meeting was held at the Hotel Hollenden, Cleveland, O., on November 11, 1915. President Kleinheinz presiding.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Wm. Kleinheinz, Ogontz, Pa.; vice-president, Wm. Vert, Port Washington, L. I., N. Y.; secretary, Chas. W. Johnson, 2134 W. 110th street, Chicago; treasurer, John N. May, Summit, N. J. Philadelphia was chosen for the 1916 meeting.

The annual address of President Kleinheinz follows.

Fellow Members of the Chrysanthemum Society of America:

It gives me great pleasure to welcome you in the City of Cleveland, at this, the 25th annual meeting of this society, which was organized in Buffalo, in 1890, during the convention of the Society of American Florists. The officers then elected were as follows: President, John Thorp; vice-president, Wm. K. Harris; treasurer, John Lane; secretary Edwin Lonsdale. All these gentlemen (I regret) have passed away; but this society is indebted to them forever for organizing and promoting the good of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, which has become, during its existence, a necessity to the "Mum" growers, and everyone interested in chrysanthemums should do his best to increase the membership, and thus make this society one of the strongest in America. Everyone should feel it his duty to help. This would prove the most suitable memorial to its founders and promoters, and would express our sentiments and appreciation to them forever.

I intended to arrange (if possible) to make this 25th convention an exceptionally fine chrysanthemum show; but as our financial standing does not justify any extra expenses, I feel that the Ohio Horticultural Society, the Cleveland Florists' Club and the Garden Club of Cleveland have relieved us of a great consideration by extending their kind invitation for our exhibition for 1915 just at the proper time. This excellent exhibition proves that the gentlemen from Cleveland have fulfilled their promise given in Indianapolis last year to the fullest extent.

Our secretary reported to me some time ago that he solicited several new members during and after the show of 1914 in Indianapolis. I hope and shall expect that through this exhibition in Cleveland our membership will be considerably enlarged.

Every year the cry is coming up: "The demand for chrysanthemums is waning." With this I cannot agree. All gardening in America, in my opinion, is still in its infancy and everyone knows that range after range of greenhouses for commercial or private purposes are erected every year. In every private place and in every little garden you find chrysanthemums. Under glass the large flowering varieties as well as the pompons and singles are grown; outdoors the hardy varieties are installed and used for decorative purposes very extensively and are considered the most beautiful flowers for late season. As a border plant or mixed with herbaceous, it is the only flower that beautifies the gardens late in the year.

The commercial men are able to give figures on the demands for chrysanthemums and the records show that the sale of plants is increased yearly by thousands, and as long as this keeps up there is no danger of "Mums" becoming unpopular. And why should they become unpopular? The progress we are making you can see yourself by looking over the exhibits. The large flowering type is increased yearly in size; the pompons and singles are superior to the varieties of the past.

In closing, I wish to express my thanks to the trade and to the press for the many courtesies extended for the welfare of the society; and to our competent secretary, Chas. W. Johnson, who places his time and efforts at our disposal whenever needed. I also wish to express my highest appreciation to all those who so liberally offered prizes, enabling us to form such a complete schedule.

Report of Secretary Chas. W. Johnson.

Mr. President and members of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, your Secretary submits his report for the past year as follows:

He is pleased to report continued progress. The numbers of seedlings submitted to the examining committees as you may see by the review of their work in the Society's Annual Report shows an increase over the preceding year and for many years past. Some of the varieties which received a certificate have upheld the committee's judgment and have gained the favor of the growers. The reports of the examining committees were sent to the trade papers each week as they were received and a final summary of the season's work was published. The trade press very generously printed these and other notices sent to them from time to time for which we owe to them our vote of thanks.

While our membership has not increased as much as your officers would like, yet we have made considerable gain for the year. Some of the members delinquent with dues, after repeated requests for payment, have been dropped from the roll. Our Society has gained greater publicity during the past year.

At the invitation of Mr. G. A. Denison, Chief of Horticulture, Panama Pacific International Exposition, San Francisco, for the Chrysanthemum Society to have a part in a seasonal exhibition of Chrysanthemums at the Exposition in San Francisco, your secretary presented the matter to the members of the executive committee who unanimously voted that our Society take part in the event and offer a C. S. A. Silver Cup for the ten blooms of Chrysanthemums one variety. Consequently your secretary wrote to the Pacific Horticultural Society asking them to join us, which they consented to do with the result that a very fine exhibition was held, especially so in cut blooms of Chrysanthemums.

Your secretary appreciates the kindness of the following firms and individuals in offering the special prizes at San Francisco and at this exhibition here in Cleveland:

Hitchings & Co., New York; Lord & Burnham Co., New York; Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich.; The E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.; A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.; Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, Ill.; H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia; H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill.; Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia; Wm. Wells & Son, Merstham, England; H. E. Converse, Esq., Marion, Mass.; President Wm. Kleinheinz, Ogontz, Pa.; National Association of Gardeners, Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists.

Through the kindness of these our special premium list for this year is larger than it has been before.

The routine work of the secretary's office consisting of sending out the statements to the members, recording the varieties disseminated, getting out the report of the Thirteenth Annual Meeting and the solicitation of the Special premiums was attended to in due season.

The secretary wishes to acknowledge the kindness of Mr. Elmer D. Smith in furnishing him with a complete list of varieties disseminated in 1914 which was a great help in making up the annual report.

A detailed report of all money received and paid over to the Treasurer accompanies this.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF GARDENERS.

The annual convention of the National Association of Gardeners, will take place this year in Boston on December 9 and 10.

The first session will convene in Horticultural Hall, on Thursday afternoon, December 9 at two o'clock. A number of papers will be submitted by gardeners prominent in the profession which should provoke a good discussion. Among the subjects will be "Is Gardening a Profession?" "The Gardener's Place in the Public Service." "The Management of a Private Country Estate, as viewed by a College Graduate." "The Young Gardeners' Opportunity in this Country." "Is Co-operation Between Garden Clubs and Gardeners' Societies Desirable?" President Everitt has appointed W. N. Craig, Duncan Finlayson and W. J. Kennedy a Committee on Convention Arrangements and they promise that the meetings will be made interesting, entertaining and instructive to all who attend. An invitation is extended to all gardeners to attend the Boston convention so that they may familiarize themselves with the scope of the work the national association has undertaken.

Owing to the small number of articles received in the Essay Contest, which closed on October 1, the winners of which were to be announced at the convention in December, the Essay Committee,—(William H. Waite, W. N. Craig, Edwin Jenkins, Arthur Smith and Theodore Wirth).—has decided to reopen and continue the contest so that gardeners may participate in it during the winter months, when they have more time than any other season of the year to devote to the writing of essays. The contest will close on February 1 and the winners will be announced at the association's meeting during the National Flower Show in Philadelphia, in March, 1916.

There are four classes as follows:

Class 1—Prize $35, gold. Subject: Horticulture as a Profession, from the Standpoint of a Gardener.

Class 2—Prize $25, gold. Subject: The Proper Grouping and Culture of Trees, Shrubs, Perennials and Annual Bedding Plants in the Ornamentation of Private Grounds.

Class 3—Prize $20, gold. Subject: Preparation of Ground for and General Treatment of Hardy Herbaceous Perennials. Naming a list of species (limited to one hundred) providing a succession of flowers throughout the entire season.

Class 4—Prize $20, gold. Subject: How to Secure a Year's Vegetable Supply with the Aid of Cold Frames or Hotbeds (but no Greenhouses), Including Soil Preparation.

The essay contest is open to professional gardeners who are engaged in the capacity of superintendents, head gardeners or assistant gardeners. Contestants will address William H. Waite, Chairman Essay Committee, National Association of Gardeners, P. O. Box 290, Madison, N. J., for further particulars.

WESTCHESTER AND FAIRFIELD HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

There was a large attendance at the monthly meeting of this society on Friday evening, Nov. 12th, at Greenwich, Ct. Among the principal features was the exceptionally fine display of carnations. First prize was awarded to Wm. Graham, second to Robert Allen. In the non-competitive exhibits, Ewen McKenzie received a cultural certificate for chrysanthemums Odessa and Wm. Turner. A. Wynne was highly commended for seedling carnations, W. J. Sealey for pompon chrysanthemums, and votes of thanks were accorded to P. W. Popp for lily of the valley, Robert Grunnert for chrysanthemums, Wm. Whitton for antirrhinums, Louis Wittman for cosmos, Carl Hankensen for roses. John Andrew was highly commended for celeriac Giant Prague.

It was voted to change the meeting place from present location to the Isaac Hubbard Hall, in Greenwich, the change to take place in January, 1916. A rising vote of thanks was accorded all those who helped to make the 5th annual flower show such a grand success. A communication from the Nassau County Horticultural Society asking the W. & F. Society to co-operate in establishing an interchange of courtesies between local societies, was endorsed. Election of officers will take place at the next meeting, Dec. 10.

P. W. POPP, Cor. Sec.

GARDENERS' & FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

The next meeting of the club will be held on Tuesday evening, Nov. 23, the halls of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society being rented on the regular date, Nov. 16th. An expert from the Pilgrim Publicity Association of Boston will lecture on "Advertising, the light that serves and saves," illustrated with stereopticon views. Nomination of officers for 1916 will be made at this meeting. M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J., will be present and speak on the coming convention of the National Association of Gardeners to be held in Boston on Dec. 9 and 10. There will be interesting exhibits of late chrysanthemums and other seasonable flowers. A cordial invitation is extended to non-members to be present and enjoy the lecture.

W. N. CRAIG, Sec.

OHIO GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

An adjourned meeting of the Ohio Gladiolus Society was held in the assembly room of the Hollenden Hotel, Cleveland, on Nov. 11. Officers were elected as follows: President, C. B. Gates, Mentor, O.; vice-president, Joseph Coleman, Lexington, O.; secretary-treasurer, Wilbur A. Christie, Warren, O. Friday and Saturday, Aug. 12 and 13, 1916, were the dates selected for the next exhibition.

There was an executive committee meeting of the American Carnation Society on Friday evening, November 12, at the Hollenden Hotel, Cleveland. It was decided to signalize the meeting at St. Louis next January by the issue of a number of jubilee silver medals in honor of the occasion, which will be the 25th anniversary of the society's birth.

The show windows are changed every day. Never are they crowded; always is there a choice, tasty suggestion in floral possibilities.

To get an interior that does justice to this charming shop, was out of the question. It was a good deal like "not being able to see the woods because of the trees."

Getting Both Ends of the String Or the Schroeter—Stahelin Method

IF you happen to be fortunate enough to know Mr. A. J. Stahelin of Detroit, you can best admire the quiet, thorough-going way he has with him.

Every once in a while, he does something that makes some of his fellow growers sit up and take notice. One of them was, building a house on wheels.

The next was building a big Lord & Burnham Iron Framed, 72x400 feet, for sweet peas.

Then came the opening of a flower shop—unique and charming in every particular.

Here it is, you will find Mr. Schroeter giving vent to his hustling progressiveness; while Mr. Stahelin looks more particularly after the producing end.

In one of his many pilgrimages for ideas I had the pleasure of spending a day with him among the Kennett Square growers near Philadelphia. Later, I was most delightfully entertained at his home when visiting his greenhouses.

Both times, I was impressed with the fact of his being very much like the description of a straight line: "The shortest distance between two points"; which dominating trait, doubtless had a lot to do with his buying one of our finest type of houses.

This iron frame house is 72 feet wide and 400 feet long. When the photo was taken last winter, the house was filled with sweet peas.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine

To have exceptionally fine stock of Begonia Lorraine for next year propagating should be started now. There is no doubt as to the superiority of early-propagated stock. When selecting material, take well matured leaves of a spotless green from the most vigorous plants. Trim away the stubby end of the leaf stalk, about half an inch below the leaf and insert in the sand until the base of the leaf is in close contact with the surface and see that they are well firmed in the sand. Exclude sunshine and give them frequent sprinklings and they should root in about eight or nine weeks. Every day they should have fresh air admitted. It is a good plan to have them covered with sashes while you are ventilating the house to ward off draughts or excessive changes in the temperature.

Christmas Trade Suggestions

To be well prepared for a run of good business is very often all-sufficient to assure its coming. Good stock, plenty of it, rich in variety and temptingly displayed never fails to attract custom. This fact should not be overlooked by those new in the retail florist business. Have a good supply of holly, mistletoe, laurel, lycopodium and boxwood and wreaths for use in decorations. The filling of pans, baskets and other receptacles with plants other than bulbous stock or poinsettias should be done now or as soon as possible. See that the plants are well watered or thoroughly dipped before being made up. The buds of lilies should be well forward now. You will have to do some figuring during the next ten days in moving around those lilies so as to time them to a nicety. The most advanced ones should be removed to cooler quarters while those that are backward should be given some high forcing unless too far behind.

Cyclamen

Cyclamen will not last long in fine condition, nor prove of so great a value for living room or house adornment, if they had to be grown and flowered in great heat in order to make them Christmas plants. They can be grown to perfection in a night temperature of about 50 degrees. Perfect foliage is the proper setting to their flowers and without the former the latter, if ever so abundant, fails to arouse admiration. Plants which have a number of buds well-developed but not quite out should be put into about 55 to 58 degrees at night, as near the glass as possible and in full sun. Cyclamen should be frequently examined and if not entirely free of insects should receive a good sponging especially on the under side of the leaves. From this out see that they do not suffer for water at the roots.

Next Week:—Christmas Greens; Azaleas for Christmas; Decorative Stock; Getting Ready for Christmas; Lorraine Begonias; Soil for Small Seeds.

Poinsettias

Those that are coming along not so fast can be held at from 60 to 65 degrees at night. By this time most poinsettias should be well advanced and if so a temperature of about 55 degrees will be sufficient to hold them in good condition. No plant more quickly responds neglect than a finely developed poinsettia. Failure with poinsettias can usually be traced to insufficient heat. Grown in a low temperature, the leaves will turn yellow and drop. The best poinsettia bracts with their stems leafless lose the greater part of their value. Keep your pans and pots from drying out too much by giving water when necessary. The loss of foliage is often caused by the exhaustion of the soil. If they have had some liquid manure occasionally up to now, it will help them materially. It is not safe to abruptly bring about a great change in temperature of poinsettias, but they can be gradually lowered until they are standing 55 degrees at night and 10 to 15 degrees more with sun heat.

Sowing Fern Spores

Those who are sowing spores should bear in mind that the most desirable commercial varieties will take from 10 to 12 months before they are fit to sell in pot. To have success in growing ferns from spores it is necessary to have the compost sterilized. A great deal of what is known as damping off has its origin in a minute fungus. Where you do not have a better means the soil can be baked in the furnace or soaked with boiling water. Fill the pans about one-third with crocks, larger ones in the bottom and those on the top finely broken and over this place a layer of moss, then fill to within an inch and a half of the top with the sterilized compost. This compost should consist of loam, leaf mold, peat and sand in equal parts. The surface soil in the pan should be pressed down and made as smooth as possible. A good soaking of water should be given and allowed to drain off before sowing the spores. Don't cover the spores with soil but place over the pan a close-fitting pan of glass and place where they can have 65 degrees.

Propagating Vincas

Large clumps of vincas, say in 5 or 6-inch pots can be broken up into pieces large enough for a three-inch pot. Give them a compost of fibrous loam three parts and well rotted manure one part. Leaf mold add one part will also be good. Keep shaded for a little while. Give them a temperature of not less than 60 degrees at night.

Origin of the Boston fern

The subject of the origin of the so-called "Boston fern" recently opened up by HORTICULTURE in questioning some of the evidence gathered for the records of the Brooklyn Botanic Garden, has been taken up in the columns of one of our contemporaries. So far as we know there is no proof that the Boston fern was the first "variation from type," if indeed, any authentic type has ever been located. At the time of the agitation twenty years ago which resulted in the general adoption of the name "Bostoniensis" for the graceful form of Nephrolepis exaltata generally grown about Boston for many years previous, we obtained permission to examine the specimens in the herbarium of the late Asa Gray at Harvard Botanic Garden. Very many variant forms—arching, stiff, wide, narrow, etc., gathered from various sources, were there found simply under the name of Nephrolepis exaltata. The inference we drew at that time was that the "Boston variety" was but one of the many forms in which this widely distributed fern had been found in nature and we have seen no reason since to change our opinion. As to which one of the various forms collected was the original "type" and which are the "sports", perhaps something reliable may yet be uncovered but "I hae my doots."

Commercial unpreparedness

We learn from the Consular and Trade Reports issued by the Department of Commerce that American glass manufacturers, who have hitherto felt the necessity of depending upon foreign clays, will be able hereafter to assert their independence of foreign material, as a result of experiments that have been conducted in the Pittsburgh laboratory of the U. S. Bureau of Standards, where it has now been proven that American clays are superior to German plastic clays for the preparation of glass refractories. The opinion of those in charge of the experiments is that from now on no foreign clays will be needed in this branch of manufacture and the benefit to American industry will be consequently very great. We are further advised that Americans have at last succeeded in solving the secret of an extremely fine quality of steel, for a supply of which our manufacturers have been forced hitherto to depend on the Krupp works in Europe. It has been truly said that "Hunger is the teacher of the arts and the bestower of invention" and this proverb holds particularly true now in many lines of industry, more or less deranged by the gigantic convulsion which has overwhelmed their accustomed foreign sources of supply. It is hardly becoming that so many of our industrial activities are thus almost prostrated from unpreparedness, our "captains of industry" having waited until forced by hunger before they would bestir themselves to look about for and bring to the front our home resources. We have in mind also the potash problem, an attempt at solution of which has been actually forced upon us, and which, we doubt not, will yet be successful, should the present famine continue.

Looking ahead

As is well known, plant products came very near sharing the fate of the potash and the clay and there was much jubilation among the plant and flower trade when it was learned that azaleas and other floricultural products would be received from Europe this fall as usual and that our growers would not be compelled to devise ways and means for supplying the Christmas and Easter demand with the products of home industry exclusively. Yet, it is not at all certain that it would not have been a "blessing in disguise" had the threatened famine become a fact and our commercial horticulturists obliged to sharpen up their inventive wits accordingly. We should like to see the question of the possibilities of successful competition with foreign-grown plants and bulbs given a real test. Why not incorporate in the advance schedules of our big public exhibitions a set of substantial prizes for home-grown plants, and flowers from home-grown bulbs of varieties not hitherto produced commercially in this country? The Massachusetts Horticultural Society, we understand, has in contemplation a plan for issuing its prize schedules two or three years in advance and it is probable that the promoters of important shows elsewhere will yet find it desirable to adopt similar methods in order to keep up with the advancing standards of quality. A period of three years for preparation and an adequate prize in sight should be a sufficient inducement to systematic effort, and in the hands of a competent advertising expert would prove a most effective publicity asset for any large flower show. President Welch brought this timely subject before the Society of American Florists in a very practical manner in his address before that body at San Francisco last August and we hope that the committee appointed as a result of the Society's approval will act promptly and decisively. The active cooperation of the Bureau of Plant Industry with this committee should not be difficult to secure. There will never be a more propitious time than the present for making a beginning.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Fungine. Gladioli Among Roses

Mr. Arthur Ruzicka:

Dear Sir:—Will you kindly give me the formula for making Fungine? I notice that you always recommend a grower to make his own fungicides. The only objection I have in the use of this article is the filthy mess it makes on the benches, glass and woodwork with which it comes in contact; otherwise it is a fairly good article.

Also please inform me if I can grow a few gladiolus bulbs among the rose bushes.

Yours truly,

A. M.

New York.

From the way the inquiry is written it would seem that you do not like Fungine as well as you might, and I cannot see why you should want to mix it at home. It is a patented article, and the price for which it sells is by no means prohibitive, and it is therefore within reach of all. The formula is unknown to me, and I would not make a business of telling it to everyone if it was, as it is the property of The Aphine Manufacturing Co. As for the mess you say you object to, I would suggest that you let a trained rose grower apply the Fungine next time, and I am sure he can do so without messing up the benches, glass and woodwork. To do so he should have an "Auto-Spray" or some other good sprayer that will take a fine nozzle, thus making it very simple to control the spray. We have used Fungine in private conservatories without getting any of it on any glass or woodwork, and if we did, we never found any filthy mess such as you mention. Regarding the gladiolus among rose plants, I would not advise you to plant them there, for they will not amount to much. If you are at all familiar with the culture of the gladiolus you will know that they require conditions quite different from the rose, needing a much warmer and damper atmosphere right up to the time the buds begin to show. Roses too, do best when they are alone, and with us there is never any room among the plants for anything, as they take up all the soil room with their roots, and all the head room with their growth. If you are not particular as to the quality of gladioli you will cut, you could make a few narrow boxes about eight inches deep and plant your bulbs in these, setting them in the walks wherever you may have room. By using good bulbs you may be successful enough to get a cut of fair quality spikes.

Early Propagation

If there are any houses that are doing at all poorly, it will be best to figure on getting these planted early in the season, and towards that end it will be advisable to start propagating early, and a batch of cuttings can be put in at once. If no propagating house is on the place, one of the cross-houses can generally be fixed up to answer the purpose very nicely. In doing this, one should make sure that the heat can be controlled, as otherwise success is not likely to be the result. As a rule there is far too much heat in the cross-houses and to cover up all the pipes would be quite an expense. As these are generally in a trench through the center of the house, with a walk over it, a layer of newspaper can be put down on this and a three-inch coat of ashes applied over this. The ashes can be kept from getting under the benches by putting a narrow board against the bench supports, thus keeping the ashes over the trench only. If plenty of paper is put under the ashes there will be little trouble from the ashes sifting through the cracks into the trench underneath, and when the house is no longer needed for propagating the ashes can be taken away and the heat allowed to come through again. We like the temperature in the sand as near 66 as possible, with a top temperature of 50. The low temperature in the house is necessary to keep the cuttings from making top growth, until after they are rooted. It can then be gradually raised to 58 or 60 until the cuttings are potted. Do not use old or dirty sand. To test sand, rub a little of it between the hands and, on stopping, if they are at all dirty the sand is not clean. It can be washed if no other is available, but should not be used unless it is absolutely necessary. A medium grain sand does best with us and it must be finely screened to take out even the smallest gravel. The benches should be well cleaned and whitewashed before the sand is put in. Where slate can be had for a bottom, or tile, so much the better. Where it is impossible to have either, then a layer of bricks can be put on the bottom of the ordinary wooden bench and the sand put on these. Needless to say the sides of the benches should be closed in order to make the heat go through into the sand. Doors should be provided to let out some heat should the temperature in the sand run up too high. The glass will need a coat of shading, and for this we find it best to use a little green paint mixed into a good deal of kerosene with a little touch of drier added. This will give ideal shade.

Selection of Wood

It will pay to take only real good, clean wood and with live thorns. Wood that has brown or dead thorns on it will not root as easily as wood with live thorns, as the former is much harder, and will not only take longer to root but will require much better care. With Beauties we prefer to make only two-eye cuttings, but with teas we like to make three eye cuttings if we have plenty of wood. Also as many heel cuttings as we can get. There are a large number of small eyes at the bottom of a heel cutting and these come up later in bottom shoots. The more of these of course the better. As soon as a bunch of wood is cut sprinkle it well to keep it from wilting. It is best not to put it into a tub of water as water-soaked wood will not root nearly as well. However, it must not be allowed to wilt, for if it does it will be worthless. The same is true of cuttings. The place to make these would be in the rose cellar where it is cool and not too dry. These cuttings should be kept sprinkled all the time yet not submerged in water for any length of time. As soon as a lot of cuttings is made they should be put into sand at once and well firmed by laying a lath across the bench and striking it gently with a hammer or a brick.

NEPHROLEPIS EXALTATA BOSTONIENSIS

CONCERNING NEPHROLEPIS BOSTONIENSIS.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

Dear Sir—Your comment in HORTICULTURE for October 16th, regarding my Boston fern note in a Brooklyn Botanic Garden Leaflet is welcome, as you suggest it might be, although I question the force of your correction.

It is welcome because I hope it may bring out further facts bearing on the question which may throw light on the dark parts in the antecedents of bostoniensis. I have spent a considerable number of days and dollars during the last year visiting growers of bostoniensis or its varieties about New York, Boston, and Philadelphia, besides corresponding with those further west, all in search of accurate information about these ferns. I have not, however, yet reached the point where I am inhospitable to additional facts even though they may contradict matters which I now believe settled. At the present time I have assembled at the Brooklyn Garden nearly sixty-five distinct forms of Nephrolepis of which probably forty are named American varieties. These latter with two exceptions, I have obtained directly from their original producers, having taken this procedure in the interests of accuracy. Of Piersoni and Anna Foster (or Fosteriana, Fosterae, or Fosteri as it is variously known) I have as yet only uncertain specimens. Barrowsi I have not at all as yet but hope to get it next year from England. Or can you tell me of some American grower who has authentic material of the Foster plant or of Barrowsi?

I question the force of your correction because I do not believe there is any real difference in our information. It is true in a sense that Becker did not originally discover bostoniensis. He sold, by his own statement, 50,000 or more plants of it as "davallioides" until G. W. Oliver convinced him that it was not davallioides, when it was then sent to England (Kew) for identification, where it was "discovered" and named as bostoniensis, if this expression may be permitted. But was not the material sent Becker material and is there any real misstatement in saying that bostoniensis was discovered in the Becker establishment? Had the new form been recognized and described in the literature before Becker obtained it? I ask these questions in the same good part in which I judge your note to have been conceived. My information was derived from two independent sources both presumably reliable and I hope my statement may stand investigation.

The collection at the Brooklyn Botanic Garden deserves further mention. The Garden has given it space not only because the variations are of considerable scientific interest but because it is within the function of the garden to further horticultural knowledge. Besides the present collection mainly of American forms, it is intended to obtain next year all the English forms and to grow these to determine their value. If the tests show any to be superior to those now grown here the results will be published for the benefit of American growers. In the meantime the garden will welcome any help which American florists can render. From the scientific standpoint all variations, whether of horticultural value or not, are of interest and the garden will be glad to receive any additional kinds. At the same time it will reciprocate as far as possible by supplying small plants or runners of varieties now in stock which it is permitted to send out. A number of growers have already sent in new unnamed forms on the understanding that these will not be allowed to go out. As it happens a number of exchanges have already been made or arranged but the distribution of plants by the garden is somewhat limited owing to the small space at present available.

Yours truly,

R. C. BENEDICT.

VARIETIES OF NEPHROLEPIS.

At the Brooklyn Botanic Garden there has been assembled a collection of between sixty and seventy varieties of Nephrolepis; over fifty of which are named, as shown in the lists given below. The catalogs of English growers offer about forty additional varieties which the Garden expects to purchase within a few months.

In addition to maintaining this collection for the purpose of scientific study, the Garden desires to make it of value to American growers of Nephrolepis, and makes, herewith, the following offer. Small plants or runners of any of the plants named will be furnished to growers interested in trying them out, as fast as a limited supply of stock plants will allow. Requests for information regarding any of the varieties listed below will be answered by the writer of this note as completely as available data will permit. Furthermore, the Garden is having reprinted the writer's article on Nephrolepis prepared for Bailey's Cyclopaedia of American Horticulture, and will be glad to send a copy of this reprint to any grower on request. This contains a general discussion of Nephrolepis, with descriptions of all the varieties about which information was obtainable.

In return, growers are asked to send in any new form which they may produce, and also any old forms, such for example as Barrowsi, which has not yet been obtainable in the United States although listed in English catalogs. In connection with the Cyclopaedia article, the writer will welcome and greatly appreciate notification of any mistakes or omissions, or other information pertinent to the subject.

ODE TO THE DAHLIA.

By a Dahlia Lover.

Written in honor of the first Exhibition of the American Dahlia Society, held in the American Museum of Natural History, Sept. 24, 25 and 26, 1915.

Queen of the waning summer time, I greet thee,

It is indeed a joy sublime, to meet thee!

Wonderful robes, with colors bright enfold thee,

Crimson and pink and dark as night: they hold me!

Centuries old, and yet, with youth eternal,
And heart of gold, and character supernal,
Down from the everlasting hills to meet us,
With open arms, and smiling face to greet us.

Why do we love thee, we of these later days,

We who are fascinated, as we gaze?

Surely some memory dear and sweet enthalls us!

Helpful and strong, thy silent voice, it calls us.

Back to our mother's garden, memories call,

And, as we journey, loving thoughts grow fonder.

This was her flower, she loved it best of all;
We feel her, see her, love her, as we ponder.

So, Summer Queen, and autumn queen, we greet thee:

Thou art the flower to memory most dear,
Our mother's flower proud are we all to meet thee;

Proud of thy triumph, manifested here,
And so with mother's name we link thee ever,

Mother and dahlia, through all the years gone by;

And naught in all the years to come can sever.

What beauty, love and memories supply.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

The November meeting of this Club on Tuesday evening, was very well attended. The main business was an address by George B. Gallup, president of the Pilgrim Publicity Association of Boston, on "Advertising—the Light that Serves and Saves." The speaker presented his subject in such an attractive manner that it deeply impressed all who heard it. He emphasized the duty of the horticulturist to do their part to improve the esthetic environment of the places where people live and contribute by such support to the advancement of civilization and culture which is so distinctively characteristic of the present epoch of unprecedented scientific revelation. He told of the plans under way for the proposed Model City of the World which is to commemorate the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth, on the anniversary of that event five years hence and made a strong presentation of the part that the florist and landscape gardener is expected to take in this great project for which the initial expenditure will exceed twenty million dollars. The florists' great mission is to help bring about a fuller popular appreciation of the beauties of nature and to inculcate by effort and example the ambition for more beautiful cities and happier homes and to help increase the joy and honor of living, through the message of the goods in which they deal. The eloquent presentation of this timely subject was received with a spirited demonstration of approval.

W. J. Kennedy as chairman of the legislative committee read a list of the various bills to be presented before the legislature during the coming session, having a direct interest for the trade. One of these is in the interest of the birds and bees as affected by the poison-spraying of the trees. One provides for the utilization of forest land for cultivation. One provides the sum of $5000, towards the instruction of boys and girls in gardening. Another contemplates the taking of a State census of everybody connected with any branch of agriculture or horticulture. Still another proposes that the Mass. Agricultural College be equipped to test seeds for all who wish, and one other provides for a special experiment station to investigate diseases of vegetables.

Communications were read from John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., asking for count and voucher to show the Club's eligibility to have a representative on the S. A. F. executive board, and from R. Vincent, Jr., concerning the newly organized American Dahlia Society.

Nomination of officers followed and the following were named without any competing candidates: James Methuen for president; W. J. Patterson for vice-president; Peter Fisher for treasurer, and W. N. Craig for secretary. Nine names were nominated for the executive committee. A re-election as president was offered to Herman Bartsch but he declined the honor. Six new members were admitted.

M. C. Ebel, secretary of the National Association of Gardeners made an interesting address on the history and purposes of the Association and the approaching convention in Boston. W. N. Craig, Duncan Finlayson and W. J. Kennedy were appointed to act with a similar number from the executive committee of the Horticultural Interests of Boston to provide a suitable welcome and entertainment for the visitors on the occasion of the convention, Dec. 9, 10 and 11.

On the exhibition table were groups of Christmas plants from W. W. Edgar Co., Carnation Miss Theo from Littlefield & Wyman, vase of Bouvardia Humboldtii corymbiflora and specimen plants of Solanum capsicastrum. Montreal variety, from Faulkner Farm. Splendid blooms of chrysanthemums Wm. Turner, Col. Appleton, Wells' Late Pink, Wm. Duckham and Mrs. Kelley from Alex McKay, a lovely pale pink seedling rose of delicious fragrance from C. E. Holbrow and a showy plant of Begonia Ensign from the same exhibitor, this being the first time it has been shown in this country.

LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS' CLUB.

The visitors to Manheim on November 18 numbered an even half dozen—a small but select party. At Phares Hostetter's we saw callas by the ten thousand and sweet peas, all in excellent shape. At Monroe Hostetter's sweet peas, mignonette, carnations, etc., uniformly good. At E. P. Hostetter's, the giant place of the county, Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus are a big money making proposition and one house of plumosus is laden with seed. A house of yellow daisies three years old was in full bloom and an evidence of what can be done by careful culture. Carnations, of which there are tons of thousands, were in fine form and especially those that had been planted in all summer. A house of Matchless, 400 feet long, planted from two-inch pots in June, were equal to those shown by the originators in the New York show the year previous to its introduction.

7.30 P. M., President Barr rapped the meeting to order. The Dahlia Show committee reported. The Visiting committee reported arrangements for a trip to Lititz next month. A short talk on Chrysanthemums and on the psychology of plant growing was made by B. F. Barr. Harry K. Rohrer gave a list of varieties for early, midseason and late that they had found valuable. Rudolph Nagle gave his experience with the early varieties and Chas. Tucker gave some of his experience as an amateur grower.

For our show next fall it was decided to send out a list of varieties suitable for exhibition purposes and let every member check up which he would volunteer to grow so as to get a good variety and not too much duplication. This line of action is made necessary by the fact that there are only a few members who grow chrysanthemums and yet all want a part in the preparation for this show.

F. Spihner exhibited a fine vase of Roman Gold, H. D. Robrer single blooms of Wm. Turner, Dolly Dimple and Nakota and B. F. Barr staged Wm. Turner, America, Harvard, Thanksgiving Queen, Patti and Rosette, all first flowers.

For the December meeting there will be an oyster supper and a general social time in the Brennan building with prizes for the bowling, billiards and pool and a doctor to look after the man who eats the most oysters, "Dutch treat," $1.25 per head. We hope to have some of our out-of-town friends with us for this occasion.

PARK INSTITUTE OF NEW ENGLAND.

A meeting of the Park Institute of New England was held in the City Hall, Lowell, Mass., November 18th. There were thirty Park Superintendents and Park Commissioners present and it proved to be one of the most interesting meetings that have been held. The speakers were Chairman John Dillon, of the Boston Park Commission, who spoke along the lines of the uses of parks and playgrounds; James McCaffrey, Supt. of Recreations, Providence, R. I., on "The Laying Out and Equipment of Playgrounds," after which there was a discussion by those present and Mr. James B. Shea, who read a very interesting paper on "Greater Uses of Our Parks and Playgrounds."

The meeting was followed by a visit to Fort Hill Park, Shedd Playgrounds, the South Common, and the Casino, where the Board of Trade was conducting an exhibition of "Things Made in Lowell." At six o'clock all assembled at the hotel and partook of a fine dinner provided by the Board of Trade. Following dinner G. A. Parker, of Hartford, Conn., Dean of the Park Superintendents, gave a talk which was greatly appreciated.

ST. LOUIS FLORIST CLUB.

The St. Louis Florist Club held a very interesting meeting November 18 at the Missouri Botanical Garden. When President Bourdet called the meeting to order eighty-five members were present. The Spring Flower Show committees read their report advising a spring show but not before the spring of 1917, as the Carnation Society Meeting in January, 1916, would take the edge off a show of this kind. The Carnation Society committee reported through its general chairman, J. F. Ammann. J. F. Ammann, F. Fillmore and E. W. Guy were appointed to draw up resolutions on the deaths of W. C. Young and E. G. Eggeling. Adolph Janeicke and J. F. Ammann gave glowing reports of the Chicago and Cleveland Flower shows also other members who visited the shows. The sum of $100 was subscribed to the National Convention Committee. After adournment the members visited the big conservatory in the Garden. Secretary Beneke announced that the next meeting would be held in the regular meeting hall Thursday, December 9th.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The Southampton (N. Y.) Horticultural Society held its regular meeting on Nov. 18th. J. Johnson, superintendent of the G. Warrington Curtis estate, read an interesting and instructing essay on that all-important subject, "Lime;" he dealt with it in a detailed and comprehensive manner. There was an animated discussion, where points of the utmost importance were brought to light. The next meeting will be held on Dec. 2, in Odd Fellows Hall.

S. R. CHANDLER.

The Horticultural Society of Western Pennsylvania has been organized to meet semi-monthly in the East Liberty Branch of Carnegie Library, Pittsburgh. The officers are as follows: David Fraser, president; William Allen, vice-president; Thomas E. Tyler, secretary, and William Thompson, treasurer. With the addition of William Thompson, Sr., they also form a committee to draft by-laws at a meeting in the near future. While the society has been founded principally by private gardeners, all interested in horticulture are invited to become members. A feature of the work will be the giving of autumn and spring flower shows.

The Medford (Mass.) Horticultural Society is planning a course of practical lectures on horticultural subjects during the winter months. Already two have been given. F. E. Palmer of Brookline gave a talk on house plants, in October, which has been the means of solving many problems for the window gardener. On Nov. 18 Eric Wetterlow of the North Shore Horticultural Society gave a very instructive address on "The Children's Gardens of Manchester, Mass.," telling how they had aroused the interest of the town officials in their behalf.

The society feels very much indebted to these gentlemen for the information and entertainment imparted.

The Exhibitions

HARTFORD.

The Chrysanthemum Show of the Connecticut Horticultural Society held at the old City Hall, Hartford, on Friday, Nov. 12th, was a gratifying success. The hallway and stairway were adorned with palms and chrysanthemums and a very attractive exhibit of anemone-flowered seedlings. The south side of the lobby was beautifully decorated by the Park Department. The private gardeners and growers brought the best they had and the show was the best ever given by the society. It is conservatively estimated that some 10,000 visitors viewed the exhibition. No premiums were offered but certificates were given to John F. Huss for specimen chrysanthemum plants; Alfred Cebelius, for specimen chrysanthemum plant and for Ophelia, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Mrs. Charles Russell, Hadley and Radiance roses; Fred Boss for cut blooms and pot plants; A. N. Pierson, Inc., for palms and for cut roses; Geo. H. Hale, gard. for W. E. Sessions of Bristol, for seedlings of anemone flowered chrysanthemums; Warren S. Mason, supt. of the A. A. Pope estate, Farmington, and Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., for general displays. The staging was under the direction of G. H. Hollister, supt. of Keney Park. Edward A. Brassill, manager for W. W. Hunt & Co., was chairman of the committee in charge of the exhibition.

EVERYTHING FOR THE WATER GARDEN.

WM. TRICKER, Arlington, N. J.

ARDISIA.

Ardiasias may be propagated in two ways—by seeds and by cuttings. Seeds may be sown at any time, for it is continually flowering and fruiting and the berries last a long time. If it is desirable to grow them on for eighteen months, which gives an excellent size plant for Christmas sale, the seeds should be planted in the spring. As soon as large enough they are pricked out into small pots and shifted as necessary.

Better plants, however, are grown from cuttings, because the plant will branch nearer the base and so give a more shapely specimen and, moreover, a saleable plant can be gotten in a shorter time. A plant is usually not saleable after three years of age and such are the ones generally used for stock. Plants may be obtained from these by girdling the tops and wrapping moss around the wound. In about six weeks the moss will be well filled with roots and the layers may then be severed from the stocks and potted up. Place them in a propagating frame until they have taken hold of the soil well.

The old stock will now answer fine for taking cuttings from. Place them in a close, warm atmosphere at 65 degrees and they will readily break. The half matured young shoots that will result make the best of cuttings. Place the cuttings in a bench with both a bottom heat and air temperature of 70 degrees. In about a month they will have rooted, when they should be potted up and shifted as necessary. The best soil is one of loam, peat and sand in equal parts. For later shifts, one-fourth part of decomposed manure may be added to good advantage.

When the plants begin flowering, give them more air and stop syringing until after the fruits have set. For the best development, they should always be kept near the glass. In the summer, it is well to shade the house on sunny days with cheese cloth or slat shutters. When the berries are well developed—about the first of October—they should be given plenty of sunshine, and they will also do with less heat, say 50 to 55 degrees. To help the berries and leaves to a color, soot water may be applied occasionally. Never allow the plants to become pot-bound, for unsightly, "leggy" plants are liable to result. Occasionally turn the plants to get a symmetrical form. In propagating from seeds, use care in selecting the plants from which the seeds are to be taken. There is some variation in size and productiveness of fruit, and only the most productive and best colored plants should be selected.

There is also a white-berried variety—A. japonica—but this is not as popular a pot plant.

AN AQUATIC POOL.

Our cover illustration shows one of the prettiest exhibits made at the Cleveland Flower Show, and certainly one which attracted much attention and admiration from the visiting public. Mr. Tricker says that the same beautiful scene can be reproduced at any time during the winter. Such a feature would be a prime addition to any park or private conservatory or sun parlor. The cut nymphaea flowers travel well and keep a long time, as was well demonstrated at Cleveland. The most of those exhibited were shipped from New Jersey on Monday, Nov. 8, some of the blooms having been cut on Friday previous and all were still good on Friday the 12th.

BRITISH HORTICULTURE.

New Chrysanthemums.

At a meeting of the Floral Committee of the National Chrysanthemum Society on Oct. 25th, a batch of novelties was exhibited for awards. These were made as follows: Bertha Fairs, a single, Mensa type, golden fawn florets suffused with ruby red; Norman Davis, Framfield, Sussex, first class certificate. Champagne, red crimson, early flowering, classed with Source d'Or, Wells & Co., Merstham, Surrey, card of commendation. Charlotte E. Soer, large flowered Jap, canary yellow, shaded at the tips with bronze, first class certificate; Sir Edward Letchworth, large incurved Jap, broad deep pink florets, silvery reverse, Martin Silsbury, Shanklin, Isle of Wight, first class certificate. Master A. Ewen, golden bronze single, W. Newton, Potters Bar, card of commendation. Miranda, terra cotta, single sport from Portia, Cragg, Harrison & Cragg, Heston, Middlesex, first class certificate. Mrs. Harold Phillips, mauve pink single, Godfrey & Son, Exmouth, Devon, card of commendation. Norman Pearson, chestnut crimson, single, Mensa type, G. Mileham, Leatherhead, Surrey, first class certificate. Phyllis Cooper, golden yellow single, P. Ladds, Swanley, Kent, first class certificate. Tom Wren, pure white single, Thos. Stevenson, Addlestone, Surrey, card of commendation.

The Society is holding a show at the Royal Horticultural Society's Hall, on the 11th and 12th of Nov., instead of at the Crystal Palace—now used for naval purposes—as in former years.

W. H. ADSETT.

MILDEW ON OUTDOOR ROSES.

To the Editor of HORTICULTURE:

Dear Sir:—The request of M. H. S., Walla Walla, Wash., for a formula to overcome mildew on outdoor roses impels me to send you the recipe for a remedy that I use with unfailing success.

Liner of sulphur..... $\frac{1}{4}$ oz.
Fel's Naphtha soap or Ivory soap. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz.
Water 1 gallon

Dissolve the liner of sulphur in cold water and the soap by the aid of leach; when thoroughly dissolved mix. The plants must be sprayed early in the morning to prevent scalding—never late in the day. I am convinced that more mildew is developed on roses by wetting the foliage late in the day than from any other cause. I never have mildew on my roses unless we have much rain at night and always spray with the above mixture as soon as possible after a rainy night. In sections where mildew is prevalent I would suggest spraying before it appears. Roses should always be watered early in the morning.

Yours very truly,

ROBERT HUEY.

Philadelphia, Nov. 13, 1915.

SOME CHOICE GARDEN SUBJECTS.

GORDONIA ALTAMAHA. Flowers are still opening on this beautiful southern tree. They first appear in September and open in succession for fully six weeks. Gordonia is related to the Camellia, and the pure white flowers which vary from three to three and a half inches in diameter, although more cup-shaped, resemble single Camellia flowers. This small tree was discovered in 1765 near Fort Barrington on the Altamaha River; it has entirely disappeared, however, as a wild plant, and it has only been preserved by the specimens cultivated chiefly in the neighborhood of Philadelphia where it was sent by its discoverers. In these sheltered positions the plants are doing well here and have not suffered at all in recent severe winters. This Gordonia, however, grows more rapidly and to a larger size in the middle states and there are many good specimens in Pennsylvania gardens.

ABELIA GRANDIFLORA resembles in shape the flowers of some of the Honeysuckles; they are white faintly tinged with rose color, and their delicate beauty is set off by the small, dark green and lustrous leaves. Abelia grandiflora is a slender shrub with arching stems from three to four feet high and is thought to be a hybrid between two Chinese species. Until the introduction by the Arboretum of some of the species of this genus from western China it was believed to be the hardiest of the Abelias. In the Arboretum it suffers in severe winters but in sheltered positions it flowers well every year and the flowers continue to open during nearly two months. This Abelia has become an exceedingly popular plant in the gardens of the southern states and is cultivated with more or less success as far north as New York.

(W. A. Manda regards Abelia rupestris as the hardiest species, this being entirely reliable at South Orange, N. J.—Ed.)

THE CHINESE BUDDLEIAS. Buddleia Davidii or, to use its more common name, B. variabilis. Has one-sided, pointed, many-flowered clusters which curve downward from arching stems and are thickly covered with small, blue-purple, fragrant flowers. In some of the forms of this plant are found perhaps the most beautiful of all summer and autumn flowering shrubs, and although only recently brought to the United States and Europe by Wilson they are already largely planted in this country where they have received the name of Summer Lilacs. Here at the north Buddleia Davidii is not perfectly hardy, and the stems are killed to the ground by cold, but new stems spring up and as the flower-clusters are produced at the ends of branches of the year this severe pruning improves the flowers. Few plants in their season are better suited to supply cut flowers, and for this purpose as well as for garden decoration this Buddleia in its various forms has proved one of the most useful shrubs of recent discovery.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

Beans Kiting

The very great scarcity of certain standard seed stocks is just now beginning to be realized by the trade. The shortage of beans has no doubt been more or less understood but when we hear of certain wax-pod varieties selling at $14 and $15 per bushel, it is something of a shock even to those who had some fair idea of how scarce the wax-varieties were. Even the green-pod sorts, excepting possibly the Black Valentines, have reached new high levels in price, and what is more, there are no indications that any stocks are being held in reserve for higher figures. The scarcity is unqualifiedly genuine.

Vine Seed Shortages

Vine seeds, squashes, cucumbers, musk and watermelons are short, as previously indicated in these columns, but a very large number of items have been returned as crop failures, where it was expected that some small percentages at least would be delivered. It is stated that summer crook-neck squash is a practical failure this year and whatever seed is for sale must be of last year's growth. Fortunately this does not detract from the value of the seed, however, as it might with certain other items. Several varieties of musk and watermelons are reported practical failures and some cucumbers are also extremely short although the standard popular varieties will be procurable at 20 or 25 per cent. advance over last year's prices.

The Sweet Corn Situation

We had supposed that by this date the situation on sweet corn seed would have been cleared up but inquiry develops the fact that nearly all varieties are more or less short, while some of the later sorts will prove decidedly so. It is learned that one or two very sharp frosts within the past six weeks have probably damaged the vitality of a large percentage of the late varieties, and when the seed is dried it may be practically worthless for seed purposes. Until the corn is cured and suitable for testing as to vitality, it will be impossible to state how serious this feature will be. Country Gentleman is said to be especially short, and several of the larger dealers will not quote it at the present time at any figure. Stowell's Evergreen is offered rather sparingly.

Canners' Convention.

We assume that those seedsmen and seed growers who usually attend the canners' conventions have secured reservations at the hotels for the period of the next canners' convention which is to be held in Louisville, Ky. As we understand it, this convention opens the second week in February. We recently were informed that nearly all of the hotels, in fact, all the leading ones—are booked to capacity and late comers will have to be content with quarters in rooming houses.

Notes.

Nashville, Tenn.—A retail seed store has been opened in Market square by the Cumberland Seed Co.

Chicago—The retail seed stores now have a change almost as great as going into another business.

With the cold wave the bulbs and shrubbery drop out of sight and holiday attractions are filling the counters.

Wichita, Kan.—The Marlow Seed Co., 119 West Douglas avenue, are building an addition to their present quarters.

The value of horticultural imports at the Port of New York for the week ending Nov. 13 is given as follows: Clover seed, $31,915; grass seed, $31,572; sugar beet seed, $35,778; trees, bulbs and plants, $87,314.

Our readers are all more or less interested in the condition of Mr. W. Atlee Burpee; we are sorry to report that the latest information is that he is no better, and those near him are said to be deeply worried, but they have not abandoned hope of his ultimate recovery. Like his many friends we earnestly hope that he may be spared for many years of usefulness yet.

San Francisco—The Bay Counties Seed Company is a new concern recently organized here to engage in the seed, bulb and plant business. John H. W. Field is head of the firm, and associated with him is Milton Tonini, who was formerly connected with C. C. Morse & Co. Tonini will have charge of the business. Quarters have been secured at 404 Market street, where a comprehensive stock has been assembled. It is understood that the new concern contemplates working gradually into the cut-flower business.

NEWS NOTES.

Austin, Tex.—Fred H. Hall has been made a member of the Hyde Park Floral Co.

Fargo, N. D.—The Smedley Company opened their newly refurbished salesroom at 69 Broadway last week.

Claremont, N. H.—The Claremont Floral Shop, which was in charge of Mrs. Allen, has discontinued business.

Boston—A priest in Waltham has joined the chorus against the waste of money for flowers at funerals. He is said to have emphatically scored this so-called useless expenditure and declared strongly that the money might better be spent for other things.

St. Louis—The 26th annual banquet given to florists, gardeners and nurserymen by the Missouri Botanical Garden took place at Liederkranz Club Hall, Friday night, Nov. 19. Some 250 were present, including about 25 members of the Florist Club. The feature of the evening was the illustrated lecture on Bulb Culture in Holland, by J. K. M. L. Farquhar of Boston, which will long be remembered by those present. Dr. G. T. Moore was toastmaster.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

CHICAGO.

W. W. Barnard, who was taken violently ill with ptomaine poisoning a week ago, is now at the Presbyterian Hospital, where he is reported as improving slowly.

The failure of Manusos Bros., who have operated a flower store at S. State and Van Buren streets for some years, leaves several of the wholesalers in the lurch. Considerable talk on the inefficiency of the present bankrupt laws is heard in the market.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is rapidly getting settled in its new quarters and with the rush of Thanksgiving trade it takes a general to keep all moving smoothly. But Paul Klingsporn never misses an order and this firm's shipping trade is rapidly increasing.

J. A. Budlong is getting settled in the new Le Moyne Bldg. as fast as possible considering this firm is one of the oldest and heaviest shipping houses in Chicago. Phil Schupp will have a fine light office when completed and the packing room is especially convenient, opening as it does on Lake street.

Handsome folders are being distributed among the patrons of Schiller the Florist, announcing the opening of their new loop store known as the Gift Shop. The new store located at 36 S. Wabash avenue, has been rearranged in an attractive and artistic manner and passersby can now look at two particularly neat retail flower stores in one block, for the Gift Shop and Geo. Wienhoeber's are opposite, and competition in novel window displays is keen.

The last of the chrysanthemum plants are being used up for Thanksgiving trade. The season has not been a prolonged one, the plants seemingly all coming into bloom at the same time and finishing up the same way. The price has accordingly averaged the growers less this year than in a longer season but they will have the benches for other stock. For high class stock cyclamen is the chief offering for the week, salmon shades leading because they hold color better than others. The standard Glory of Wansbek (salmon) is still grown in quantity and is hard to beat, though some of similar color are offered with larger flowers. The novel orchid-flowering types are greatly in demand for the most expensive offerings, though they do not make so large a plant nor produce so many blossoms but their graceful form and delicate coloring make them very popular for high-class stock. The rococo strains are not so well liked in this market. The begonias are the companion plants of the cyclamen and the windows are displaying many of them, Cincinnati having a decided lead over Gloire d'Lorraine. For cheaper plants Primula obconica are used. A few poinsettias are showing brilliant color but the bracts are not so well developed as they will be later.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mrs. George W. Hess, wife of the superintendent of the United States Botanical Gardens, has been seriously ill for the past two weeks suffering from an attack of congestion of the lungs.

The British Foreign Office has granted permits for the movement from Rotterdam of 56 pounds of alyssum seed for H. A. Dreer, Inc., Phila., and 300,000 lily of the valley roots for Walter P. Stokes, Moorestown, N. J. A number of other Philadelphia and New York concerns have filed applications to secure permits to remove horticultural goods which were bought and paid for prior to March 1, which are still in Rotterdam. According to Fred H. Kramer and William F. Gude, both large importers of foreign horticultural products, no trouble is being experienced, other than the usual delays incident to slow transportation and increased freight rates, in obtaining the regular supplies of such goods. Many of them have received a majority of their consignments from both Belgium and Holland in fine condition. Both of the florists named have been getting in stock right along. Although the present season's business is being taken care of as above stated some little concern is present as to what will happen next year. Salesmen representing foreign growers now in the United States intimate that there will be a great shortage of production if the war continues as the armies are making the labor question a very serious one. One concern offered an order for 150,000 paper white narcissi agreed to furnish about one-third of that amount stating that it was impossible to get enough workmen to take care of all of the business that would be offered.

Cattleya bulbs which have already flowered and produced leaves are admissible as imports free of duty as bulbs for propagating purposes, according to a decision of the United States Court of Customs Appeals. An importation consigned to Maltus & Ware, reported by the appraiser of customs at New York to be orchid plants, was assessed at 25 per cent. ad valorem as orchids. The importers protested that the goods were not orchids, but that they were mature mother bulbs, imported exclusively for propagating purposes. This protest was overruled by the Board of United States General Appraisers and the case carried to the Court of Customs Appeals. It was shown by the evidence that while strictly speaking the merchandise in question was not what is botanically known as "bulbs" yet the method of propagating was such as to bring it commercially within that meaning. The court did not decide whether cattleya bulbs which have not yet flowered are entitled to free entry under the proviso to paragraph 210.

PITTSBURGH.

William M. Turner, florist of Wilkinsburg, is having a two weeks' hunting trip in Cameron County.

Richard Harris, superintendent of Mrs. Martha J. Armstrong's estate, has been serving on a ten days' jury service.

George L. Huscroft, the Steubenville, Ohio, retailer, has the sympathy of his many friends hereabouts in the death of his father.

F. M. Smith, formerly an attache of Hennone's, Beaver Falls, Pa., is an addition to the sales force of the G. P. Weaklin Co., East End.

Miss Laura Beckert, formerly in the sales department of the A. W. Smith Company entered the employ of Randolph & McClements last Monday.

J. Gerry Curtis, who has charge of and has been living on the George Westinghouse estate, "Solitude," Homewood, is again around after a four weeks' attack of pneumonia in the West Penn Hospital.

During the absence of the Alexander R. Peacocks in New York this year, Henry B. Keiller, head gardener at their estate, is selling cut blooms, and pot plants, both wholesale and retail.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius W. Ludwig celebrated their joint birthday anniversary last Sunday with a family reunion at their home on Merritt street, North Side. Mrs. Ludwig was 57, and Mr. Ludwig 61 years of age.

The Chamber of Commerce of the North Side has just appointed E. C. Ludwig the chairman of a committee to further the advancement of the first municipal Christmas tree to be placed in City Hall Park.

Thomas E. Tyler has been supervising the planting of twenty thousand bulbs on the grounds of Charles D. Armstrong, although, as usual, devoting his direct personal attention to the large range of orchid houses.

The Gardeners' Club of Allegheny County was entertained on Nov. 19th at the Pittsburgh Golf Club by Mr. and Mrs. Finley Hall Lloyd. The annual meeting was held on Friday, Nov. 19, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Mellon.

H. C. Frick, who closed the conservatory on his Homeward estate, last spring, has decided to reopen it. David Fraser, who has been in charge for the past nineteen years, will continue the supervision of the flowers and bedding stock for the Frick Park, of Homestead.

J. F. Zimmerman, who has an independent landscape and floral business on the old Carr estate, Point Breeze, has erected a 12 by 4 addition to his greenhouse. Mr. Zimmerman continues in charge of these grounds, where he was the head gardener years before the death of the owner.

Frank Wagner is anticipating the addition of a flower shop to his plant in Aspinwall. Mr. Wagner recently purchased the Aspinwall holdings of the John Bader Company of which he has for sometime been the manager. There are eight complete houses, where the sales and decorative work are now carried on.

Christmas stock is coming on freely from Belgium, although in most cases most disappointing in condition. One firm a few days ago lost 75 per cent. of a large consignment of azaleas, supposedly attributable to excessive heat on board ship. Others have lost in smaller quantities, although it seems all are covered by insurance in Lloyd's agency.

PHILADELPHIA.

George Anderson is able to be wheeled around his greenhouses now and can talk a little better. Improving slowly.

Who might brother Kift be fainting at when he breaks into HORTICULTURE's boxing ring when he has a boxing ring of his own. And didn't he say all that at the meeting? A thing is never settled until it's settled right, especially if it's settled by a minority by underhand work. In a democracy the few should not get benefits at the expense of the many. Such a thing is inartistic, unethical and immoral. In its final analysis its effect is to burst the eighth commandment. What did we fight and bleed and die for in 1776? "Give us liberty or give us death."

SAN FRANCISCO NOTES.

The United Flower & Supply Company, which markets the chrysanthemums grown by the Japanese in this vicinity, reports heavy damage from the frosts of last week which practically winds up the season for them.

Elaborate preparations have been made by the Menlo Park Horticultural Society for its annual banquet this Friday evening, at which John Daly will act as toastmaster. A feature of the meeting will be the awarding of prizes to members who have made the best exhibits during the year.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON We are writing this report on the day before Thanksgiving and can only judge by appearances as to the final outcome of the trade for the holiday. But one certainty is that the chrysanthemums—general run—are badly "up against it" and are sure to be sacrificed in quantities. This does not include the pompons, however, as the finer varieties in this class are selling splendidly. If it were not for the depressing accumulation of unsold chrysanthemums that encumber the wholesale markets we think there would be a fine clean-up. Carnations are holding over badly but only because of the chrysanthemums, and even of these the bright red ones are enjoying a satisfactory call. Roses as a general proposition are moving all right. Violets show some accumulation but at the moderate figure asked they should clean up pretty well. All other market staples are in normal condition of supply and demand, except cattleyas which are very few but are not in sufficient demand to warrant any phenomenal values. All of a sudden, stevia is received in quantity. Lilies are quite abundant.

The change for colder BUFFALO weather has helped conditions somewhat although the market has seen plenty of stock the past week. Roses are shortened up and sales are better. Carnations have been very plentiful and prices low. Chrysanthemums are in good supply especially pompons and these have had fair sales. Violets have had no special demand and lily of the valley had no life. Lilies are of only ordinary quality. Beauties have a better demand than week previous.

Following the flower CHICAGO show, local sales were reported by most wholesalers as very good and the week of Thanksgiving opens with orders for that holiday coming in. Local florists are placing orders more freely than usual, not caring to take a chance on getting stock at the last hour, but the shipping trade seems likely to be of the telegraph or last minute kind, for, up to Monday evening, books generally showed few orders. Stock is of fine quality and the display of the late chrysanthemums seen in all the large stores shows that flower still in large supply. The Eatons are especially good. Pompons are about all out and this week will close them out. American Beauties are in fair supply the stock of long ones running much less than in the medium lengths. Roses are not exceeding the demand for them and good sized cuts come in each day. Sweet peas are good, the Spencers comprising nearly all of the stock. Lilies, violets, lily of the valley and gardenias are all in good supply and of fine quality. The Ilex berries are seen in many of the stores.

Nothing new to be reported in this market NEW YORK—which means that the oversupply of flowers and under-supply of business which has characterized the situation for the past several weeks continues unchanged. A good Thanksgiving Day trade is looked for, but what it will bring forth in the way of better encouragement is not yet apparent at this writing; that it can clean up the product in sight is too much to hope for. Chrysanthemums are everywhere, with no staid prices on any variety or class. Roses are moving somewhat better. Carnations are plentiful. There are practically no cattleyas and gardenias are very few. Lily of the valley is nicely balanced and American Beauty roses are doing very well. Lilies are very slow and violets are floundering at the very bottom of the list. The football games have had no appreciable influence on either chrysanthemums or violets.

Since our last on PHILADELPHIA November 17th to the present minute November 22nd, there is a continuing stimulus in the business situation and no one can complain either from the producing or consuming standpoint. The commission men are working their end most assiduously and are withheld from advancing prices only by the fear that they may go too far. On the other hand they are worried for fear that they may not be asking enough. For instance, they think they have done well to get a dollar for cattleyas but inside of an hour comes a telephone from—from—well never mind—that they are getting a dollar and a quarter. So it's "fierce" if you are too high and it's equally fierce if you are too low. You are between the trenches and the iron works unless you can strike the happy medium. However, everything is going well and while prices on the whole are moderate we feel sure of a good Thanksgiving week. HORTICULTURE ought to be a daily instead of a weekly. Who can tell what a week will bring forth?

Flowers of practical PITTSBURGH all kinds are now in abundance, as the rapidly increasing number of street-boy vendors bears evidence. There are lots of carnations and roses of all kinds, American Beauties have not been moving along as rapidly as could be desired. Other varieties, however, have been going splendidly at moderate prices. Just what effect the present splendid crispy cold snap will have, remains to be seen, although both wholesalers and retailers are optimistic. Society work is "picking up," as it were, and funeral work, from the civic point of view, is all too plentiful. Outside of a holiday, last Saturday saw the best business in a long time.

everything seemingly undergoing a general stimulation.

Trade has been about all that could be expected during the past week. Cut flowers moved fairly well considering the approach of the Thanksgiving festivities, which like other similar occasions usually has a depressing effect upon the sale of flowers just before and after the holiday. Regarding the stock offered on the market, the principal feature is the great reduction in the supply of chrysanthemums as the result of two sharp frosts last week. In some of the growing sections the entire late crop, even to the buds, was caught, but other growers were more fortunate and will be able to bring in a good many more blooms. There are plenty magnificent greenhouse varieties for show purposes and select trade, but the reduced supply of outdoor stock has stiffened up values somewhat. From all reports this has been a very satisfactory season for chrysanthemums. The average quality has been excellent, the supply large, the demand good and prices fairly firm. Chinese pompons are still appearing in considerable quantity and maintain their popularity well. A fine cut of roses is now appearing, the quality showing improvement from day to day. All varieties are in ample supply with the exception of Cecile Brunner, more of which could be used nicely. Carnations are well up to standard now. The supply of violets finds an easy outlet. The local demand takes large quantities and an active shipping movement cleans up the surplus closely. The demand for lily of the valley has kept the supply down and there has been no surplus. The market is well supplied with orchids and gardenias are a little more plentiful.

The market opened brisk the last week and stock of all kinds moved lively for a while. Chrysanthemums are at their height and the market has been glutted with them all week. Prices have not been high on medium quality but fancy stock has brought good figures. Roses, too, have been so plentiful that they went begging at almost any price, quality, though, of the best. Carnations are too many also and often big lots went to waste. Thanksgiving week is looked upon as a busy one and flowers other than chrysanthemums will have a look in this week; so look for a better report next time.

WASHINGTON Business last week showed a general improvement in all lines. Severe frosts have finally killed off the outdoor stock but the market is still flooded with small chrysanthemums of very good quality which tend to keep down the prices of roses and carnations to or below normal for this time of the year. Good roses are still selling at below $5 per hundred. Carnations are bringing from $1 to $3. Chrysanthemums are to be had at almost any price the buyer wishes to pay for them. Cattleyas are very scarce and the price has gone to $7.50 per dozen. Gardenias are to be had but in too small quantities to warrant a quotation.

New York—Wm. Hanft is ill at the Presbyterian Hospital in this city.

A. Herrington has been appointed manager of the exhibition arrangement at the Grand Central Palace for next spring's flower show.

A PROSPEROUS CLEVELAND ESTABLISHMENT

During the time of the Cleveland Flower Show, a good many of the visitors took occasion to visit the extensive greenhouses of the Gasser Company at Rocky River. This is the largest range of glass in the Cleveland section, covering approximately ten acres, we were told. Much space is devoted to roses where practically all the present commercial favorites, with the exception of American Beauty, are grown, and grown well. Mrs. Shawyer is here very fine. A pale sport from Melody is so nearly identical with the old Perle des Jardins that it cannot be told apart. Of carnations there are 35,000 grown and all the favorite sorts are grown in a vast range of ridge and furrow construction. Just at present, chrysanthemums hold the centre of interest. The best liked include the three Chadwicks—Supreme, White and Yellow; Chieftain and Bonaffon, and there are lots of pompons among which Western Beauty, a lovely deep pink, Golden Quinola, White Helen Newberry, Baby and Mrs. Frank Beu (Frank Wilcox) are particularly liked. Adiantum California, Dreer's specialty, is doing magnificently here and with its splendid fronds 2 feet in length bids fair to supplant all the other varieties of A. cuneatum. There is no end of other material grown here for the requirements of the Cleveland flower trade. Callas, poinsettias, Euphorbia jacquinaeflora, cypripediums, lily of the valley, stevia, mignonette, calendulas, sweet peas, antirrhinums, freesia, gardenias—these are only a portion of the promiscuous stock which finds a place in this up-to-date place, which is under the efficient management of F. C. Bartels. An interesting feature is the heating outfit, which is supplied from three gas wells right on the place. These wells have a capacity of 15,000-600 feet of gas per day. The pressure at the wells is 98 pounds to the square foot and this is reduced by various devices to a pressure of but 16 oz. to the square foot before the gas reaches the boilers. Even with the big cost of installation this is a very economical heating arrangement as compared with the cost of coal, which in Cleveland is far below what growers in most sections of the country have to pay. But it has its disadvantages, the greatest of which is the uncertainty of the duration of the supply, as the wells may run out at any time.

PERSONAL

We had the pleasure of meeting again an old-time celebrity at the Cleveland Flower Show A. T. Simmons, of Geneva, O. With Hallock, Son & Thorpe, and later under his own name at Geneva, Mr. Simmons "did things" which meant much for the florist of those days and even of the present time. S. A. Nutt geranium, unbeaten in its class today, was raised by him and he has to his credit such carnations as Portia, Tidal Wave, Silver Spray and Ferdinand Mangold—surely a record to be proud of. The years have dealt very kindly with Mr. Simmons; he has changed but little with the passing of time.

THE PROOF

of a paper's influence as a business promoter for its advertisers is NOT its numerical distribution but the Character, Intelligence and Reliability of its Readers. In this respect HORTICULTURE claims first place among the professional gardening and florist papers of this country. Following are a few selections from many approving letters received during the past few weeks at the office of HORTICULTURE from men who possess all the above qualifications.

HORTICULTURE Publishing Co., Boston, Mass.

Gentlemen:—It may interest you to know that I never really appreciated the value of HORTICULTURE until last week's number failed to show up. Believe me, I made quite a few extra trips to the P. O. without results. I was just in the act of mailing you a letter when I received your notice that another dollar is due, or, to be right, past due, which I did not know. Enclosed please find a dollar and please see that I get last week's issue.

Wishing you unlimited success, I remain, Penna.

C. B.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

Dear Sir—Please find enclosed a check for Two Dollars to pay for your paper beginning June 1st, 1915, for two years. I find HORTICULTURE very interesting and instructive. Wishing you every success in your endeavors to accomplish such an up-to-date paper,
Yours truly,

Mass.

J. W. S.

Gentlemen:—Last week's HORTICULTURE is not received. Have you scratched me off your list, or what is the matter? Appreciate your paper more than any of half a dozen I am receiving, and don't want to miss any copies. Will you please investigate?
Yours truly,

Missouri.

A. B. K.

One of the many good features of HORTICULTURE is, that those who contribute to its columns always "say something" when they write. I take this opportunity to offer sincere congratulations. "May your shadow never grow less."
Sincerely yours,

New York.

P. F.

HORTICULTURE Pub. Co.:

Gentlemen:—We want to express our appreciation of your publication, HORTICULTURE, as we find it brings us very correct information at times which we greatly appreciate.

J. H. A.

Dear Sirs:—Enclosed please find one dollar for another year of the HORTICULTURE. My time is not up yet, but it won't be long. All I can say about your paper is that it is the best of its kind, and I read them all.

R. I.

J. B.

I want to congratulate you on the continued improvement of HORTICULTURE. It is first class in its high-class contributions and other "number one" qualities.
Very truly yours,

Ind.

A. E. K.

AT IT AGAIN.

The New York Sun prints a communication from H. G. Walters, who signs himself President Plant Research Institute, Langhorne, Pa., who states it to be his "intellectual duty in advancing human knowledge to be ahead of the average," and adds "Hence on a peach tree at this writing I have grafts of cedar, lilac, blackberry and five varieties of roses all on one peach tree. I also have two varieties of rambler roses grafted to a privet hedge."

We had just begun to wonder how long our old friend "the Wizard" would allow this new wonder-worker to usurp the stage when, lo, in the columns of the daily newspaper the following appears:

Santa Rose, Cal.—The manufacture of linseed oil may be revolutionized by a new production of Luther Burbank, the plant wizard. He has grown a new white flax with seeds twice the ordinary size and more productive.

Now, will you be good.

OBITUARY.

John Sharkey.

John Sharkey, a teamster employed by George F. Johnson, florist, Elmwood avenue, Providence, R. I., was killed almost instantly Thursday afternoon, Nov. 18, when a horse attached to the wagon he was driving became unmanageable. His companion, John J. Brophy, was removed to the Rhode Island Hospital. Both were employees of Johnson.

Robert Aull.

Robert Aull, former Park Commissioner of St. Louis and well-known throughout the country in park work circles, died on Saturday, November 20th, at St. Luke's Hospital, St. Louis. Mr. Aull was 62 years of age and leaves a wife, son and daughter. Col. Bob as he was familiarly known was a great lover of flowers.

Carl Waldecker.

A visit to Germany some time ago proved fatal to Carl Waldecker, of Braintree, Mass., according to a message received by his brother, Herman, announcing his death from wounds received while doing foraging work on the Russian frontier. The Waldecker brothers were engaged in plant growing and bulb forcing. Last June Carl went to Holland on business, and, while across, visited his mother in Germany. While there, as a German subject, he was pressed into service for the war, and wounded September 27, according to the message.

Augustus E. Scott.

Augustus Elwin Scott, lawyer and instructor, eminent for his botanical researches, died in Lexington, Mass., on November 19, aged 77 years. Mr. Scott organized the Lexington Field and Garden Club, for village improvement, the first organization of its kind in Massachusetts. He was also an authority on the flora of eastern Massachusetts and the higher altitudes, having made the growths on the Appalachian and White Mountains the subject of special study. He contributed many essays to "Appalachia" on horticultural subjects.

He was a member of the Lexington Board of Park Commissioners, and worked for parks and playgrounds for the younger people. Last spring he gave to the town a plot of more than 30 acres as a site for a park.

PUBLICATION RECEIVED.

Landscape Gardening as Applied to Home Decoration. By Samuel T. Maynard, formerly Professor of Botany and Horticulture at the Massachusetts Agricultural College. This is the second edition of this charming and useful book, originally dedicated "to the thousands of home-makers who are trying to beautify their homes" and which now comes to us after the lapse of fifteen years in a new dress, greatly enlarged and improved in keeping with the advancement which has been made in the numbers and character of the garden material available and the knowledge of their culture.

For the vast majority of garden lovers, unable to employ professional landscape gardening assistance, this book is especially a treasury of information and encouragement in which all the operations contributing to a well-planned, intelligently planted and properly cared-for garden, large or small, are explained in a thoroughly practical manner, in addition to much valuable advice as to location of buildings, architecture, walks and drives, country roads and roadside improvement, schoolyards and parks, etc. The book contains 396 pages and many fine plates. It is published by John Wiley & Sons, Inc., New York and London. Price $1.50 net. Copies can be supplied from the office of HORTICULTURE.

The issue of The Garden, London, for October 23, is devoted especially to the Rose. There are some very interesting articles and beautiful illustrations, including one of the popular Hadley. In the notes accompanying the latter the writer has curiously failed to state that Hadley is an American production and the drift of the lines is such that the uninformed reader would be apt to infer that it was a foreign variety which had been popularized as a forcing rose in America. This we are sure was not intended. A beautiful colored plate of the new crimson single rose Princess Mary is given with this issue of The Garden.

We have received a circular from the Russian-American Chamber of Commerce in Moscow, giving a brief idea of the purposes of the organization which is primarily to promote trade and establish close business relations between Russia and America. The special problem at the present time is to re-establish the exchange of commodities which has been hindered by the European war.

"Orchard Success"

is a small pamphlet of big ideas that you should send for at once. It tells how thoroughly, quickly and cheaply you can rid your orchard of all scale, larvae, eggs and fungi. It describes "scalecide the one great dormant spray," which mixed 1 to 15, is guaranteed to kill every scale it reaches. One barrel equals three barrels of lime sulphur and there is no spray more simple, safe or effective.

Our Free Service Department is for your special benefit. Question us about any orchard and garden sprays and tools. Our lifetime experience is yours for the asking. Write TODAY.

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

Smith's New Greenhouse at Bound Brook, N. J.

ONE of the interesting things about our commercial business this year, is that so much of it has been right around within thirty miles or so of our factory, here in New Jersey.

As a result, every one of these growers, have saved a good bit in the freight on materials and fares of workmen, that other concerns would have to send a greater distance.

For near-by jobs, we can in most cases, deliver the entire material by motor truck; overcoming the vexatious delays in shipping materials by freight and having it take longer than if it were going way out to the Pacific Coast.

The short distance from the factory, often makes it possible for our President, Mr. Sefton, to run out to the job in his car once in a while and see how things are going on. As a result, these men are getting just one of the finest jobs possible to be turned out; and at a decidedly worth while price.

This job of Chas. Smith's at Bound Brook, N. J., is now all done and planted. Drop around and see it. Find out what they think about Hitchings way of doing things. But before you go, let us send you a list of names of nearby houses, so you can get several growers' points of view, and compare the work on all the houses. You will then see that all the houses show that same careful attention to every little detail, and have that look of everlasting lastingness. Of course, we go anywhere for business or to talk business.

The columns are double XX Pipe, each supported on four-way-braced cast iron foot bases. Note the strength of the column cap and framing connections. Let us send you a circular on our Reconstructed Construction.

The rafters are NOT spliced at the eaves. Neither are they welded. The rafters and post are in one piece from the first column purlin to the foot base. The bending is done when hot. No part of the post is below ground. The base is cast iron.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Christmas Greens

A few words on this will not go amiss now. Practically everyone in the retail business handles Christmas greens, and with most of us it pays as well as anything we do around the holidays. We will want all such kinds as holly, fresh cut boxwood, laurel wreathing, lycopodium, moss, mistletoe, etc. A deep coldframe can't be beaten for storing greens. Spread some heavy paper or burlap over the bottom to keep the greens clean; the made-up wreaths can be piled up here, also the loose holly and most of the other stock if the weather isn't too severe. Sprinkle lightly, place heavy paper over the top of all followed by the sashes and such protection on the outside as will be necessary to keep out frost.

Azaleas for Christmas

Azaleas left over from last Christmas will come in good now. There is very little difficulty in having such varieties as Deutsche Perle, Hexe, Mme. Petrick or Verveaneana in flower for the holidays. It should be borne in mind that for the last ten days before Christmas it would be a great advantage to the keeping qualities of the flower if they were kept down to a temperature from 50 to 55 degrees at night with a rise of ten degrees during the day and a good amount of fresh air circulating. If these plants do not show color by this date they should be kept in a temperature of 70 degrees at night and sprayed with lukewarm water two or three times a day. Also give them the sunniest bench you have. Azaleas that are now showing the first flowers open can be kept about 60 to 55.

Getting Ready for Christmas

The weather isn't going to get any warmer. There are very few of us who will always do things ahead of time. We should have our holiday plant display on hand and properly staged at least several days before Christmas. Study the advertising pages of HORTICULTURE carefully, mark up your needs and place your order in time. Too often is the ordering of plants for the holiday trade put off too late to either get satisfactory stock or receive it in time. Get ready; advertise; make people come to see your display; and have it ready at least 10 days before the 25th.

Lorraine Begonias

Most sensitive to sudden changes of temperature are begonias of all kinds, those of the Gloire de Lorraine type in particular. They should be as near 60 degrees as possible. Where large specimen plants are grown—say in 6 to 8-inch pots—they should have plenty of room. Raise them up close to the glass on inverted pots and far enough apart to have every one fully exposed to light. Give them air on all possible occasions, but cold currents should not blow over the plants. Avoid dryness at the roots or any excess in the way of watering. Lorraine begonias are very sensitive to any sudden changes of temperature. Never let them dry out, for if this happens—as it frequently does—their beauty will be of brief duration. Any pans or baskets that are to be filled can be done now before the hurly-burly of the Christmas trade is with us. The atmosphere should now be kept rather dry for Lorraine begonias.

Soil for Small Seeds

All soil for small seeds is better for being sterilized as it kills fungus spores or mycelium, insects, weeds, etc. With steam heat it can be done by letting the steam into perforated pipes covered with the soil to the depth of 5 to 6 inches. The temperature for the best results should not be lower than 180 degrees and 212 degrees would be better. This should be maintained for an hour or more. The soil should be covered with canvas, so as to retain the steam as long as possible. Where you have not steam use boiling water, or baking soil will be the next best.

Next Week:—Propagation and Care of Carnations; Palms; Pelargoniums; Sweet Peas; Double Sweet Alyssum.

Dendrobium Falconeri

(See cover illustration.)

I was in the office of HORTICULTURE one morning recently, when Friend Stewart showed me some photographs taken by M. J. Pope the well-known orchid grower to Mrs. Tuttle, Naugatuck, Conn. Among them was one of Dendrobium Falconeri, a magnificent specimen, exceedingly well flowered, one such as is not often seen. It carried me back in memory some fifty years when I first saw this lovely variety. It was a plant sent to Messrs. Low, then at Clapton, from Sir William Marriott Baronet, Down House, Blandford. This plant was carefully packed in a box standing upright and as soon as the cover was removed there it stood in all its glory and I have never seen a Dendrobium more beautiful, the bright crimson purplish tips making a striking contrast to the base of the flower. Falconeri Gigantea has perhaps finer and more substantial looking flowers, but misses the graceful charm of the original type. I have seen perhaps as many Dendrobiums as most people, but none have made so lasting an impression on my mind as good old Falconeri.

Mr. Pope seems to have got the knack of flowering it well. From what I have seen and from what my old friend Boxall who collected thousands, told me, it seems to want keeping very cold during the resting season, and then to be put into sharp heat, when it will flower well; otherwise it goes into growth.

When the time arrives for our next issue Welcome to go to press the National Association of guests Gardeners will be in session in Boston. The gardeners have always held a preferred position in the esteem of the trade and the public of Boston and we take this opportunity to tell them that they will find nothing lacking in the fervency of this regard when they gather here. The greater their numbers the better the Boston fraternity, commercial or otherwise, will be pleased. It is not the time of the year when gardening art, outside of glass houses, has much to present, but hearts do not change with the seasons and whatever the weather may be, we are safe in promising that it will in no wise affect the warmth of Boston's welcome.

Opportunity knocks again

We are now at the threshold of the busiest season of the year for a large proportion of those who read and support HORTICULTURE. It has been a long, and often discouraging period for many since opportunity stopped knocking at the door and the outlook became misty and ominous. But now we are glad to note that a spirit of optimism seems to have been awakened and a willingness to look upon the bright side only, and we all know that this factor of confidence more than half wins the battle. So we start upon the winter campaign with hopeful anticipations and this fact is, in itself, its own best justification. For the man who will now come out into the open and, by liberal yet judicious advertising, let the world know who he is and what he has to offer, there never has been a more promising chance for rapid progress in business than the present situation brings. As a starter let everyone take hold in serious earnest to make the coming Christmas a record breaker in amount and quality of business and a fitting "curtain raiser" for the unprecedented season of prosperity which we sincerely hope is to follow.

W. Atlee Burpee has gone and a chill
In Memoriam has fallen upon the heart of horticulture—not alone in America but far abroad wherever horticulture is known and loved. The news of the passing away of this truly great man will bring deep sorrow and a profound sense of irreparable loss to hundreds—yes, thousands—who, like the writer, will feel grievously the taking away, in the prime of life, of a friend dearly loved and whom the world could so illy spare. With all his magnificent genius, his phenomenal success as a business man, his widely diversified interests, his fine mentality and everything that made him a captain of captains in industrial life, yet that which we shall remember longest and dwell upon with most affectionate memory will be his considerate, generous spirit, his kindly impulses and philanthropy which knew no limits of time, place or condition. His greatest happiness seemed to come from doing something to make others happy. Wherever Burpee went there was sunshine. In contemplating a personality so rare, a life so full of nobility, the lines of Robert Louis Stevenson seem aptly impressive.

"He is not dead—this friend—not dead.
 But in the paths we mortals tread,
 Got some few trifling steps ahead,
 And nearer to the end,
 So that you, too, once past the bend
 Shall meet again as face to face this friend
 You fancy dead.

* * * * * "The while
 You travel forward mile and mile
 He loiters with a backward smile
 Till you can overtake,
 And strains his eyes to search this wake,
 Or, whistling as he sees you thro' the brake,
 Waits on a stile."

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Disbudding.

With the season well advanced now and the roses growing well, it will be necessary to go over the benches at least once a week and take away all the side shoots that may start on the longer grades of roses. We find that Ophelia especially needs attention in this respect and if this work is not attended to when it should be a good deal of energy and strength will go into these side shoots that should be going into the bud proper. While doing this work it is a good idea to keep an eye open for signs of spot or spider and pick the leaves that are affected with the former and burn them. Plants where spider is found should be marked, and then when syringing give these an extra good dose. While disbudding it is also well to look for all the poor buds, if there are any, and take these out, giving the side shoots a chance to come on. As a rule these will come good.

Weeds Under the Benches

It is not always that weeds will start under the benches, but should some seed have dropped under from the hay that was put into the benches before they were filled last summer and started a crop of weeds sticking out into the walks, get after these at once and remove them. They are nearly always a breeding place for red spider, and although we are not sure that these will crawl from the weeds onto the roses we would rather not trust them. It does not take very long to remove these weeds and the houses are much better off for it. The same may be said of weeds in the benches. These should be pulled out as soon as they appear for they too are only a breeding place for insects.

SOME NEPHROLEPIS HISTORY.

Mr. R. C. Benedict,

Brooklyn Botanic Garden.

Dear Sir:—What I write you, I can scarcely call information, yet it may help you. When the old Horticultural Building in Boston, Mass., was erected at corner of Tremont and Bromfield streets, the main floor contained two stores, one occupied by Mr. Southmaid as a fruit and confectionery store, with a nice restaurant in rear, the other by Mr. Washburn as a seed store.

In course of time Mr. Lucius Foster had, first, a window privilege and later had a large part or whole as a florists' store. Mr. Foster had greenhouses at Dorchester. I understood his wife was named Anna, and the fern, named Anna Foster, was a sport in the greenhouses of Mr. Foster. I doubt if the fern can now be traced, as Mr. Foster died years ago.

On page 692 of November 27, HORTICULTURE, is a fern advertisement of H. H. Barrows & Son of Whitman, Mass. The form Barrowsii, I first saw at their place, and I think I understood Mr. Barrows that it sported with him from Bostoniensis.

The Boston form I first saw at North Easton at the greenhouses of the late Frederick L. Ames, and I always supposed that form of it had originated on their premises.

As most of these "suppositions" date back over forty years (I have been in business over fifty-five years) they are somewhat misty.

Respectfully,

FRANK BULLINGTON

Fall River, Mass.

Referring to the set of sixty-five or more varieties of Nephrolepis exaltata already collected and identified at the Brooklyn Botanic Garden as stated by R. C. Benedict, in our last week's issue, we mention N. Mentori, shown by C. Hagenburger at the Cleveland Flower Show as another new one to be added to the long list. This struck us as a very pretty variety, the fronds

Whitewashing the Bench Sides

If there is a large or two on the place which is shaded or which is rather old and dark it can be made much lighter and more cheerful by wetting down the sides of the benches and applying a good coat of hot whitewash. This will have a surprising effect on the light and the roses will surely be benefited thereby. Of course this alone will not grow the roses but it will be a great help during the dark months of the winter. If applied real hot to a wet surface the work can be done quickly and it will not rub off so easily.

The Supply of Pots.

With the propagating season close at hand it would be well to go over the pot supply and make sure that there is enough of all the different sizes on hand. It will be best not to use two-inch pots for the first potting unless there is a lot of them on hand and it looks bad to see them idle. We find them a little too small, for no sooner are the young roses rooted than they have to be repotted and this means a good deal of work. With the cost of labor ever increasing, saving on the work will cut quite a figure in a year's run of business. It will take a while for the pots to arrive when they come by freight and the sooner they are ordered the better.

The Novelties.

There will be several new roses to come out in the coming spring and any grower interested will do well to look them up now and see just what they are doing. In order to tell, it is best to see them growing, as notes can then be made under what conditions they do best. If these are the same as can be given on your own place then the variety will no doubt be a success. With the market prices for novelties double those paid for the older varieties the new roses are well worth looking up.

long and slender, with sub-divided pinnae.

CHINESE COTONEASTERS.

Several of the Chinese Cotoneasters in the collection of Chinese plants will be objects of much beauty for several weeks, for many of them retain their fruit until winter and their leaves are only now beginning to take on their brilliant autumn colors. The most beautiful of them perhaps now is the red-fruited Cotoneaster Dicksiana, C. divaricata, another red-fruited species, will be more beautiful in ten days' time when the leaves will be bright scarlet. C. horizontalis and its variety perpusilla with their dark green leaves and small bright red fruits, will not lose their autumn beauty much before Christmas. These two plants with their prostrate stems spreading into broad, compact mats are well suited for the rock garden or to train against low walls.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

W. ATLEE BURPEE

In Fordhook, his beautiful home, near Doylestown, Pa., at 6.45 Friday evening, November 26, Washington Atlee Burpee, one of America's most famous seedsmen and horticulturists, died at the age of 57 years of an illness baffling in its complications. He became ill several months ago, and went to Wernersville, Pa., to recuperate. His condition grew worse, and he went to Philadelphia, occupying a suite at the Ritz-Carlton. Recently he was taken to his country home, and there the engineers on the Reading Railway avoided bell-ringing and whistle-blowing that they might not disturb him.

At his bedside when he died were his wife, two of his sons, David and W. Atlee, Jr.; his sister, Mrs. A. B. Scott, and her husband, and Dr. Frank B. Swartzlander, his life-long friend and physician.

W. Atlee Burpee was born at Sheffield, N. B., April 5, 1858, but was predestined to be a Philadelphian, his father having married the daughter of his instructor in medicine, Dr. Washington L. Atlee of Philadelphia, under promise that within five years he would move to that city. He was also predestined to be a physician, but objected to that part of the program, and at the age of 18 opened in connection with G. S. Benson, Jr., a little store at 223 Church street, dealing chiefly in seeds, fancy pigeons, poultry and dogs. Another partner was taken into the firm the following year, but the combination proved unsuccessful, and two years later he embarked under the firm name of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., for himself. The growth of the concern was steady until now it is the largest mail order seed house in the world. Immense seed farms are located at Doylestown, Pa., Swedesboro, N. J., and in the Lompoc Valley, California. The headquarters of the firm in Philadelphia, and was elected to the presidency several times.

Mr. Burpee's unprecedented success brought him in touch with many other interests, and he was a director of the Market Street National Bank, the Northern Trust Company and the Colgate Company. He was a director of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League, ex-president of the American Seed Trade Association, ex-president of the National Sweet Pea Society of America and vice-president of the National Sweet Pea Society of Great Britain. He was a member of the Trades League of Philadelphia and the Philadelphia Board of Trade and a trustee of the Howard Hospital and Sanitarium Association of Philadelphia and of the National Farm School. He was also a life member of the Royal Horticultural Society of Great Britain and the Société Nationale Horticulture de France.

Mr. Burpee married Miss Blanche Simons in 1892, and they have three children—David, Washington Atlee, Jr., and Stuart Alexander Burpee.

He is credited with having done a great deal of charitable work among families in Doylestown and neighboring towns. Several years ago he gave to Doylestown a splendidly equipped playground, known as the Blanche Burpee Playgrounds.

Our estimate of Mr. Burpee personally and the heartfelt tributes to his memory by others who knew him well will be found on the editorial page and in the columns herewith. More than six hundred people attended the funeral at Doylestown on Monday, including many representatives of the delphia are located one on North Fifth street and the other on York avenue.

While a Canadian by birth, Mr. Burpee was a thorough American by preference, although he always maintained a deep interest in matters connected with the natives of the Dominion who resided in his city. He was a life-long director of the Canadian Society seed and horticultural interests of Philadelphia, New York, Washington and other cities. The establishment of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., in Philadelphia, was closed for the day, and the 200 employees attended the funeral in a body. There was also a large representation of members of the Poor Richard Club of Philadelphia, whom Mr. Burpee had hospitably entertained so often at "Fordhook."

The casket reposed in the drawing room of the Burpee residence at Fordhook, surrounded by a great wealth of floral tributes. A simple but impressive funeral service was conducted by the Rev. M. A. Brownson, pastor of the Tenth Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, in which church Mr. Burpee has been an elder for many years. Mrs. Margaret Mitchell, a niece of Mrs. Burpee, sang "Lead, Kindly Light." The Rev. Mr. Brownson paid a touching tribute to the loyalty of Mr. Burpee in his friendships and to his warm-hearted generosity and kindness. Pall-bearers were ex-Governor Edwin S. Stuart, John Gribbel, president of the Union League; Samuel Y. Heebner, ex-Judge Harman Yerkes, William E. Helme, Henry M. Warren, Percy B. Bromfield and William F. Fell. Interment was made in Doylestown cemetery.

FROM GEORGE C. WATSON. Philadelphia.

When we survey the field of achievement of the American seed trade during the past fifty years many prominent figures stand out. James Vick, Peter Henderson, B. K. Bliss, John Lewis Childs, Wm. Henry Maule, D. M. Ferry, Albert Dickinson, Jerome B. Rice, John Farquhar and J. C. Vaughan are among the many who have made history and headed the forward movement. But the most striking figure of them all has been W. Atlee Burpee, who started in 1878—37 years ago—and has just passed away at the early age of 57 years.

To get a clear idea of what Mr. Burpee stood for we must first get the right idea of what a true seedsman stands for. The seedsman does business on a confidential basis. You can't tell from looking at him. The first principle of a true seedsman is a high sense of honor. Mr. Burpee had that in a remarkable degree. No dishonorable dollar ever went into his pocket. The second principle is a deep love of truth. No man ever heard Mr. Burpee depart one hair's breadth from the absolute truth about anything he had to offer—and that is saying a lot when you get enthusiastic about some of your pet novelties. In addition to a high sense of honor and a deep love of truth there is this further supreme requirement to enforce the latter: unshakable courage in its defence. Burpee was a courageous man to that final supreme test. He never put a fake on the market himself, and he would even fight a friend who did, no matter how innocently the friend might do so.

Gentlemen, that man was a man among men. A big man. A strong man. A wise man. An honest man. A wise man. A jolly man. A witty man. A loving man. A prince. One of the most unique and wonderful characters it has been my fortune to know during my thirty-two years' sojourn in this country on my way around the world.

His friends and the universe have suffered an irreparable loss in his sudden taking away. But let us thank the Lord that He vouchsafed to give us a Burpee even for a limited time.

"Sound, sound the clarion, all the life—
To all the sensual world proclaim,
One crowded hour of glorious life
Is worth an age without a name."

That's from good old Sir Walter, and it fits Burpee.

We have seen many remarkable popular outpourings to a popular hero, both at home and abroad—from royalty down and from theocracy up, but never have we seen so ardent a flowing out of the human heart to a real man as we saw at Fordhook today. Nov. 29, 1915.

For miles around the roads were lined with auto wagons, buggies, ox-carts; East, West, North and South—as far as the eye could reach. They had been paying their respects for hours before we got there on the 1.02 P. M. train, from the Reading Terminal. From Fordhook siding, at the bottom of the Burpee lawn, we watched a sea of heads (from that one train) half-a-mile-long-and-seven-deep, trudging up to pay their last respects to the great departed.

To count the thousands that made their last bow of respect to Burpee is impossible, not only that but the kind of people who came. Every one there was a prince in the business—from Maine to California—he came to do homage to his king—king not by heredity but by achievement. And not only in our own line of industry but in all walks of life. Merchants, manufacturers, farmers, florists, lawyers, clergymen, statesmen, suffragettes—every phase and form of human feeling was represented.

The worthy successors of the great Burpee business—while they have sustained (with us all) a great and stunning loss, have the inspiration of this wonderful tribute to their honored chief and founder:—to gird up their loins and do all that is in them to carry the Burpee flag to even bigger heights. From stepping stones of our dead selves to higher things. That's the slogan.

FROM W. C. LANGBRIDGE, Cambridge, N. Y.

"Death loves a shining mark," and this is exemplified in the passing of W. Atlee Burpee. For many years he has stood in the front rank among living representatives of the seed trade, not alone of this country but of the world. Few men have filled so large a space in their chosen line of business, and his strong forceful character has left an impress on the seed trade of this country that will endure for generations to come.

Mr. Burpee was an honor to the seed business, a force for square up-right dealing, a living protest against shams and fakes. While as an advertiser he always emphasized the name of Burpee, he was in the broadest sense a public benefactor, not only to those in his own line of business but to horticulture in general. It can be said without fear of contradiction that during the last quarter of a century,

Mr. Burpee has introduced more new types of vegetables of sterling merit, which have become standard varieties, than any other house in all America.

One feature of the Burpee establishment has always been commented on—the intense loyalty of every employee from the highest to the lowest. Every one seemed to be proud of his connection with the house of Burpee; eager to serve the "chief;" eager to do anything to spare him. There is a cause, a reason for this devotion—it was the thoughtful kindness of the man. For many years it has been Mr. Burpee's custom to look after his employees' welfare and comfort, and any who became ill while in his employ received his salary during the period of his illness, or at least for a considerable time, and in addition, often received the best medical attention free. These are a few of the reasons for the quite unique loyalty of his employees.

It is not the purpose of the writer to act as biographer for Mr. Burpee, but knowing him for many years we regard it as a privilege to bear brief testimony to the qualities of heart and brain of this true nobleman. With a considerable part of the allotted three score years and ten still unused, and just where the twilight mingles with the day, he has passed to the great beyond.

"Take him all in all, we shall not look upon his like again."

FROM MR. BURPEE'S FIRST EMPLOYEE.

Harrisburg, Pa.

The half can never be told. The men closest to Mr. Burpee are the ones that knew of the many good deeds he did. Many a blessing has he showered on the poor and needy that no one but those directly interested knew anything about. He was always thoughtful about his employees, their welfare, their homes, and their habits. The writer recalls an incident that happened many years ago, when an employee did Mr. Burpee a great injury, but instead of retaliating he said "well, let him go and I hope he may yet see the error of his ways." He was not the man to hold a grudge,—far from it. The writer, an old employee, always looked upon Mr. Burpee as a brother and I have every reason to believe he felt this same brotherly affection for me, being the first employee of the great house of Burpee. It is not only a pleasure to look back and think of the happy days spent with this house but the constant companionship with Mr. Burpee made it more so. When I say that I believe I have lost in the death of Mr. Burpee the best friend I ever had, I "say but little." Last spring Mr. Burpee stopped in my city and spent the evening at my home. Needless to say the conversation ran back to the old days of '78 and '9. I can see his countenance now, radiant, when many old things were brought up. He seemed to like to look back. Speaking of the first edition of Burpee's Farm Annual which was mailed from his old residence, 1332 Arch street, he said: "We had a lot of fun that night."

God in all his goodness cannot fail to crown him for the many good works he has accomplished on this earth.

THE EXHIBITIONS

HOUSTON FLOWER SHOW.

Houston's fall flower show was a notable success and amply repaid the workers who gave their time and effort to the cause. The influence of such a well-ordered and creditable exhibition cannot be other than educational and elevating to the community and, eventually, conducive to the prosperity of commercial floriculture in the section of the country where it was held. As our illustrations indicate some wise and enterprising publicity was set in motion with a view to focusing public attention on the affair. The picture showing the ladies who participated in the opening ceremonies sufficiently indicates that the public interest was effectively corralled. The bridal flower array as seen in the illustration could not fail to captivate in any city and was an innovation of more than passing merit. Among the prize winners were R. C. Kerr, who was the live wire behind the enterprise and who won a whole string of premiums for artistic floral work; H. W. Kuhlmann, who also won many honors, and Mrs. M. A. Hanson. Many out-of-town displays were made, not for competition, which helped very materially towards the general effectiveness of the display. It is proposed that this fall exhibition be made an annual event.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

Philadelphia, March 25 to April 2, 1916

When the National Flower Show Committee took a lease of Convention Hall, the building in which the National Flower Show is to be held, they had some misgivings as to whether the Show could occupy the tremendous amount of floor space presented. Subsequent preparations, however, have shown that instead of being too big, the hall is really too small; consequently, the floor plan as originally arranged has had to be altered to accommodate the pressure already felt upon the space. The space set apart for the trade exhibits has been minimized, and every available inch has been relegated to the area required for the competitive exhibits. It is not too soon to state that the exhibition will fill the building completely. The National Flower Show Committee advance the idea of "Show first," therefore other interests must give way. Those who have already taken space in the trade section have acted wisely, for even at this early date the space available for trade displays is nearly all reserved, and it is only a matter of a few weeks before all the space will be taken up. Among those who have contracted for space are the following:

H. F. Michell Co., Phila.; Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Phila.; A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; Joseph Heacock Co., Inc., Wyncote, Pa.; Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y.; Bon Arbor Chemical Co., Paterson, N. J.; J. L. Dillon, Bloomsburg, Pa.; Coldwell Lawn Mower Co., Newburgh, N. Bayersdorfer & Co., Phila.; Harry S. Betz, Phila.; Jos. Neidinger & Co., Phila.; Chas. Henry Fox, Phila.; Voltax Paint & Var. Co., Phila.; The Garland Co., Cleveland, O.

The Schedule Committee has just completed the Second Preliminary Schedule, and the same will be mailed to those interested in a few days. The prizes offered approximate a grand total of $20,000, eclipsing the schedules of all preceding National Flower Shows.

The bid for feature exhibits is well exemplified in the offer of $600 for Rose Gardens, with a prospect of the prizes being increased to $1000 in this class.

NEW YORK INTERNATIONAL FLOWER SHOW

In recognition of the public interest attaching to New York's big flower show, April 5 to 12, 1916, the Park Department of the City of New York, through Commissioner Cabot Ward, has communicated to Secretary John Young, its intention of staging an exhibit at the forthcoming show which shall at least equal the magnificent display made at last spring's show. An exhibit of this character is greatly appreciated by the management, because it reflects in great measure the interest taken in floriculture by our civic government whose efforts to promote the love of flowers and plants among its citizens need no exploitation. It goes without saying that Park Superintendent J. H. Beatty will seek to eclipse his former staging by making the "people's exhibit" one of the most noteworthy in the exhibition. Space in the trade section is being taken up readily, and this department of the show bids fair to be larger than in former years. The following have made reservation for space:

Max Schling, New York; Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J.; Bon Arbor Chemical Co., Paterson, N. J.; Woodrow & Marketos, New York; George L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I.; John Scheepers, Inc., New York; Alphano Humus Co., New York; Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y.; Wm. T. Leary, New Rochelle, N. Y.; A. T. Bunyard, New York; J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York; Aphine Mfg. Co., Paterson, N. J.; Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J.; G. E. M. Stump, New York; H. A. Bunyard Co., New York; S. P. Townsend & Co., Orange, N. J.; F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.; B. Hammond Tracy, Wenham, Mass.; Stump & Walter Co., New York; A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; I. J. Stringham, New York; W. E. Marshall Co., New York; Reed & Keller, New York; Miller & Doing, Brooklyn; Knight & Struck Co., New York; Coldwell Lawn Mower Co., Newburgh, N. Y.; Reade Mfg. Co., Jersey City; V. & R. ford, N. Y.; Doubleday Page Co., New York; Japanese Floral Perfume Co., New York; The Cloche Co., New York; E. C. Brown Co., Rochester, N. Y.; H. Langelere, New York; A. L. Miller, Brooklyn; A. J. Jerome Craft Shop, New York.

The committee is considering the classes as set forth in the preliminary schedule, and will shortly prepare the final schedule. The preliminary schedule should convey the idea that the management is making a feature of displays. The rose garden display will be most notable in the classes looking to the artistic end of the show.

Considerable interest also attaches to the rock garden class. During the fall planting season, growers intending to compete in this class were busy over the problem of what to grow, and it is safe to say that we shall see many plants strange to American flower shows.

What was perhaps the most interesting feature of the last show—the table decoration class for hotels only—will be given similar prominence in the forthcoming show. Judging from the interest taken in this class, the stagings will be much more magnificent in their appointments than at the last show.

It is to be pointed out that the class calling for "new Holland plants" is not to be interpreted literally. The meaning is that the plants to be offered in this class are to be what are known as New Holland plants, such as tree ferns and the flora of Australasia. Why this term should continue to be customary is beyond comprehension. Australia, as a name, needs little explanation nowadays.

MILDEW ON OUTDOOR ROSES.

We reprint the following communication which appeared in our issue of last week with some typographical inaccuracies which made it unintelligible.

To the Editor of HORTICULTURE:

Dear Sir:—The request of M. H. S., Walla Walla, Wash., for a formula to overcome mildew on outdoor roses impels me to send you the recipe for a remedy that I use with unfailing success.

Liver of sulphur..... ¼ oz.
Fels Naptha soap or Ivory soap. ½ oz.
Water 1 gallon

Dissolve the liver of sulphur in cold water and the soap by the aid of heat; when thoroughly dissolved mix. The plants must be sprayed early in the morning to prevent scalding—never late in the day. I am convinced that more mildew is developed on roses by wetting the foliage late in the day than from any other cause. I never have mildew on my roses unless we have much rain at night and always spray with the above mixture as soon as possible after a rainy night. In sections where mildew is prevalent I would suggest spraying before it appears. Roses should always be watered early in the morning.

Yours very truly,

ROBERT HUEY.

Canna Windmar—This canna is rather dwarf in habit; the flowers are medium in size, fine rounded petals; color, clear distinct orange, broadly margined with canary-yellow. An early and free bloomer, self cleaning, erect trusses carried well above the foliage, which is a marine shade of green. Parentage, Buttercup × seedling.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

CHICAGO.

Beginning Dec. 1, all the wholesale stores are displaying the $2.00 per 1000 price on ferns.

The Kedzie Floral Co., 3403 W. Madison street, has sold out to J. Feeran, who has left the undertaking business to become a florist.

John Michaelson calls attention to the fact that violets are not so popular this year for some reason and that whenever this flower is not meeting with favor, sweet peas of dark color share the same fate.

Mrs. J. Simpson who has successfully conducted a retail flower store at 3656 Ogden avenue, has now opened a second one at 432 N. Parkside avenue. Mrs. Simpson has as active partner C. B. Lemmer, one of the rising young men in the business.

The flower show accounts are not all in yet but the management states that the guarantee fund will have to be called in. The show is generally regarded as one of the best ever held in Chicago and the light attendance due largely to the unusually excellent shows given in the park conservatories at the same time.

The American Greenhouse Co. was awarded the Albert F. Amling contract for a new range of houses, to consist of about 225,000 square feet of glass, to be erected by May 1, at Maywood, Ill. The range will be up-to-date in every particular. P. H. McKee, president of the newly organized American Greenhouse Co., won the contract. The work goes forward at once.

The first cuts of Helen Frick chrysanthemum are coming now. It is a splendid late variety and comes in pink and in white. It is regarded by the Chicago Flower Growers' Association as the best late chrysanthemum and their stock of it is certainly fine. Mrs. Francis King gladioli are coming also this week, a supply of which will be kept on hand constantly all winter.

Frank Oechslein had a car load of azaleas arrive, badly frozen. After reporting their condition to the shipper and to the railway company he took the stock to the greenhouses where he will hold plants till damage is adjusted. The ends of the refrigerator car had been left open and the temperature dropped below freezing.

The J. C. Moninger Co., is doing some splendid work in spite of the winter weather. A large conservatory with a one-piece forty-foot truss is being built for Joseph Leiter, at Georgetown, Ill. A rush order, which shows the rapidity with which this firm can execute work with its large force of trained men, is being filled for H. J. Borowski of Roslindale, Mass. It consists of their newest steel-frame house 40 by 150 feet and shipping began immediately the order was placed.

Boston—The bowling teams start on the second lap of the series this week. There was no bowling last Thursday on account of its being the Thanksgiving holiday.

PITTSBURGH.

The E. C. Ludwig Company has just completed a commodious office on their plant at Mars, Pa.

The Ludwig Floral Co. will add four new greenhouses to their range at Castle Shannon, Pa. A new stoker system has just been completed.

Miss Emma B. Maxwell, of 812 Wood street, Wilkinsburg, has just added a handsome new auto truck to her equipment—the second within the year.

Gilbert Ludwig has been added to the finance committee in charge of the Municipal Christmas tree to be "planted" this year in City Hall Park, North Side.

George E. Hallam, who has been confined to his home with pneumonia for the past six weeks, was able last Monday to come down to business for a short time. During his absence Mrs. Hallam has supervised the floral work.

The following have contributed to the flower booth of the German-Austrian Red Cross bazaar in Exposition Hall: William F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.; Mr. Lempke of W. W. Barnard Company, Chicago; John Bader Company; F. C. Hinkel and brothers, and John Schweiger of West View; Harmony Nurseries, Evans City, Pa.; Joseph Thomas, Greensburg; P. S. Randolph & Sons, Verona, Pa.; I. Shelby Crall, Monongahela, Pa.; Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., McCallum Co., Ludwig Floral Co., Sasonwald Nurseries, and C. Philipp, all of Pittsburgh. Henry Meuschke is chairman of the committee in charge of this booth.

This season's debutantes' affairs have been the inspiration for some of the most artistic floral combinations ever used in this section. For one of these the centerpiece on the tea table was a massive silver tray and basket, the latter filled with assorted oncidiums, laelias, cypripediums, cattleyas and dendrobiums in combination with Hamburg grapes. On each end were silver vases of white lilacs, the first of the season. On the floor flanking the mantle of the ball room where the receiving party stood, were tall, gold urns each filled with seventy-five Golden Wedding chrysanthemums. Tokay grapes in combination with oncidiums in a Roman gold basket were used on the tea table for the debut of another young lady. Even the garage and canopied walk were transformed into veritable bowers of flowers for the purpose of serving. One hundred and sixty-two gift bouquets added their beauty and fragrance to the scene. Silver-pink snapdragon and Mrs. Russell roses in pink willow baskets dominated the decorations for the coming out of one other young lady.

NEW YORK.

S. Lecakes, wholesale florist, has leased a store at 106 West 28th street.

J. J. Coan has resigned as manager of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., and will embark in the wholesale cut flower business on his own account.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Harry McCabe has returned after an eleven weeks' stay in Detroit, Mich., to again take up his work in his father's greenhouses in Anacostia.

In commenting upon the Maryland Week Flower Show held recently in Baltimore, F. Gude, George Field, and S. S. Pennock, who were the judges, declare this to have been one of the finest exhibitions of flowers that they have visited. They speak well of the manner in which the show was managed and of the many courtesies shown them.

Because the order resulted in many persons failing to get mail matter that means much to them during the holidays, the Postmaster General has announced the suspension of the order treating as unmailable matter having adhesive stickers on the same side as the stamp. The suspension will, however, remain in force only during the month of December.

Miss Marie Lott, who for the past three years or more has been employed by M. J. McCabe, of Anacostia, was married on Tuesday of last week at the home of her employers to W. C. Fry, of Miami, Fla. The McCabe home was extensively decorated for the occasion for Miss Lott is a great favorite among her friends. Mr. and Mrs. Fry later took the boat for Jacksonville. They will hereafter reside in Miami.

Superintendent George W. Hess, of the Botanic Gardens, is making a special show this week of poinsettias, of which there are now nearly a thousand in full bloom. It had not been expected that these would come into flower until about Christmas, but the hot weather caused them to fairly jump into maturity. The cuttings were put in last February, then planted out in beds until August. The plants have reached an average height of about five feet and are very fine.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Extensive alterations have just been completed in the shipping room of Joseph's flower shop on Grant avenue. They report business for Thanksgiving week double that of last year.

The Francis Floral Co., which specializes on novelty pottery and baskets, reports very good success with a special line of Dutch baskets filled with the different varieties of small pompons for the Thanksgiving trade.

E. W. McLellan, of the E. W. McLellan Co., has the sympathy of the trade on account of the untimely death of his brother, Wm. S. McLellan, who was stabbed to death on his place in San Mateo County, Nov. 19, by a fanatic, accused of starting fires on the McLellan ranch.

Kansas City, Mo.—Sam Murray reports a record Thanksgiving week for business. He had one of the best floral jobs ever given out in Kansas City, the opening of the new Hotel Muebach.

He is survived by his widow, one daughter and two sons, Otto J., who has been in business with his father and who will continue the business at Gansevoort street, the connection with Peter Henderson & Co. having been discontinued on September 20th of this year, and George G. EXCLUDING FLOWERS AT FUNERALS.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

In HORTICULTURE of Nov. 27 is an article about a priest in Waltham condemning the use of flowers at funerals. Is it not about time that the trade start in to protest or do something against all this ignorant argument? In this city we got last winter the "knockout" from the City Hall, besides the school graduations, the money to go to the "poor" and the florists lost about two thousand dollars in business and "the poor" got about twenty dollars. Nothing was said about it, with the exception of the comment in HORTICULTURE at the time. Now comes this priest. I would say that the florist business is just as important and necessary as the church, and certainly gives as many a living. Now the florists do not interfere with the church, so if we all mind our own business there won't be any hard times or feelings. Yours very truly,

JOHN C. LINDBLOM.

279 Mass. Ave.,

Providence, R. I.

Detroit General business in the flower stores has increased in a gratifying manner for the past two months, owing to an unusual number of debutante affairs and promises to so continue all through December. Breitmeyer reports an advance of about 150 per cent. over last year for the same period.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON The market is in unsatisfactory shape since Thanksgiving and it is very liable to so continue until Christmas. This reaction is an annual occurrence between the two holidays and it is aggravated this year by the unusual persistence of the late chrysanthemums which, judging from appearances will stay with us all through December. Carnations are badly overstocked and many go to loss for lack of a customer. Just how far the chrysanthemum is responsible for this is not apparent but appreciation for the carnation is not what it should be this fall. Roses are lower in price than they were last week but they are of good quality and clean up quite well. Beauties move rather slowly at reduced figures.

BUFFALO The weather was ideal for Thanksgiving week and the trade were satisfied with and thankful for the extra business done. From Monday to Saturday the merchants were busy. Chrysanthemums were the leading sales and a good supply was had at prices within reach of all. Pompons were in good supply, as well as everything else, except roses, which were a trifle off, and those held firm in price. Carnations were in good supply. Beauties were equal to the demand, also all other stock. Violets had no special call and on Thursday, as usual, an oversupply.

CHICAGO Thanksgiving week brought general satisfaction to the wholesalers. It is estimated that at least double the number of chrysanthemums were offered this year that were on the market last year and the quantity of pompons that appeared were a great surprise. It seemed as if every grower had underestimated his supply or had been keeping his stock to try for the top price on Thanksgiving week, with the result that prices could not remain as previously quoted. The supply of all kinds of stock, excepting roses, was so great that to move it concessions were made and a large amount was disposed of and the returns aggregated a good sum. The greatest disappointment was felt by the carnation growers whose stock had to compete with the quantity of pompons and only the very highest grade brought full prices, while the great bulk of medium sold very low. Roses continue scarce, most growers being off crop and the weather conditions if favorable will assure a big crop for Christmas. Orchids and gardenias are decidedly scarce and the same may be said of longiflorum lilies. American Beauties are hardly equal to demand, the shortage being in all grades. It looks now as if there would be chrysanthemums in the market till Christmas. Sweet peas are in fair supply and usually sell readily.

CINCINNATI Thanksgiving business was very good. Some stock was left over, but this was mostly stock that was soft or bruised when it came in or it would have had a buyer. Prices were moderate. At the beginning of this week colder weather set in and the supply gave indications of shortening. Roses and carnations are not as plentiful as they were but still are enough. Lilies are plentiful. Chrysanthemums are now on the decline and the daily receipts include only limited quantities of late blooms. These, however, are of good quality.

Expectations for Thanksgiving Day business did not quite materialize. There was a large surplus of flowers of all descriptions and the market was unable to clean it up. Since then the situation has not improved and at present writing has a stale and unprofitable look which neither growers, wholesalers or retail dealers relish. There are lots of roses from stately American Beauties down to microscopic Mignons and they are sold in large quantities to one or the other class of dealers but prices are decidedly down and the buyers dominate situation. Carnations move slowly. Orchids are still scarce. Chrysanthemums still hold the trenches and will not be dislodged as early as was hoped. Lilies very plentiful. Paper White narcissi are coming forward freely. Of gardenias there are very few. Lily of the valley normal. Violets too abundant for the demand but excellent in quality.

In the words of a PITTSBURGH prominent wholesale florist, "the 'mum game is over" and conditions have settled down to the regular lines of stock. Business, undoubtedly, is good and the retailers are delighted over the receipts of Thanksgiving. Several firms pronounced it their "best Thanksgiving," while others more conservatively put it as "the best in several years." One—a North Side firm—was open throughout two consecutive days and nights, the holiday itself, included. The street vendors appear a day or two each week. It is generally conceded that they serve a good purpose in educating and developing the masses into flower buyers, who in the years to come may often turn to the more pretentious shops. Undoubtedly, they are a blessing to the grower, whose inferior stock otherwise would go to the bow-wows, figuratively speaking.

General satisfaction is expressed among the local florists over the outcome of Thanksgiving business. On account of attendance at the Exposition maintaining such a high level as the date for final closing draws near, some little uneasiness was felt by different members of the trade early in the week regarding the outlook for holiday business, but they were agreeably surprised, the week's sales running substantially ahead of last year's. Stock was plentiful, but nothing to speak of was left over. Poinsettias were featured quite prominently. Some very nice cut stock arrived from the south, and it cleaned up readily. Some potted plants were in evidence, also, but most of the local growers are holding back their poinsettias for the Christmas trade. Cyclamen, begonias, azaleas and primulas were in good demand. Chrysanthemums are getting lighter from day to day and no heavy supplies are expected from now on. Pompons are still plentiful and sell well, both potted and cut. The cool, damp weather has brought violets into better shape and their movement is all that can be desired. Some excellent carnations were brought in for Thanksgiving, everything cleaning up at fair prices, while the finest blooms sold at a high figure. Though the rose offerings are more satisfactory than for some time both in quality and quantity, more fine stock could have been used, especially American beauties and Cecile Bruners. Killarney is going strong. Lily of the valley is plentiful and in good demand. The supply of orchids about equals the demand, and the gardenia situation is about the same. Special basket arrangements are popular here. Some California holly appears on the market, but it is not nearly so plentiful as it was a year ago at this time.

British Horticulture

Chrysanthemum Show.

Judging from the recent annual show of the National Chrysanthemum Society the "Autumn Queen" still has many loyal supporters, whilst the attention given to it by British raisers shows no signs of diminution. The exhibition proved in every way successful, and the trade, despite the fact that they have been handicapped by the shortage of labor, made some meritorious displays. The new varieties recently certificated, particulars of which I recently forwarded, found many admirers. British raisers seem determined to reach a still higher standard amongst the exhibition blooms, whilst some of the newcomers will doubtless be found very useful for market work. Keen interest was taken in a fine new golden bronze bloom, Edith Cavell, shown by Wells & Co., who have introduced in recent years many present day popular varieties. Some excellent effects were produced by the bold groups arranged by the leading specialists. There was a bank of varied hues at one end of the hall, containing 150 Japanese varieties, ranging from the neat pompons to the massive show blooms. Commercial growers were attracted by a new variety, Market Bronze, raised by Norman Davis. It has been raised from Bronze Soleil d'Octobre and December Gold, and has the combined good qualities of its parents.

Flower Market Reports

The Thanksgiving Day business this year was above normal. All classes of stock sold well and in some of the lines the retailers and wholesalers alike experienced a general clean-up. There was a heavy run on lily of the valley which replaced orchids, now a great scarcity. Violets sold well and American Beauties were in good demand. There are still large quantities of extra fine chrysanthemums including Bonnafton, William Turner, Dr. Enguehard, the Chadwicks and Eatons. Carnations are improving in quality and quantity and are selling fairly well. There are few gardenias yet to be had. Poinsettia made its appearance during the week. Sweet peas are to be had in limited quantities but are very good. There are not enough of the smaller and medium grade roses to go around and prices on roses have generally advanced as usual at this time of the year.

THE CEDAR OF LEBANON.

The Cedar of Lebanon (Cedrus Libani) in the Arboretum shows the importance of careful selection of the seeds from which to raise trees for any particular climate. One of the fir trees of Asia Minor, Abies cilicica, has been growing for many years in New England where it has proved to be one of the best of all conifers of its class to cultivate here as an ornamental tree. With this fir the Cedar of Lebanon grows in Asia Minor on the Anti-Taurus, far north of the Lebanon range in Palestine and in a much colder climate. As the Palestine cedar is not hardy here in New England the Arboretum had seeds of this tree collected on the Anti-Tarus with the view of attempting to introduce a hardy race of cedars into New England. The seeds were sown here in the spring of 1902 and a large number of plants were raised. They all proved perfectly hardy, not one having suffered from drought or cold. Some, however, have been lost in attempts at transplanting, for no other tree here has proved so difficult to move. The average height of all these young cedars in the Arboretum is now about 13 feet. The tallest is 21 feet high and there is another specimen 20 feet high. It is doubtful if any other conifer can be grown in New England from seed to the height of 21 feet in 13 years.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

PREVENTING DEATH OF CLEMATIS PLANTS.

The sudden dying of clematis plants, especially wherever the large-flowered kinds are grown extensively in America and Europe, has been noted for many years, and the cause and methods for prevention of this disease have recently been reported in the Journal of Agricultural Research of the United States Department of Agriculture, by W. O. Gloyer of the New York Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva, N. Y. This investigator found that the primary cause of the dying of these plants is a fungus known as Ascochyta clematidina. Experiments have shown that the transferring of this fungus to healthy plants causes them to take the disease.

The disease shows itself differently on various species. On hybrids grown in the field it is a stem-rot, while at the greenhouse where cuttings are propagated it is a leaf-spot as well as a stem-rot. On the clematis paniculata the disease takes both forms.

The following methods for controlling this fungus are recommended:

There is less disease when the hybrids are supported while growing than when they are permitted to trail on the ground. In the case of the clematis paniculata, however, the selling price of this variety does not warrant incurring the expense of supports. The authority in this case advises transplanting the plants from beds to the open field after the first year and placing them far enough apart to prevent matting, which is always a condition favorable to the disease. The following spray applied lightly controls the disease on clematis paniculata growing in the beds and on cuttings in the greenhouse: One pound of laundry soap and 6 pounds of sulphur to 15 gallons of water. The disease can be controlled on the hybrids in the forcing frames or in the greenhouse by the use of sprays. In all cases it is best to remove the diseased leaves and dead vines before spraying. It is particularly important to clear out such leaves and vines, especially if the plant is wintering outdoors, as the fungus is able to survive cold weather. This indicates also that the same beds should not be used for clematis during successive years.

The retail purchaser of clematis can prevent the dying of plants by taking proper simple precautions. The plants should be placed in good soil, well drained and on a sunny exposure. As soon as the new shoots have formed the old vine tissue should be carefully cut away close to the new shoots, removing all traces of the brown, discolored wood in which the fungus is to be found. Proper ventilation is obtained by training the plants to a strong trellis.

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:

$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

EXCHANGE PROFESSORSHIP IN LANDSCAPE GARDENING.

The Massachusetts Agricultural College and the University of Illinois have arranged an exchange professorship in Landscape Gardening for the present year. Professor R. R. Root, head of the department in Illinois, will come to Massachusetts for two weeks in December to give a special course of lectures in Landscape Gardening. During the same time Professor F. A. Waugh, head of the department at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, will go to Illinois and deliver a course of lectures and exercises before Professor Root's students.

This is a somewhat novel departure in college teaching, but has in it the promise of success. It will, of course, be a distinct advantage to the students in both institutions to get in touch with another teacher and to secure a new point of view. It is expected to arouse considerable interest in the course by this method. The Massachusetts Agricultural College and the University of Illinois have two of the largest and strongest departments of Landscape Gardening in America, and both are endeavoring to turn out practical men well equipped for the profession. In the past much of the teaching in this field has been of the strictly amateur variety. While the amateur point of view is highly important in gardening and should be constantly encouraged, it is equally important that a few institutions should give thoroughgoing professional courses not only in agriculture, horticulture, floriculture, forestry, etc., but in the highly specialized field of Landscape Gardening.

MASSACHUSETTS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE NOTES.

The landscape gardening class made a trip recently to several of the estates in town for the purpose of studying planting and formal garden layouts. Among the places visited were the Carruth estate and Prof. Clark's estate.

The junior pomology students have been getting much practical work in pruning in renovating Prof. Todd's orchard at Amherst College.

The students in floriculture are building a cement cold frame thirty feet long. The cost of the entire frame is $45.00.

F. B. Abrams House at Blue Point, N. Y.

BEFORE I tell you about our friend Abrams and his house, let me first tell you of another good friend of ours out at Kirkwood, Missouri, 20 miles from St. Louis. I was out there the first week in November, at the end of an 8,000 miles trip that the firm hustled me out to make among a number of the numerous growers in the West that we have built for in the past year.

The man I wanted to see at Kirkwood was W. J. Pilcher. The genial citizen who accommodatingly drove me over in his car was amazed when he got to Pilcher's place to find such an extensive plant, and to learn that he had "sent way to Chicago" for his big iron frame house 72 x 200 feet which we put up for him last year. Turning to me, he said, "Why, I had no idea Pilcher had a layout like this. Why, it only seems two or three years ago when he started with his first little shack."

"What has all this to do with Abrams?" you ask. Just this much—Both men have developed their business in a surprisingly short time.

Both at the same time came to the conclusion that every cent our iron frame houses cost was a mighty good invest-

The winds that howl around this house in the winter are certainly fierce. That's why we used lattice rafters to stiffen the gables.

ment. Pilcher is sending to the St. Louis market some of the finest roses grown in that section and everybody on the 28th Street Market at New York knows the high quality and dependableness of Mr. Abrams' "varieties," which he is growing so successfully in his 65 x 400 "Potter."

About the first iron frame power house and work room we put up was for Thomas Roland at Irevyere, Mass. When Mr. Abrams came to build, he saw the advantage of its construction and we erected one for him, 40 x 100 feet.

The boilers are placed on the same level as the greenhouse floor and the heating system is vacuum.

We do not say that either Mr. Pilcher or Mr. Abrams would not be the prominent growers they now are if they hadn't built our iron frames; but it is a conspicuous fact that when they began sending to it cut from these houses, they began to be talked about in the market. If you have the least doubt whether it pays to build a Lord & Burnham house, let us send you tentatively at our expense, to some who own them. See the houses; and talk with their owners. It's one of the surest ways we know of to sell you one of our houses.

POMPONS—There are plenty of them—YES—too many varieties for the growers.

SOME make small sprays—others large ones—costs the same to grow either.

IF you are obliged to put more than six sprays in a 25c. bunch there is no profit to the grower.

THERE is a great difference in the shades of pink, yellow and bronze. SOME are Early, others are Midseason and Late.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Carnations

The second tier of wire string supports will now be needed so the stems will grow straight and some of the taller ones will also soon need the third support. It can be put on just as easily now as later and will not be in the way. Look after the disbudding from now on. Not only will it enlarge the bloom, but it will also help to stiffen the stems. If disbudding is ever needed it is at this season. One great mistake which inexperienced growers often make is to close the ventilators tight in the evening after a bright day, thinking to corral a lot of heat in a house. It is better to run a little more heat and have a crack of air on all night. Plenty of fresh air is the best preventive of disease. It makes no difference whether the temperature is abnormally high or low, fresh air will aid the plants to bear the unnatural conditions.

Care of Palms

Most palms should have plenty of light during the winter, only keeping enough shade so they will not scorch. Do not neglect syringing, and, once a month, give them a good sponging. All palms like a short winter season of rest. This can be brought about by lower temperature and drier atmosphere with less water at the roots. At all seasons of the year they should have as much air as possible according to outside weather conditions.

Pelargoniums

Those that were struck in September will require now or before long a 4-inch pot. Use a compost of fibrous loam three parts and well rotted manure one part somewhat roughly broken up and give plenty of drainage. Give them uniform ventilation whenever possible. These plants like a dry atmosphere. When they have filled their pots with roots they can be given a shift. Fumigate with tobacco smoke regularly once a week. Have the temperature run anywhere from 45 to 50 degrees at night with usual rise during the day. Be very careful and do not apply water until the soil is quite dry.

Next Week:—Asparagus plumosus; Calanthes; Decorative Ferns; Manure for Crops; Propagation.

Propagation of Carnations

Having decided to begin propagating your carnations and having overhauled and whitewashed the bench, filling in the sand is the next step. The whitewash should be thoroughly dried before any sand is put on. Fill in to a depth of about three inches or a little over before it is packed down. It is well to screen all propagating sand to make sure there is no trash of any kind or lumps of clay in it. When packed down it should be two and one-half inches deep. When inserting the cuttings always begin at the back of the bench and work towards you, and when one row is full draw another line to the right of it and one and one-half to two inches away, and begin inserting from the back again. When you have inserted the last cutting then place the label directly in front of it as though it were a cutting. On this label should be written plainly the name of the variety in full and the date they were inserted.

Sweet Peas

Great care is necessary to avoid a too dry or too moist atmosphere. An excess of fire heat and aridity will bring red spider, while opposite conditions with irregular ventilation will just as surely cause an attack of mildew. Give uniform minimum temperature of about 50 degrees. There are no days so cold but some ventilation can be given. On bright days the thermometer can run up to 60 degrees before air is given, and, with free ventilation a shade maximum of 70 degrees is all right. At this season it is safer to underfeed rather than the opposite. Avoid the use of forcing stimulants. Safer foods are cow or sheep manure, applied either in liquid form or as a top-dressing, which can be lightly forked in. The plants are unable to assimilate anything like the same amount of plant food now as two months hence. Tying must be regularly attended to for once any stems become bent the flowers are unsalable.

Double Sweet Alyssum

Stock plants lifted early in the Autumn, and potted should be given a position at about 55 degrees at night. These will later on make fine material for cuttings. They can be propagated in a cool propagating bed.

Good Wishes

According to custom, HORTICULTURE herewith presents its eleventh Annual Greeting to the trade in whose interest it works, with cordial good wishes for a successful and joyous Christmas, and increased prosperity for the New Year which is soon to open. Considering the world-wide disturbed condition of horticultural trade, the year that has passed since we last wished our readers a merry Christmas has not been an altogether bad one, and the commercial enterprises with which we are in touch have, as a rule, weathered the storms in a manner creditable to the stability of the horticultural industries and full of promise for a brilliant future. The signs are certainly auspicious for a greatly improved business this season, as anyone whose work brings him close to the active and farseeing men who set the pace for the different departments of commercial horticulture must already have convincingly learned. We hope the realization will not fall short but far exceed the promise which now appears so bright in contrast with the somewhat gloomy outlook of one year ago.

One province of the flower show

Commendable activity is observed in the office of the Secretary of the S. A. F. in the preparatory work for the Fourth National Flower Show at Philadelphia as indicated in the prospectus of special prizes appearing in this issue. We are particularly pleased to note the special effort made by the American Carnation Society to bring out exhibits which shall demonstrate the popular uses to which the divine flower may be put. This is one very essential province of the flower show, that it may accomplish its object as an educator of the people of the crowded town in the knowledge of and appreciation for Nature's products, to proclaim the gospel of beauty and to arouse a universal desire to brighten life by the possession of these gems of the florists' art. In the years to come the flower show is destined to fill a very prominent part in the great uplift work in which the gardener and florist and Nature work hand in hand and no means should be neglected which may encourage the use of flowers in the home, for personal adornment, as tributes of affection between friends and as an approved accompaniment for all occasions, public or private, which draw people together. HORTICULTURE has from the first considered this one of its chief duties to the art and to the craft, to make our flower shows recognized exponents not only of advanced cultural skill but of good taste and appropriateness in the arrangement and use of the material we exhibit.

Still Improving

Anybody who had been thinking that the limit of development in certain classes of florists' flowers, such as the roses, carnations and chrysanthemums, had been reached, and who took opportunity to attend a few of the fall flower shows, must have found there sufficient evidence to the contrary to modify his previous conclusions. At the exhibitions and in other places that have come under our notice we have seen enough to convince us in regard to these three specialties that among the novelties now ready or soon to be put out there are varieties that in one or more respects will show a material advance over the older sorts. In the development of the forcing rose we think we can see a greater evolution going on than in any of the other florists' flowers. Without specifying varieties, we can discern distinct advances in the qualities of fragrance, form, persistence and uniformity of bloom and the welcome extended by the public to the diminutive flowered classes shows a gratifying tendency to break away somewhat from the monotonous preference for bigness which prevailed in times past. The same is equally true in regard to the chrysanthemum, as evinced in the rapidly growing appreciation of the smaller flowered types and this popularity is being handsomely stimulated in the way of pompons and singles of purer colors, better formed flowers and improved habit of growth for cutting. In the carnation, the most welcome advance appears to be on a line imperatively needed if the carnation is to retain its place in the flower market—that of inherent good keeping quality after being cut. If the hybridists can do this and, retaining all the other good points characteristic of the modern carnation, restore this grand old trait which had so much to do with the popularity of the pioneer sorts, the building of more carnation houses can go on without fear of over-production.

Grevillea robusta

The Grevillea is a valuable decorative plant because of its graceful, grayish foliage. The plant is a native of Australia and in nature attains a height of 150 feet. It is used in California and Florida as a shade tree. Some species make useful timber trees. It is a very rapid grower and will stand a considerable amount of drouth. It will also stand some frost.

In the north, it is used in window boxes, baskets, and other receptacles and is a good conservatory plant. For decorative purposes, the plant is seldom used over five feet in height. After it attains this height the lower leaves begin to drop off and the plant begins to become ragged looking.

The Grevillea is propagated mostly by seed sown late in winter or in spring (March). As soon as they are large enough to handle, the young plants should be transplanted into small pots and shifted as they grow. When they reach the three-inch size, plunge them to the rims in a frame until they are ready for the five-inch pots. The plants will stand much hard usage and neglect and will not need to be shaded. They require frequent repotting as they are rapid growers. A cool temperature is best for them—say 50 degrees. It does not pay to carry the old stock over from year to year and fresh stock should be propagated every year. The one-year-old plants make the best specimens, but rapidly deteriorate in decorative value after that.

There are two varieties of G. robusta—pyramidalis and Fosteri. The latter has silvery foliage with red instead of yellow flowers and it is also a stronger grower. G. Banksii and G. glabrata are used to some extent in Europe, but in this country G. robusta is practically the only one grown.

A Christmas Story With a Moral

For generations, national, state and local agencies upheld by the pro rata contribution from every one of us, have been working hard to increase production in horticulture. Production increases of course; how about distribution?

What's the use of production without distribution? We don't seem to move much on the distribution proposition.

For instance: (This is the story) We called on one of our best growers one day and suggested that in view of the fact that he had one of the finest lots of well-grown stock, well finished and just right for the market, he ought to advertise it. He looked at us with that super-wise air, and said, George, we don't have to advertise. Good goods sell themselves!

Good goods sell themselves? My lord! More people have fallen by the wayside on that fallacy than anything else I can think of. Good goods do not sell themselves. If you have the good goods haven't you got to tell people about it? There are very many ways to do this. You can send men out on the road; you can exhibit; you can use many different ways—the cost of same being all a charge on distribution.

The late Godfrey Aschmann once told me: (This is the moral) that he could go anywhere around this old city and buy first-class well-grown stuff from growers who did not advertise, for twenty-five cents and sell it for a dollar. Did that show that good goods sold themselves? No sir. It showed that the good advertiser was the fellow that sold the goods and reaped the lion's share of the profit, and it's not only people like Aschmann but every big house. They advertise, spend their good money and get the trade. When they see a bargain they are quite justified in picking it up because they have the outlet which the non-advertiser hasn't.

The science and practice of distribution is the big thing for the trade to get busy on at this minute. Production without its corollary is no good. And don't forget that the cost of distribution may be as great if not much greater than the cost of production. What a thing costs to produce has nothing to do with the cost of marketing it.

You can't divorce the two propositions, production and distribution. Advertising is just as much one of the legitimate costs of production as food and clothes for the kid until it is able to earn its own living.

If you have a good thing you must tell them about it—and to buy a thousand tongues you must remember that the laborer is worthy of his hire.

Some sermon! Wishing you all a Merry Xmas.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Lining the Boxes

With the first fall of snow here and there, and the thermometer standing around 22 in the morning, boxes will need to have more paper in them when shipping to the market. Make sure to get the paper into the corners well, as it is there where the cold will work in as a rule. It will be a good idea to order some heavy wrapping paper so that the boxes can be wrapped on the outside when severe weather comes along. Paper is not very expensive, and roses are worth quite a little money and will be worth more as the holidays come around. When packing it is well to lift the roses out of the jars so as to shake off a good deal of the water which would stick to the stems. This water would soak the paper lining. Cold will penetrate the wet paper very easily.

Soil for the Season's Potting

If this has not been put under cover or covered up as yet it should be done at once for it may not be long before the ground will freeze up, and even if it did thaw out again the work will not be as easy or as pleasant to do later. Straw, leaves, cornstalks, any of these can be used but the best will be coarse horse manure. This will keep the soil much cleaner, and it is much warmer than straw or leaves alone. The same is true of sand. If there is a sand pit on the place cover up a part of it so that you can get to the sand even in the most severe weather. If a storage house is to be had so much the better but it must be right near the greenhouses so that the extra handling of the soil and sand would not be too expensive.

The Xmas Rush

The prospect for good business is much better this year than it has been for several years past. With the holidays only a fortnight away it is high time to see that everything is ready and orders placed for greens so that there will be no confusion when all the customers will want to get their flowers at the one time. Growers who do not bother doing any retail work will miss a good deal of fun and some money, as often many roses can be sold to much better advantage to the home trade than they could be in the wholesale market and the selling cost is not very large—practically nothing in most places. A little good advertising in the local papers will help wonderfully in developing this trade. In doing this do not adopt the bargain counter kind of advertising. Flowers are one of God's greatest gifts to man and they should be treated as something sacred. Then, too, there are so many ads. in the papers that are never read only when people happen to be in the market for certain articles. Have your ad. written neatly and well. Speak of the quality of the flowers, the joy they bring, rather than the price. Make your ad. an oasis on the desert of advertising, for then the eye will be attracted to it at once and the ad. will be read through before the readers realize that it is an advertisement. It is different when advertising to the trade as it is best then to say what you have to sell and the price. But with retail trade it is different, and the grower or retailer who realizes this will get most out of his investment and not an expense and a well advertised name and business is one of the greatest assets any one can have. Needless to say the goods must be there to back up the ads. and so must the service, as these win the confidence of the readers and customers.

Damage by Thrips

Mr. Arthur Ruzicka:

Dear Sir—Am a most interested reader of your notes on rose growing in HORTICULTURE, and as I see you answer questions of readers, am venturing a request for information. I have some apparently good bushes of outdoor roses, white ones, variety unknown, that seem to wish to bear pretty good blooms, but the buds never materialize perfectly. They always have a brown, chewed up sort of look when they come out. It is evidently not an insect; a neighbor thinks it is a blight. Now is that a good enough description to mean anything to you, and if so can you give me any hints as to what to do? I have come into possession of a lot of rather old, neglected bushes and want to see if I can make anything good out of them. Might it be best to simply cut down these no-account bushes and start new good ones, or shall I give them a chance?

Tryon, N. C.

C. M. B.

The trouble with your buds is caused by thrips, very small insects that delight in attacking the best roses that grow. As near as I can tell there are several species, some of which are so small as to be invisible without the aid of a microscope. To rid the buds and plants of these, spray with Aphine every day early in the morning until the rose buds show signs of improvement. Then spray three times a week. It will also be of advantage to spray and keep the plants well sprayed with brown sugar dissolved in water, with a little paris green added to it. The amount of the poison should not be very large, as it is very apt to burn some of the leaves. About one-half a teaspoonful to a gallon of water will be plenty. This spray should be applied after every rain or right after watering in the morning, as water will wash this off and the object is to keep the spray there all the time so that the thrips will eat it, and of course if they do so once they will not do so again. We prefer the brown sugar to the white granulated for the former has an odor which the latter lacks. In using Aphine it is well to direct the spray right on the buds as it is a contact poison and must touch the insects it is to kill. Do all spraying early in the morning before the sun gets hot and make sure that the soil is plenty wet enough around the roots of the plants. Regarding the old rose bushes you mention I would certainly give them a chance for there are some nice varieties in these old collections at times. To insure an abundance of roses, I would recommend planting plenty of new ones besides, so that there will be no disappointment.

VALUABLE SHRUBS FOR THE AUTUMN GARDEN

FROM THE ARNOLD ARBORETUM BULLETIN.

Evonymus Bungeanus, which has been an inhabitant of the Arboretum for thirty years, deserves more general cultivation than it has yet received in this country. It is a small tree or treelike shrub with slender rather pendulous branches and narrow, pointed, pale green leaves, which turn yellow or yellow and red, but the great beauty of this plant is in the rose-colored fruit which every year is produced in great quantities and remains on the branches for several weeks after the leaves have fallen, making this native of northern China a desirable plant for the autumn garden.

Evonymus lanceifolius. This shrub, which is one of Wilson's introductions from western China, promises to become a valuable garden plant in this climate. On the mountains of western China it grows as a large bush or occasionally as a tree, and is sometimes fifty feet high with a tall trunk nearly a foot in diameter. In the Arboretum it is perfectly hardy and is now a bush from three to four feet tall and broad, covered with bright scarlet fruit and leaves which partly turn to shades of orange and red. In the size and brilliancy of the fruit few of the plants of this group equal this Chinese species.

Evonymus yedoensis. After the leaves have fallen from this Japanese plant in the Evonymus Group, the large rose-colored fruits which cover the naked branches make it one of the conspicuous plants in the Arboretum.

Evonymus semipersistens. There is a large specimen of this little known Chinese plant in the collection. Fruit of this Evonymus has no ornamental value for it is small and hidden by the foliage, and its value is found in the persistence of the leaves which remain perfectly green and do not fall until December. This is one of the handsomest of the shrubs in the Arboretum which retain their foliage, without change in color until the beginning of winter. Such plants are valuable in the autumn garden to contrast with plants of brilliant autumn coloring. Another valuable plant for this purpose is Magnolia glauca, the Sweet Bay of the Atlantic and Gulf Coast regions from Massachusetts to Texas, with bright shining leaves which are silvery white on the lower surface and will not become discolored or fall until December. Attention has often been called in these Bulletins to the value of this tree in New England gardens. Few deciduous-leaved trees have more beautiful and more sistent foliage; the cup-shaped creamy white flowers continue to open during at least two months of early summer and fill the air with their abundant fragrance, and the fruit, like that of all the Magnolias, is interesting and handsome when the bright red seeds hang from it on slender threads.

Ligustrum vulgare. This is the European Privet and another plant which retains its dark green leaves well into the winter. During the last twenty or thirty years much attention has been paid by botanists and gardeners to the Privets of Eastern Asia where many species have been discovered. None of these, however, are as valuable in this climate as the European species, which is perhaps the handsomest here of all black-fruited shrubs. The bright shining fruit is borne in compact clusters which are on the ends of the branches and stand up well above the dark green lustrous leaves; they remain on the plants during the early winter months and after the leaves have fallen. During the first half of the nineteenth century this Privet was a common garden plant in the northern United States where it was much used in hedges; and it is now sparingly naturalized in the northern and middle states. There are several forms of this Privet in cultivation, including one yellow fruit (var. chlorocarpum) which can now be seen covered with fruit in the Shrub Collection. The variety foliolosum is also growing here; this has rather narrower leaves and larger fruits than the common form and at this season of the year is one of the handsomest plants in the Arboretum.

Myrica carolinensis. This is the common Wax Myrtle of the northern United States and one of the plants which holds its dark green shining leaves very late in the autumn without change of color. The plants are covered with their small gray fruits, unlike in color those of any other plant hardy in this climate. Naturally the Wax Myrtle grows on sterile sandy soil and, spreading into wide masses, makes attractive thousands of acres of barren fields during several months of the year. The Wax Myrtle takes kindly to cultivation; in good soil it grows rapidly and forms a tall round-headed shrub, and it can be used with advantage to cover soil so poor that few plants can be kept alive in it. From the waxy substance which covers the seeds of this shrub and that of the arborescent Myrica cerifera of the southern coast early settlers in America made wax candles which are still occasionally produced in some parts of Cape Cod where Myrica carolinensis grows in immense quantities.

Lonicera Maackii, var. podocarpa. Of the plants in the Arboretum conspicuous for the beauty of their fruit in autumn none perhaps is more beautiful than this Honeysuckle which was introduced by Wilson from central China. It is a large, vigorous and hardy shrub with wide-spreading branches and open habit. The flowers are larger than this of most Honeysuckles and are white and in one form white slightly tinged with rose color. The period of the greatest beauty of this plant, however, is late October, when it is still covered with bright green leaves and the large scarlet lustrous fruits are only just ripe. The type of this species, Lonicera Maackii, is a native of eastern Siberia and is an old inhabitant of the Arboretum. It is a narrow shrub with stems more erect than those of the form from central China. The flowers are pure white, and more beautiful than those of the Chinese plant, but the fruit which is now ripe is smaller, and the leaves have already fallen.

Ribes fasciculatum, var. chinense. This Chinese Currant is interesting because it is the only species here with fruit which does not ripen until late in the autumn. The beauty of the scarlet fruit is increased, too, at this time by the color of the leaves which turn to bright shades of orange and scarlet.

Evonymus radicans, var. vegetus. Attention is again called to this form of a well known plant from Japan, fruit pale yellow or nearly white, and as it ripens the bright orange color of the seeds is displayed. This northern variety is the best for general cultivation in this climate as it appears to be hardier than more southern forms; the leaves are broader and it flowers and fruits much more freely; indeed it is the only form which produces much fruit in the Arboretum and the fruit adds greatly to the beauty of the plants. Like the other vigorous growing varieties it may be grown against a wall to which it clings firmly or as a broad, round-headed bush. There is a form of this Evonymus with leaves hardly a quarter of an inch long and known both as var. minimus and as var. kewensis which appears to be still little known in the United States. It is a good plant for the rock garden and for the margins of garden walks. The form from western China discovered by Wilson, var. acutus, has narrower pointed leaves distinctly veined below. Here in the Arboretum the plants of this form lie flat on the ground and show no tendency to rise and form a bush. They have proved perfectly hardy but have not flowered yet. If this form retains in cultivation the prostrate stems of its present state it may prove an excellent subject for covering the ground under trees and shrubs.

Asiatic Crabapples. Many of these small trees and shrubs have been well covered with fruit this year. When the whole group is considered few plants are more valuable for garden decoration in this climate if attention is paid to keeping them free from the scale insects which are destructive to all plants of the Apple tribe. All the Asiatic Crabs are perfectly hardy; they grow quickly in good soil, and many of them begin to flower and produce fruit when only a few years old. No plants are more beautiful at the end of May when they are covered with their countless pink and white flowers; and on some of them the fruit is showy and long persistent. A few of the conspicuous plants are Malus ringo with yellow fruit, interesting as the plant from which the Apple cultivated in China has been derived, and the only Apple cultivated in Japan until recent years; Malus floribunda and the hybrid raised in the Arboretum from that species, Malus Arnoldiana, with yellow fruits; Malus zumi and M. Sargentii from Japan with bright scarlet fruit; the latter is the only Apple which is shrubby in habit. Interesting, too, is the form of the Japanese Malus toringo from northern China with small fruits yellow on some plants and red on others. These are only a few of the plants in this large collection which at this time deserve careful study.

CATTLEYSAS FOR CUT FLOWERS

It is a well established fact that the trade for orchid bloom has not suffered to the same extent as that of many other classes of flowers at the hands of the price-cutting competitor; for the greater part of the year the demand for first-class Cattleya blooms is in excess of the supply. (Hardly holds true in the U. S. now, Ed.) Certain it is that there are periods when returns are lower than usual, as, for instance, at the height of the flowering season of Cattleya Mossiæ, but, as a rule, this state of things does not last for long, and when once the back of this crop is broken there is a rise to the normal and more satisfactory prices.

The cause of this fall is, no doubt, the great quantity of flowers of this particular species that find their way into the markets, mainly due to the large importations of collected pieces which have reached these shores during recent years, often to be sold at very low figures, thus causing a glut of flowers in their season. But even then it is a question whether the crop is not remunerative. It is seldom that a lower figure than 6s. ($1.50) per dozen is reached even on a chance sale, and although cases have been known where returns have been lower than this they can only be reckoned as rare exceptions.

Anyone contemplating taking up this interesting and attractive branch of the trade would do well to pay very careful attention to the stocking of the houses, for by this means only can the desired result be brought about. No haphazard buying of plants must be tolerated, but each purchase be made in accordance with a fixed plan of getting together such a stock of plants, both species and hybrids, as will maintain a regular and even supply of flowers throughout the year. This is one of the chief items towards establishing and holding a successful market and shop trade; the grower should, by careful selection, build up his stock in accordance with this idea.

Although it is upon species that we must rely for the bulk of flowers, yet judicious selections of quantities of hybrids should be introduced with a view to filling in the otherwise inevitable blank periods between the respective flowering seasons. Such hybrids may be picked up very reasonably now, as owing to the great advance made by hybridists during recent years many of the old-time good things are of little more value than ordinary Lælia and Cattleya species. Strong and healthy pieces only should be purchased, whether established or freshly imported, and it is advisable to invest as much as possible in imported stuff, for there is always the chance of getting one or two really good things, which, if well disposed of, might pay for the whole consignment or a large part thereof.

To a large extent the sale for Orchid bloom is a bespoke trade, and, speaking generally, there is room for a better supply during the autumn and winter months. It is at these periods and during early spring that prices rule higher than otherwise. A good stock of Cattleya Gaskelliana, labiata, Trianae, and any hybrids flowering about the same time, should be grown. As regards prices realized for individual species, Cattleya Warscewiczii (C. gigas of the trade) takes the lead, although this good point is handicapped by its shyness of flowering. The variety Sanderiana is more free in this respect than the type. One great mistake made with this species by many amateurs is the use of too heavy shading material during the growing and flowering periods. When the growths are well advanced only sufficient shade to prevent actual scorching of the foliage should be applied, and all means employed to obtain that hard and leathery texture of both pseudo-bulbs and leaves as is seen on newly imported plants. This condition can only be brought about by thorough ripening with a maximum of air and light. Therefore, this species should be allotted either a separate house or a complete portion of one. Other plants, less adapted to withstanding such extremes, can then receive their requisite treatment. I make no pretence at giving any very explicit instructions as to growing Cattleyas, but I would like, en passant, to record an opinion that many a man, otherwise a first-class grower, is far too lavish with his shading and watering pot. In justification of this statement I would call attention to the weak and sappy nature of a large proportion of the plants offered for sale in our orchid auction rooms.

Many Lælio-Cattleyas, apart from their usefulness as inter-season flowering plants, are strongly recommended on account of their floriferous nature, as, for instance, many Lælia purpurata hybrids, of which callisoglossa and Canhamiana are well-known examples. It is advisable to avoid any large quantities of species or hybrids of other colors than mauve, pink, or white with colored lips, for which there is always a sure demand at one price or another, whereas yellow and similar shades are more often than not a chance trade pure and simple. Cattleya Dowiana and C. aurea might, perhaps, be classed as an exception to this rule, as they generally sell on sight, but it is questionable whether there would ever be that sure demand for this gorgeous member of the aristocracy of the floral world as exists for those of mauve tints.—A. R. M., The Orchid World, London.

SOCIETY of AMERICAN FLORISTS

Fourth National Flower Show, Philadelphia,
March 25 to April 2, 1916.

With a view to adding to the attraction of some of the display classes, the schedule committee last week decided to increase the prizes in the class covering Rose Gardens to $1,000, offering $500 as first, $300 as second, and $200 as third prizes. The prizes in the class for display of rose plants to cover 200 sq. ft. of space, have been increased from $125 and $75 to $200 and $100.

Special Prizes.

The second preliminary schedule has just been mailed. It comprises 44 pages, and the prizes offered approximate $20,000. It is the largest schedule ever put out for a flower show in America. Many of the prizes offered by outside interests appear in the new edition. Quite a number of classes are underwritten by Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Henry F. Michell Co., Phila., Hosea Waterer, Phila., W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Phila., and Zanderberger Bros., Valkenburg, Holland. Other donors of special prizes noted are Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit; Harry Balsley, Detroit; H. G. Berning, St. Louis; Hugh B. Barclay, Marion, Pa.; Emil Buettner, Park Ridge, Ill.; John Cook, Baltimore; Eugene Dailedouze, Brooklyn, N. Y.; J. H. Dunlop, Toronto; W. H. Elliott, Brighton, Mass.; A. Farenwald, Roslyn, Pa.; Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C.; Geo. B. Hart, Rochester, N. Y.; Hess & Swoboda, Omaha, Neb.; Benj. Hammond, Beacon, N. Y.; A. H. Hews Co., Cambridge, Mass.; Wm. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.; Leo Niessen Co., Phila.; Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, Detroit; J. A. Peterson & Sons, Cincinnati; S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Phila.; A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; M. Rice Company, Phila.; Max Schling, New York; U. S. Cut Flower Co., Elmira, N. Y.; Mrs. Chas. Wheeler, Bryn Mawr, Pa.; Anton C. Zvolanek, Lompoc, Cal. Other special prizes have been received and will find places in the final schedule.

Rose Rules.

Exhibitors of roses in both commercial and private classes are reminded that under a new rule of the American Rose Society, all roses with more than two growths (one pinch) will be disqualified, excepting in the classes calling for displays, and for 100 or more blooms in a vase, when two pinches will be allowed. The rose section as prepared by the American Rose Society, contains an unusually liberal list of premiums, which aggregate considerably over $4000. Almost all the variety of roses used commercially as cut flowers are classed, and new varieties are provided for; while Perpetuals, Teas, Wichuraianas and Polyanthas, and their hybrids, grown in pots and tubs, are amply provided for.

Carnation Classes.

There is a liberal schedule prepared by the American Carnation Society covering carnations. The prizes for display covering 150 sq. ft. are $200, $150 and $100. Prizes of $50, $35 and $15 are offered for vase of carnations, not to exceed 300 blooms, one or more varieties, greens and ribbons allowed.

The retail classes in the carnation section are somewhat novel. In the class for table decorations, $50 will be awarded to each table scoring not less than 90 points, $40 to each table scoring not less than 80 points, and $30 to each table scoring not less than 70 points. Another class covers basket arrangements, and the same idea prevails as to awards; $25 will be awarded to each arrangement scoring not less than 90 points, $20 to each arrangement scoring not less than 80 points, and $15 to each arrangement scoring not less than 70 points. But only six entries will be accepted in either of these classes. Immediately following the judging, the secretary will remove the entry cards from all the exhibits in these classes, and only the regulation display cards as prescribed by the management will be permitted on the displays. The reason for this ruling is obvious to retailers. The carnation display will really form the "Jubilee Exhibition" of the American Carnation Society, celebrating the society's 25th anniversary, and in commemoration of it the society offers its special Silver Jubilee Medal for award to each winner of one or more first premiums in the vase classes.

Sweet Peas, Etc.

The American Sweet Pea Society includes a schedule covering standard winter orchid-flowering varieties and 1915 novelties. Notable in this section are the classes covering the Burpee prizes for the largest display of Winter or Summer-flowering, or both, and the Zvolanek prizes for the best and largest collection of Winter-flowering Grandiflora and Orchid Sweet Peas, all correctly named, varieties introduced prior to 1916. Liberal prizes are offered for retailers' exhibits.

The American Gladiolus Society aims for a display of forced blooms at this show, and has prepared a section of the schedule calling for about $300 in prizes.

In the plant sections very little change has been made, the provisions made therein having been considered ample.

Copies of the Second Preliminary Schedule may be had on application to John Young, Secretary, 53 W. 28th Street, New York.

NEW YORK INTERNATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

April 5 to 12, 1916.

What will be something of an innovation at Flower Shows will be the class added to the Premium Schedule for the forthcoming show in the Grand Central Palace, New York, covering a window box, of wood, to contain flowering plants of a nature to last through summer, outdoors. The first prize, $25, is offered by Miss Georgie Wayne Day, of New York. Louis Sherry, the well-known restaurateur, has offered, through A. L. Miller, a $100 cup, to be awarded in the discretion of the committee. The Hotel Astor, also through Mr. Miller, offers a $50 cup. Emile W. Savoy, of Secaucus, N. J., offers $25 sweepstakes for the best specimen Bougainvillea, open class.

There is still a good supply of copies of the Preliminary Schedule on hand. Any one interested, not in possession of a copy, should make application for one to John Young, Secretary, 53 W. 28th street, New York.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF GARDENERS.

A bright sunshiny day following a spell of bleak wintry weather greeted the members of the National Association of Gardeners on the opening of their annual Convention at Boston, Mass., on Thursday, December 9. The opening session at Horticultural Hall convened at 2 P. M. and when the meeting was called to order by Mr. Farquhar he had a good sized and enthusiastic audience before him, including a liberal representation from points more or less distant.

The meeting was opened with a cordial welcoming address by President J. K. M. L. Farquhar of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, telling of the work and aims of this time-honored organization and its dependence upon the gardener as the advance guard of the art of horticulture. He then introduced His Honor Mayor Curley of Boston, who spoke enthusiastically and eloquently of Boston's Park System and told of his observations on his recent trip to the Pacific Coast, where, at San Diego, San Francisco, Portland and Chicago, he learned that all the splendid public reservations of those cities had been laid out by a Boston firm, the Olmsted Brothers. He invited the visitors to enjoy a visit through the Boston Park System on Friday, and aroused much enthusiasm when he told of the plans for the proposed horticultural building and winter garden in the Fenway. John H. Dillon, chairman of the Boston Park Commission, ably seconded the Mayor's graceful welcome and paid a nice tribute to the position and influence of the gardening fraternity.

Mr. Farquhar then turned over the meeting to President J. W. Everitt of the Association, who made a brief address, thanking the previous speakers for their generous welcome and told of the objects of the Association of which he had the honor to be chief officer, an association which is still young but which has great opportunities for future usefulness and proposes to benefit the profession in all that it undertakes. Sec. M. C. Ebel followed with a report of the business and standing of the Association.

Election of officers followed the reading of the treasurer's report. W. N. Craig, of Brookline, Mass., was nominated for president and there being no other nominee Mr. Craig was unanimously elected. M. C. Ebel was also re-elected secretary by a unanimous vote. Full detailed report of the remaining proceedings and the auto ride through the park system and to several of the leading private gardens and the Farquhar nurseries in Dedham on Friday will appear in our next issue.

There were a number of interesting exhibits, including the following: A. H. Hews & Co., Cambridge, Mass., Flower Pots; John Scheepers & Co., New York, Lily bulbs, Astilbes and Ferns; Littlefield & Wyman, North Abington,

A meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was held on Saturday, December 4. The special committee on the award of the George Robert White Medal of Honor for the year 1915 reported the name of Ernest Henry Wilson. I.; Lester Morse, San Francisco, Cal.; George W. Kerr, Doylestown, Pa.; A. T. Boddington, W. A. Sperling, J. Harrison Dick and Secretary H. A. Bunyard, all of New York City. FLORISTS' CLUB OF PHILADELPHIA.

A well attended meeting of this club was held on Dec. 7th to listen to a spirited debate between Charles H. Grakelow and W. Frank Therkildson on "Is it wise for the producer to depend entirely on the retailer in marketing his products." Some excellent points were brought out on both sides, all of them of educative value, especially to the younger element. In addition to this much wit and merriment prevailed and a very enjoyable evening was spent and the members could hardly believe their eyes when the clock showed quarter of eleven at the wind-up. In addition to the debate a lively discussion took place on how to get more members, and the outcome of that was the suspension of the entrance fee for three months so that we can have a whirlwind campaign for a thousand new members by next Easter.

The Cornwalls Orchard Farm exhibited a new variegated carnation. Wieland & Risch of Chicago sent a fine vase of their new rose Champ Wieland. S. J. Reuter & Son of Westerly, R. I., exhibited their new light yellow rose Mrs. H. T. Hillas and Chas. H. Totty sent Gorgeous, a light pink rose of fine form. Both the latter were staged by the Pennock-Meehan Co. The Zieger Co. staged some remarkable white and pink double bouvardia with stems 18 inches long. Florex Gardens made an excellent exhibit of rose Prima Donna (Mme. P. Euler.)

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

E. W. Breed, of Clinton, for the past four years president of the Worcester County (Mass.) Horticultural Society, declined re-election to that office Wednesday evening at the annual meeting of that society. The logical candidate for that office is the senior vice-president, Arthur J. Marble.

Walter R. Siebrecht, of New York City, was a guest of the Horticultural Club of Boston at its December meeting. The banquet table was resplendent with carnations from S. J. Goddard including some superb Dorner seedlings and a vase of Mignonette Farquhar's Universal, also grown by Mr. Goddard.

EXHIBIT OF WILCOX & SONS AT THE HOUSTON SHOW

FLORISTS AS ADVERTISERS AND BOOKKEEPERS

(By A. F. Koehle, Sherman, Texas.)

We are all more or less loose in handling our advertising and book-keeping but we should not be. What is the use of growing a splendid lot of stock unless one has a means in view of letting the trade, be it wholesale or retail, know what he has? What is the use of selling if one hasn't a system of book-keeping to keep proper record of the sales, not only to know where you stand financially, but for future reference to know what quantity to grow the coming year; thereby eliminating that awful pest of both retailer and wholesaler—gluts—and then find you have to run to some department store to unload it? A preventive for these gluts, which also means a preventive of antagonism among brother florists, can be sifted down and controlled by the two means in this subject:

1st. Advertise judiciously and insistently. There are poor ways of advertising as well as good ones, and best results can not be obtained without careful study. Select a medium which you know reaches the most desirable customers, make your ad. brief and to the point and above all make your opening display interesting and attractive. Put yourself in the public's place. How many ads. do you read that are not started with some catchy phrase? Unless one is looking for that certain line of stock there are very few people who pick up a paper to find out who is selling flowers the cheapest or what the most seasonable flower is. It is up to us to catch their eye and make them see "who is who" in the flower and plant line. Last Valentine's Day I decided to use a slide in all the picture shows in town. One can obtain these slides at the office of our daily paper. Being well acquainted with the advertising manager of this paper, he asked me why I didn't use his paper for an ad. I told him I thought the shows would reach more people. His only reply was "Then why do the picture shows in this town use one whole sheet of my paper to advertise their shows, if your theory works out? I told him those visiting the shows mighty near had to read the ads. when thrown on the screen, while they would never look at them in a paper. He replied that if my ad. was overlooked it was my fault and not the paper's, and I guess he was about right. However, we have found the following: Picture show good, leading papers better and direct advertising best. The last named we have worked down to a very fine point. We have tried some of the various folders that are now on the market but find our own letters pay best and we attribute the enormous growth of our business to this means.

In sending out circular communications for any special day, we prepare these letters—one to be addressed to the married men, one to the single men and one to the ladies who entertain. Each letter is carefully filled in with typewriter, signed with pen and mailed under two cent postage. Of course we endeavor at all times to make these letters attractive and brief. For our mailing list locally, we use the City Directory, carefully marked by someone who is well acquainted in the city. In fact, we have as many as three different clerks check over this list, all of whom are well acquainted in the city, so as to get a very complete list of those persons most likely to purchase flowers. We also use these same letters for our out-of-town customers, using lists of names furnished us by our local agents in the different towns.

Now as to our out-of-town advertising. All ads. of this kind should of course be keyed, and all inquiries received carefully recorded and followed up. For keeping record of the number of inquiries and of sales through our different advertising mediums, we use a monthly card for each paper. When an inquiry is received, the name is recorded on a 3x5 card, marked at the top with the numbers from 1 to 31 and a clip placed on the number corresponding to the date on which the inquiry should be followed up. When a sale is made it is duly recorded on this card, and the card then placed in "Sold File" for future reference and for future advertising. Repeat orders are where our profits come. The first order frequently is not of sufficient importance to reimburse us for what it cost to secure, but a satisfied customer is the very best advertisement, and we endeavor at all times to please, for we know if we "sell satisfaction our goods will sell themselves." Advertising is worth little if we don't back it up with A1 quality, the best of service and the most pleasing courtesy. One might think it takes considerable capital and time to carry on this line of direct advertising but such is not the case. If you are not fortunate enough to have the use of a typewriter or any of the machines now on the market for this purpose, all you need is pen, ink, paper, envelopes and stamps. There is a druggist in our city, and by the way one of the leading ones, who follows this method of advertising by the following means. Between the days, he has in mind to use his letters, all his spare time (and we all have much of it) he writes his letters with pen (bear in mind he has a typewriter and multigraph too) but prefers a personally penned letter signed by himself, and he advises me it brings big returns. Another very important item to bear in mind is to select some slogan suggestive of your business or special line if you have one, and use it always. You will find it will not be long until it is a by-word with all your customers as well as new customers. We use one in our local advertising, and we contract with the leading paper here for a number of local ads. to run the whole year through and scattered it over various parts of the paper. All we used in these locals was our slogan—"When you think of Flowers think of us" and unless you have tried it you have no idea how much attention it attracts. It will pay any one to try it. In conclusion on this part of my subject I would say Advertise, and advertise lots, but do it judiciously and carefully.

2nd. Book-keeping—so much can be said about this and so many of us florists need to be hammered and pounded so hard on this point, I scarcely know where to begin. It embraces so much of our line that most of us think it does not require any book-keeping, in which we are very badly mistaken. Most of us can tell any time about how much we owe or how much is due to come in, but how many can go to their books and tell which line of stock paid best for the past year? I don't mean guess at it, but in actual figures. While our floral department is not kept separate on our books, it is kept in such a way that at any time we can see just where this department stands. For the general book-keeping of the Company we keep an account for everything—for instance all improvements are charged to a separate account, likewise the following items—interest, implements, live stock, growing, purchase, and so on. Every individual thing has an account of its own on our books; then when a sale of these various things is made, it is credited to that account, so that any time we wish we can see just how that department stands, how much we have in it and what we are getting from it. Of course most florists do not need so large a system as ours, but we would suggest something like this for even the smallest general sales account, cut flowers, advertising, purchasing, flower store account, greenhouse account, improvement, plant purchases, delivery account, live stock or auto account, supplies, etc. Whatever item is a factor in the conduct of the business ought to be on your books, that you may refer to it at any time, and be able to tell how deep you are into it and put on the check valve if getting an overload. It would be hard for me to state just what one should keep, and each one should be able to tell which are the more important items to keep, but above all—start right now even if on only a part of the items, and you will like it so well at the end of the year that I am sure you will have a perfect bookkeeping system thereafter; and without much extra expense or trouble. Each year you will be able to see where you can improve on it and make it clearer and easier to keep. There are lots of ways and forms on which to keep these records, but to most of us these need considerable explanation to keep properly, and the busy florist hasn't the time to take a course in such things. I believe it is best to work out a system of one's own and by his own experience he will gradually improve on it, until he has a plain, neat, compact system, that will be a pride to himself as well as a pleasure to all whom he may have any occasion to show or tell it to. The most satisfactory system of bookkeeping is the double entry system, which, as its name implies, requires two entries for each transaction. This may sound like too much work to do, but by it one can always tell if all items have been posted in the proper amounts. There are only two fundamental rules to be followed to carry out this system, and they are, "all items, cash, flowers, merchandise, or whatsoever we may 'take in' go on the credit side of the proper account, and all items paid out or sent out, go on the debit side of the proper account." The other rule is based on the same principle and is "for every debit there must be a corresponding credit, and conversely for every credit there must be a corresponding debit." For instance—we will send to our flower store a dozen American Beauty roses; we debit our Flower Store Account 1 doz. A. B. roses $3.00, we credit our Greenhouse Sales Account by 1 doz. A. B. roses to F. Store $3.00. Our Flower Store sells these to Mrs. John Doe for $5.00, so we credit Flower Store Sales Account by $5.00 and charge Mrs. John Doe's account 1 doz. A. B. roses $5.00. Later Mrs. John Doe sends us a check, so we credit her account $5.00 and charge Cash Account $5.00.

Thus by charging the proper or selected accounts with the items properly belonging thereon, and crediting these accounts with all items belonging thereon, one is able to determine if it is profitable to run an uptown flower store, or to hire delivery men, or to know out of which flowers profits are made, etc.

In conclusion of these subjects, would say the moral of all this talk is "Don't hide your light under a bushel," but let it shine by careful, judicious advertising and reflect upon the pages of a perfect bookkeeping system.

PHILIPPINE ORCHIDS AT SAN FRANCISCO.

The collection of orchids in charge of W. E. Eglinton, representing the Philippine Islands, has been awarded the grand prize, the highest award, by the superior jury of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. We are advised that about ten million people have passed through the orchid house where many plants were in flower all the time from April till August. This collection is to be sold after the fair is over.

KEEP GOING.

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Is the goal distant, and troubled the road,
And the way long,
And heavy the load?
Then gird up your courage and say, "I am strong."
And keep going!

Is the work weary and endless the grind,
And petty the pay?
Then brace up your mind,
And say, "Something better is coming my way."
And keep doing!

Is the drink bitter life pours in your cup—
Is the taste gall?
Then smile and look up,
And say, "God is with me whatever be fall."
And keep trusting!

Is the heart heavy with hope long deferred,
And with prayers that seem vain?
Keep saying the word;
And that which you strive for you yet shall attain.
Keep praying!

FLOWERS VERSUS WAR.

We call attention to the plans of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for the year ahead. Why not stop gasping war thoughts and political spasms long enough to face the really big things of life? A war is a very little thing, considered in the gigantic scheme of creation and evolution. This is a very old world; and there are very much older worlds out and about, concerning which we know little. Wars hit here and there, bury civilizations, raise new hopes, set puppets on thrones, topple them over, grind out new governments, destroy joys, torture generations—and pass down into the caverns of history, where they are forgotten. And all this time, all through the little gropings of self-esteeming man, trees, plants, blooms, fruits—all Nature's bounty pours itself out in the lap of time. Mankind works hard and long to exalt himself and make a show; but he never comes to the height of a violet at the edge of a wood. So when a society talks about plants and flowers for a year's interest there come focussed before eyes that see, something bigger than a war in Europe or a political campaign at our doorstep. —Boston Record.

WHEN A DEBTOR OFFERS LESS THAN 100 PER CENT.

I feel like emphasizing in this article the importance of a fight which the National Credit Men's Association is making to induce creditors to act a little more stiff-backed in considering offers of settlement from embarrassed debtors. The association contends that a constant series of bad frauds are being perpetrated by alleged bankrupts or financially embarrassed business people, right under the noses of their creditors, merely because the latter are too ready to accept almost any offer that is made.

In writing on the subject the association says:—

When a business man becomes financially embarrassed, and offers a certain percentage in settlement, if a creditor holds back and begins to show signs of wanting to know a little about the case the reply is apt to be to the effect that he is the only creditor who hasn't come in, that he is showing a very uncooperative spirit, or else there is a hint that he is holding out for a preferential payment. The idea clearly is to stampede the creditor into an acceptance of the offer through sharp criticism to the effect that he is playing the part of an obstructionist. To such tactics most creditors are weak-kneed enough to capitulate.

The association cites a case where a debtor, as late as last January, gave his creditors a statement of assets and liabilities which showed ownership of two pieces of valuable real estate. A few months later, this man sent out notices to his creditors that he was financially embarrassed and offered a certain percentage in compromise. He accompanied it with a statement of assets and liabilities, but the former this time contained no real estate. One of the creditors wanted to know where it had gone, but the other creditors cried him down because he was threatening a fight which would tie the thing up, eat up the funds, and delay settlement. He persisted for a little, but was finally overborne, and the mystery of the missing real estate was never solved. Very likely it had been manipulated in some way which would not have stood the test of an investigation—if only some one had been man enough to make it. Had it been recovered, the percentage of settlement would have been about doubled, but the creditors believed the bird in the hand to be worth the two in the bush.

If a few more creditors would be slower to accept the first offer of settlement made them by embarrassed debtors, bankruptcy and insolvent business frauds would probably be reduced one-half in a very short while. Debtors have grown astonishingly bold, so confident are they that creditors will gladly and gratefully take whatever is offered them and ask no questions.

Let me cite a few cases from my own experience, and from the records, to show how this works:—

A retail hardware dealer became embarrassed and called a meeting of his creditors. His assets were about $6,000 and his liabilities over $12,000. The assets had to be scaled down because book accounts were a part of them. The hardware dealer offered 35 per cent. in full, payable in cash. Practically all the creditors favored taking it, after the manner of creditors. One fairly large creditor held off and the bankrupt began to talk about going into bankruptcy, and the expense and the fees of that, and so on, until the other creditors actually began to get indignant at the obstructionist, as they considered him. He persisted, however, and to make a long story short, the investigation that ensued unearthed the fact that the hardware dealer owned a share in a prosperous hotel business, which, of course by oversight he had neglected to list among his assets. The percentage of settlement was finally 55 per cent. instead of 35.

In another case a wholesale grocer offered his creditors 50 per cent. professing that in order to offer even that, he had had to borrow from his wife. It would have gone through with a rush had not two of the creditors been a little suspicious. They insisted on being shown and finally the wholesale grocer was compelled to admit that he, or somebody for him the thinnest kind of a subterfuge had been used—held a block of stock in a chain of retail stores. When these were added to his assets the man proved to be solvent and he promptly arranged to pay in full. Two creditors out of about forty were all that had the courage of their convictions here. The rest were so afraid something would happen to reduce the 50 per cent. they had been offered, that they were very impatient with the two who stood out.

In a third case, one creditor out of quite a number insisted that the item of "stock on hand" which a debtor had included in a statement on which he based an offer of 40 per cent., was suspiciously small. He presented reasons for his opinion, but the other creditors were practically all anxious to accept the 40 per cent. and get out. As in the other cases, they looked on the one man who held out as an enemy. The one man persisted, however, and finally made the debtor disgorge $4,000 of goods which he had "sold" to another man.

There are quite a number of such cases, but cases which don't happen in this way are of course much more numerous. I heard a bankruptcy lawyer not long ago offer to lay a wager that he could induce the creditors of any insolvent debtor to accept settlement of around 50 per cent. merely by writing one letter. Perhaps it was exaggerated, but not necessarily a great deal. In most cases I have no doubt it could easily be done.

The creditor when offered a percentage settlement by a debtor, should not be too quick to accept. It is remarkable how many such offers are increased merely by creditors holding off. It will be a service not only to one's self, but to the whole cause of commercial honesty, if a creditor will insist on being shown before he accepts any offer of less than 100 per cent.

Obituary

James Hynes.

James Hynes, 50 years, for the past 15 years florist and gardener for the Houghton estate, North Adams, Mass., died December 1st, after a long illness. He leaves a widow and nine children.

Edward F. Skahan.

Edward F. Skahan, market gardener, died at his home in Belmont, Mass., Dec. 1st. He was 50 years of age. A widow and eight children survive him.

Mrs. Gertrude Brinton.

Mrs. Gertrude Brinton, wife of Maurice J. Brinton, a leading florist of Christiana, Pa., died on December 4. Death was the result of a complication of diseases and after an illness extending over several months. She was the daughter of the late Henry Rakestraw, Chester county, and a graduate of the West Chester Normal School, a member of the Friends' Church and a woman who will be deeply missed in her community, having been active in any matter pertaining to the welfare of her home town. A devoted wife, a loving mother and a woman who was of incalculable help to her husband in his business, the florists of Lancaster County all extend their sympathy to Mr. Brinton and his two children, Grace and Maurice, Jr. She is also survived by her mother, Mrs. Jennie Rakestraw and two married sisters. The funeral services were held Monday, Dec. 6th, with a profusion of the flowers she loved so well.

W. ATLEE BURPEE.

(Died at Fordhook Farms, Nov. 26.)

How fittingly this man's life closes,
That like blown petals on the grass
In this serene time of summer's roses
He, too, should pass!

Light be the churchyard loam above him

And sweet the Spring that he shall know!

There shall God's blossoms lean to love him,

Who loved them so.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

The Garden Blue Book. A Manual of the Perennial Garden. By Leices-ter B. Holland. This new publication by Doubleday, Page & Co., has the merit of originality to a degree seldom met with in these days when of the making of garden books there is no end. The body of the work consists of text descriptions of a selection of 169 of the most desirable and varied her-aceous border plants suited to our northern U. S. conditions. Each right-hand page is devoted to a full description accompanied by a half-tone picture of one species, giving botanical and common name, place of origin and season of flowering, etc., together with a number which refers back to an elaborate color chart which is bound into the first part of the book which shows approximately the tint or tints of each flower described. The charts also show in ingenious and convenient tabulated form the exact time and duration of blooming, the exposure—sunny, half shade or shade—which each subject should have, the height in feet and the soil conditions most conducive to success with each. Each left hand page opposite the descriptive notes and cultural directions contains a table with blank spaces for notes on the behavior of the plant each month in the year for a series of years, climatic conditions and other pertinent observations, also a blank table for similar notes on any other species or variety grown but not listed in this manual. A careful filling in of these blanks for a period of several years would constitute a most valuable record such as but few have ever attempted to keep but which, with the convenience here provided, will no doubt hereafter become a useful occupation and pastime for many garden lovers.

The descriptive lists are arranged alphabetically without regard to consanguinity or other relationship between the subjects described, all these latter facts being fully covered and instantly ascertained by reference to the charts. In the case of chrysanthemums, irises, paeonies, phloxes and some other subjects, copious lists of garden varieties are included in the text. The introductory chapters are interesting and instructive, covering practical advice on garden designing, planting and arrangement, in detail, with plans and figures for reference. The book contains 425 pages and in binding and other mechanical features is handsome and very appropriate as a timely holiday gift which in the hands of an interested recipient will prove a wellspring of pleasure and inspiration for every day, the season through. Price $3.50 net. Copies may be obtained from Doubleday, Page & Co., New York or the office of HORTICULTURE, Boston.

St. Louis—The five wholesale houses have formed a combination and hold meetings twice a month. They met last week at Smith's. Each house has put up $100 forfeit to live up to the rules of the association for one year.

Burpee's Seeds Grow

FORTY YEARS OF BURPEE SERVICE

For forty years we have aimed to render faithful service. For forty years we have tried to make each year's service more nearly ideal. This untiring effort has built for us, not only the world's largest mail order seed business, but a world wide reputation for efficient service and undisputed leadership.

More opportune than anything we ourselves may say about Burpee Quality Seeds are the many remarkable things our thousands of customers and friends have said and continue to say about them. These customers return to us year after year, not because seeds cannot be found elsewhere, but because of our superior quality and service.

THE HOUSE OF BURPEE

Has introduced more distinct new varieties of vegetable and flower seeds that are now in general cultivation than have any three other American firms, but never have we cataloged any one of these varieties until it had passed all the exacting requirements of the Burpee-Standard. This Burpee-Standard is maintained by rigid tests at Fordhook Farms, America's largest and most complete trial grounds. These tests are made each year for the purpose of strengthening this Bond of Confidence between our customers and ourselves.

The Fortieth Anniversary Edition of Burpee's Annual

The Leading American Seed Catalog is unlike any other. The front cover illustrates the greatest novelty in Sweet Peas, "Fiery Cross," and the back cover the two famous Burpee Bantams, Golden Bantam Corn and Blue Bantam Peas. It is a safe guide to success, and of real value to every one who plants seeds either for pleasure or profit. Florists and Market Growers should have our Blue List, the Market Growers' Handbook. This is the wholesale price list for planters. Write for these catalogs to-day. A post card will bring them.

The manifest of the S. S. Frederick VIII from Copenhagen, Denmark, show 695 cases of lily of the valley for Loechner & Co., N. Y., 50 do. for Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., 280 cases for Canada, through American Express, and 8 cases of lilacs for Loechner & Co. From Rotterdam via S. S. Osterdyck, there came for J. T. Noll & Co., Newark, N. A Simple Device for Counting Seeds.

In preparing tests of seed germination a great deal of rather monotonous work is required in counting the seeds. The device to be described was worked out to obviate part of this labor, and has proved very efficient in our seed laboratory. In the hope that it will save valuable time for other workers in this field the following description is presented:

The seed counter is made from a piece of brass or copper tubing 20 cm. in length and about .5 cm. in diameter. This is bent in the middle at an angle of 45° and then on one side filed almost paper thin for a distance of 8 cm. At intervals of .7 cm. on this flattened side 10 holes of suitable diameter are punched with a needle and hammer. One end of the tube on the side nearest the holes is sealed with solder or sealing wax, and the other end is connected by .5 cm. rubber pressure tubing to a small Richards air pump.

The seeds to be counted are placed in a flat tray and the pump started. The suction through the fine openings holds the seeds in lots of 10 to the tube, which are removed by a flick of the finger. In case more than one seed adheres to a hole the extra ones can be quickly removed by tapping the tube, or with the finger. It will be found advisable to have tubes made up with various sizes of holes, one for small seeds such as tobacco, with openings as small as can be made with a No. 7 needle; one with medium-sized holes of .5 mm., which are best adapted to seeds of the size of radish, clover, etc., and one with holes of 1 mm. in diameter. Seeds with a very rough exterior such as beet seed do not lend themselves well to this method of counting as the surface is too uneven to be held by the suction. Large seeds—beans, peas and corn for instance—are too heavy to be held by the suction produced by the small Richards pump, but there is no doubt that with a stronger suction such as that produced by a vacuum cleaner this method could be used in counting these heavier seeds.

Round Spinach Seed—Restrictions on Shipment Modified.

Gentlemen: As the result of the representations made by the State Department at Washington, the Dutch government has expressed a willingness to permit the exportation of a certain quality of round spinach seed on which, as is well known, an embargo had been placed. To obtain the actual permits of exportation, it will be necessary for the Dutch growers to apply to the Dutch Minister of Agriculture.

The above information will be of interest to your readers.

Notes

The value of imports of horticultural merchandise at the port of New York, from November 22 to November 30, inclusive, is given as follows: Manure salt, $9,261; nitrate of soda, $296,258; fertilizer, $22,669; clover seed, $56,284; sugar beet seed, $17,678; grass seed, $17,478; trees and plants, $81,547.

New York, N. Y.—At the annual meeting of the Wholesale Seedmen's League, held November 30, F. W. Bruggerhof, of J. M. Thorburn & Co., was re-elected president for the 17th year. The other officers elected were L. W. Bowen, of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, vice-president; B. Landreth, Bristol, Pa., secretary and treasurer.

We learn from a letter just received from Paris that Mr. Louis Vilmorin of the firm of Vilmorin, Andrieux & Co., has been called, as a private soldier, to the trenches, where he spends twelve days out of each month. Although deprived of all toilet luxuries, unable to undress while there or get hot meals he seems to take it philosophically and does not complain of these hard lines in the soldier's lot. Thirteen of the staff of the Vilmorin house out of several hundred who are at the front have won the war cross.

Mr. Eugene Schaettel of Vilmorin, Andrieux & Co., who has been on a business trip in this country for several weeks received news on Monday of this week that his mother, 84 years of age, had died on November 19, at her home in Saarunion, Alsace. She had been in failing health for some time and the bereavement is a keen one for Mr. Schaettel because the war restrictions have made it impossible for him to see her, or to hear from her except rarely, since the war began. Mr. Schaettel sails from New York for home on the S. S. Lafayette, Saturday, December 11.

German papers comment upon the fact that flowers from Italy via Switzerland are still coming into Germany in quantity and protest is made against this on the ground that the money paid for these flowers will eventually be converted into "silver bullets" against the Germans. It is urged that instead of this importing business an effort be made to use up lily of the valley pips and other products of German origin which now cannot be exported to England, Russia and other countries which formerly were large consumers.

Sluis & Groot of Enkhuizen, Holland, write us as follows:

We herewith beg to advise you of a change in our firm that has taken place the 16th inst., for we have decided to transform our seed-growing establishment, which is existing already since about half a century under the name of Sluis & Groot, into a limited company under the name of Sluis & Groot's Zandteelt & Zaadhandel. The direction of our business remains in the same competent hands, which have also the same capital at their disposal and will use all efforts to maintain the high standing of our firm.

SLUIS & GROOT'S
ZAADTEELT & ZAADHANDEL

ESTATE OF W. ATLEE BURPEE.

Doylestown, Pa., Nov. 30.—By the will of W. Atlee Burpee, the widely known horticulturist and seedman, who died at Fordhook Farm last Friday, an estate of from $500,000 to $700,000 was disposed of. The figures given are approximate.

The will, executed on May 27, 1913, names as executors the testator's wife, Mrs. Blanche Simons Burpee; his brother-in-law, Alexander Buchanan Scott; ex-Judge Harman Yerkes, of Doylestown, and David Burpee, his oldest son.

It is plainly the intention of Mr. Burpee, as expressed in the will, that the seed business he established and conducted so successfully should be continued by his sons, David Burpee and W. Atlee Burpee, Jr. One-half interest in the business is left to the sons, one-third to Mrs. Burpee, one-sixth to the testator's sister, Mrs. Sarah Coburn Burpee Scott, and, until the estate is settled by the executors, one-sixth of the profits from the business is to go to Howard M. Earl, who has been Mr. Burpee's business manager for many years.

The Burpee property at 9th and York streets, Philadelphia, containing the seed establishment, is given to David Burpee and W. Atlee Burpee, Jr. Fordhook Farm, Doylestown, and Floradale, in the Lompoc Valley, California, are bequeathed to David Burpee. Sunnybrook Farm, near Swedesboro, N. J., goes to W. Atlee Burpee, Jr. But Mrs. Burpee retains a one-third life right in all these properties in lieu of dower. Mrs. Burpee is bequeathed all the personal effects and household articles of her husband and $5,000 immediately. Her one-third interest in the seed business must remain invested there unless she should remarry, when it may be withdrawn if she so desires.

Other bequests to relatives are as follows: Belinda Beatrice Kennedy, a cousin of Mrs. Burpee, $10,000 in trust; Helen Burpee, L. Kate Burpee and Charles L. Atlee, cousins, $5,000 each. Full power to will the principal sums is given in these bequests.—Phila. Public Ledger.

CONDEMNING FLOWERS AT FUNERALS.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

Dear Sir—I wonder if that Waltham priest who is said to be condemning the use of flowers at funerals could not use his breath to better advantage against the liquor evil that causes many funerals and more loss financially, physically and morally a thousand times than all the flowers used—not wasted—at funerals.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

WASHINGTON.

Dr. J. N. Rose, associate in botany, of the National Museum, and his assistant, Paul G. Russell, have just returned from an extensive botanical exploration trip in Brazil and Argentine Republic.

Examination for laboratory aid in seed testing in the bureau of plant industry, which positions carry a salary of from $600 to $720 per annum, will be held in this city on January 5, by the Civil Service Commission.

The judges of the Mt. Rainier Times beauty contest have made award to Miss Frances Kingsbury, a member of the salesforce at the store of F. H. Kramer. In addition to having been selected as the most beautiful girl whose picture was submitted, Miss Kingsbury has been given a handsome gold watch. Miss Kingsbury is a resident of Laurel, Md.

At a meeting of the Takoma Park Citizens' Association held last week it was decided that an effort will be made to secure the appointment of a supervisor to train the school children of the District of Columbia in home garden work. The retail florists of Washington some time ago went on record as favoring the home garden work to the end that eventually there will be "a rose in every garden."

Congressman Albert Johnson, of Washington, has introduced a bill in the House of Representatives providing, "That the centigrade scale of temperature measurement shall be standard in United States Government publications, the use of the Fahrenheit scale being discontinued, at the option of heads of departments or other independent branches of the Government, either immediately upon the signing of this bill or at any time before January 1, 1920, except as provided in Section 3."

The event of the week was the electrical parade held in connection with Electrical Prosperity Week celebration in which automobiles of J. H. Small & Sons and Gude Bros. Company were entered but not in competition. The Gude Bros. car was one of the most unique in the parade. A platform, 20 feet in length, was built on a low truck. Three arches, decorated with white roses and illuminated with a large number of miniature electric lights, were built up from the platform. In the space behind the chauffeur's seat, placed 12 feet apart, were two telegraph poles between which silver wires were strung. These were decorated with tinsel and on them fell the rays from two arc lights, the tinsel and light giving one the impression of messages going over the 24 wires. Beneath the wires was an illuminated sign visible from both sides of the street which read "Flowers by Telegraph Everywhere," while bunched around the two poles was a number of boxes of flowers ready for delivery. The body of the truck and the front was covered with yellow chrysanthemums. At the front of the machine was a large number of flying doves. Between the seats wherein sat the chauffeur and footman dressed in white mohair coats and white hats was a standard supporting a double sign, electrically illuminated, of blue glass with silver lettering, having the firm's name and address and in the center its seal with the word "Progressiveness."

CINCINNATI.

Max Rudolph, Gus. Adrian and Roy Rudolph were in Richmond, Ind., and New Castle, Ind., on Monday of this week. P. J. Olinger went up to his greenhouses at New Castle on Tuesday to get a line on his prospective Christmas supply.

Floral offerings and tokens of sympathy at Mrs. C. E. Critchell's funeral last Wednesday were many and very beautiful. Without a doubt they were the largest and finest assortment ever seen at a funeral in this city. The casket was enshrouded in a magnificent blanket of violets, lily of the valley and orchids.

SAN FRANCISCO.

A new florist shop has been opened on 12th street near Broadway, in Oakland, Cal., by A. J. Rossi, who was formerly with Seulerberger's in that city.

John R. Wolf, superintendent of Sperry Park in Vallejo, Cal., is preparing a large hillside acreage for planting. The MacRorie-McLaren Co. is to supply 800 trees.

At their meeting on Dec. 1, the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society made arrangements for a social and entertainment to be held on the first Tuesday in January.

W. A. Hoffinghof has just returned from Vallejo, Cal., where he went to present plans to the mayor and council for the beautification of a ten-acre tract at the entrance to the town, which the city has purchased for park purposes.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. expect to begin the planting of about 25,000 pine and cypress trees in San Mateo County as soon as weather conditions permit. The order, which is one of the largest orders for trees ever placed in this section, came from an eastern capitalist who is interested in a forestry project down the peninsula.

It has been decided to hold another Sweet Pea Show in San Francisco during the early part of June next year, under the auspices of the American Sweet Pea Society. Already considerable interest is being shown. C. C. Morse & Co. have offered a 1st prize of $15, a 2nd of $10 and a 3rd of $5 for twelve vases of sweet peas from their "Grand Prize" collection. Two prizes are offered by W. Atlee Burpee & Co. for single vases of their new sweet pea, Fiery Cross, and they also offer prizes for Spencer sweet peas amounting to $25. Other firms have promised their support, and the committee hopes to have a complete schedule ready for distribution within the next few weeks. In the meantime, growers are urged to begin planting with a view to participating in the Spring show.

NEW YORK.

Wm. A. Hanft in convalescent and we are glad to say has now left the hospital.

The trustees of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., will hold their annual meeting middle of January.

E. J. Van Reyper succeeds J. J. Coan as manager of the Growers' Cut Flower Co. at their 28th street store.

There was a meeting of the directors of the Flower Market in Queens Plaza Building, on Saturday afternoon, December 4.

The Wholesale Florists' Protective League held its annual meeting at the Hotel Breslin on Friday afternoon, December 2.

The New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association held its annual meeting at the McAlpin on Tuesday, Dec. 7.

Gardenias are beginning to show up once more. George C. Siebrecht sets a pan of them in his window as a special temptation.

The annual ball of the Joseph Trepel Employees will be held at Arion Hall, Brooklyn, N. Y., on January 16, 1916. Tickets 50c.

Wm. J. Elliott is still confined to his bed with the injuries received by being run down by an automobile while crossing the avenue near his home.

The front of the MacNiff Horticultural Company's building in Vesey street is resplendent in green and Christmas red, very tastily and effectively done.

Hoosier Beauty, as grown by L. B. Coddington and marketed by H. E. Froment, is one of the finest dark red roses ever seen in this city. It brings the price all right.

Frank H. Traendly is again able to come in to business from his home in Brooklyn. No man in the city trade is more actively in the foreground or could be more noticeably missed.

Woodrow & Marketos had a good job out of the Ford peace vessel which sailed from New York on Dec. 4. Eighty-six staterooms were lavishly decorated with palms, cyclamen, begonias, poinsettias, etc.

"The House of Ferns" is the title of a new wholesale place at 41 West 28th street. Their only specialty for the present is Florida-grown Asparagus plumosus, which is shipped here by fast express from the farms in Florida.

Chrysanthemum Alexander Guttman

An unusual number of fine imported hollies, with perfect foliage and heavily loaded with berries are to be seen in this market this season. Our native holly looks very inferior when compared with these attractive little trees.

The real thing in Dendrobium formosum giganteum is a regal flower. We were attracted by a dish of them in Walter R. Seibrecht's window and they were truly giganteums in size. This flower still holds its own as a bridal specialty.

Phil. F. Kessler is receiving a very beautiful single pink chrysanthemum which finds a very rapid sale under the name of "pink daisy." There are two or three rows of petals and the color is in the class with the pyrethrums as to clearness of tint.

One gets some faint idea of the enormous dimensions of the trade in florists' decorative greens by a look-in at Kervan's establishment at this season of the year. It is one of the busiest spots in the wholesale district and the new building they have recently added was much needed.

Guttman & Raynor are exploiting a new early flowering chrysanthemum, originated by Frank Dinda of Farmingdale, N. Y., and named Alexander Guttman. Its character is well shown in the cut which appears herewith. Its color is lavender pink and it does not shed the bloom when one or two petals are pulled out. The foliage is not too large and it can be planted quite close. By taking a bud about August 1st a nice exhibition bloom may be had by middle of September. The parents are Beatrice May x a 3-year pink seedling. It was awarded a certificate of merit by the New York Florists' Club.

D. C. Arnold & Co., who conduct a wholesale cut flower market at West 28th street under the management of H. Weiss, have a modern range of carnation houses at Babylon, N. Y., consisting of three Lord & Burnham houses, each 50x300 and one 60x300. Their pet novelty at the present time is Mrs. Arnold, a light pink sport from Mrs. C. W. Ward, which has attained instant popularity with the trade here because of its good keeping character and its exceptional color, which is a little deeper than that of Enchantress but with a rare salmon glow and a suggestion of orange when seen on the plant in the sunlight.

CHICAGO.

The E. C. Amling Co. had some of the best Mrs. Russell roses last week that the season has produced. Five hundred were sold in one order for $115.

The tiny rose George Elgar is seen in the wholesale houses and is quickly picked up. It is the smallest rose grown in this vicinity and a bunch of 25 is no larger than a bunch of violets. They are used in corsages.

Mrs. Frances Rubel, who was financially interested in the Fleischman Floral Co., passed away Dec. 5, at her home at 4337 Grand Boulevard. A great many flowers were used at the funeral which took place Dec. 7, one order alone calling for over twenty thousand violets.

The opening of a department of Christmas decorations in one of Chicago's largest stores, has caused quite a ripple in florists' circles. All of the leading State street stores have handled this class of goods but not on so large a scale as this one which employs fifty or more clerks, and has a buying power which makes it possible to retail below the florists' wholesale prices. The development of the trade in artificial flowers and plants and in all kinds of decorative substitutes for cut flowers, has been noted year after year and its effect in limiting the sale of cut flowers has become an acknowledged fact.

Chas. W. Ward, who has 160 acres in one of the valleys of California near Eureka, was a Chicago visitor this week, and expressed himself as pleased with the outlook for growing there azaleas, rhododendrons and other plants, heretofore imported from Europe. The trial so far is satisfactory. In the lower parts of the valley citrus fruits are grown and higher up the English walnut, pecan and other nut-bearing trees are planted. Mr. Ward believes in the future of California as a producer of the stock which florists have not grown here and is backing up his ideas by going into the business there where one of the advantages is the unlimited supply of water. His place is known as the Cottage Gardens Nurseries.

NEWS NOTES.

Albion, Mich.—F. E. Hubert has purchased the greenhouses of Carl Jacobs.

Wilmington, Mass.—Wm. M. Wylie has purchased the greenhouses of Dr. M. E. Brande on West street.

Hillside, N. J.—One of the Elizabeth Nursery Company's greenhouses was badly damaged by fire Nov. 27th. It is thought the fire was of incendiary origin.

New Castle, Pa.—W. H. Weinschenk's boiler house and greenhouse were destroyed by fire Nov. 30th. The loss will amount to about $1200. Besides the buildings, a large amount of onion sets were destroyed.

PHILADELPHIA.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander B. Scott of Sharon Hill will leave for the Pacific Coast on Saturday, the 11th inst., for rest and change of scene. Mrs. Scott, who is a sister of the late W. Atlee Burpee, has devoted herself, with other members of the family, to soothing the fevered hours of the departed with true sisterly devotion. It is not a thing to talk about—being too sacred for that.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are now doing the largest business in the history of their house. Mr. Bayersdorfer's visit to Japan last summer was very fruitful as is shown in the vast quantity and wide variety of the Japanese manufactured goods they are handling. The Japanese have quickly learned the manufacture of baskets, jardinieres and other things heretofore imported from Germany and even Porto Rico matting of perfect weave. These with the goods being made in their own factory give Bayersdorfer & Co. an immense advantage and the demand from all parts of the country is such that 25 or 30 more employees have necessarily been added. Mr. Berkowitz says that the Japs are making a strong bid to control this line of work and it looks as if they would entirely supersede the European manufacturers.

Watch the Buyers' Directory these days for information as to good plants, seeds, supplies, etc., and where they can be purchased to best advantage.

SOME NEW ROSES.

Respecting the new American Rose Hadley, nothing I have written is derogatory to it. Having grown it in the open from original imported plants, I have been able to estimate its worth, and for this reason was rather surprised that it gained an A. M. on the samples shown, presumably from run-out buds. As exhibited, the flowers were far from representing it at its best, and the same may be said of Hoosier Beauty, shown by Stuart Low & Co. at the same time. Both varieties are really fine and I would couple with them Crimson Beauty also. All, however, have their off color turns. Get them in true form, and especially from home budded stock, I imagine this American trio will be something to conjure with, especially Crimson Beauty, which is very quick, and has a very long bud.—

W. A. T. in Hort. Trade Journal, London.

Mr. Harry A. Barnard, of Stuart Low & Co., has just returned from his usual business trip through U. S. A., bringing back with him a number of blooms of a fine new light pink Rose named Mrs. Bayard Thayer, raised by A. Montgomery, of the Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass. Unfortunately, most of the flowers failed to last out the fortnight of travel, otherwise it was intended to exhibit them at the R. H. S. Meeting. Mr. Barnard did, however, bring along a couple of blooms, and we feel safe in hazarding that Mrs. Bayard Thayer is an important rose. It appears to have the build and growth of Mrs. Chas. Russell, another of the Waban Rose Conservatories' seedlings, and these characteristics coupled with its strong perfume, should make it a serious rival to Mme. A. Chatenay.—

Hort. Trade Journal, London.

Hadley and Hoosier Beauty are both standards in the commercial cut flower market this year, up in the front with Russell and Beauty. There is no Crimson Beauty so far as I have seen; maybe that one will make good later. Mrs. Bayard Thayer is well liked in the American flower market, where Mme. Chatenay has practically been out-classed and forgotten. G. C. W.

FLOWER MARKET REPORTS

BOSTON Trade at present writing is quite dull although for a few days past there was a fair demand. The inactivity naturally reflects on the wholesale market rates although not so much as would be the case if there were heavier receipts. Receipts have fallen off very noticeably and to this fact is due the comparative stability of prices on many staples. Roses hold their own in good fashion but American Beauties have been forced down somewhat and figures on the better grades are below those prevalent last week. Carnations have actually advanced, the cause for this being probably the gradual shrinking of the chrysanthemum supply. However, there will be a considerable number of the latter coming in until after Christmas, judging from appearances. Violets are difficult to find and are selling at a sharp advance. This does not include the Hudson River doubles which are difficult to move and bring scarcely more than half the price of singles. Stevia and paper white narcissi hang fire. Pansies sell well at excellent prices. The little George Elgar roses and others of that class are seen in considerable numbers. There is some call for them but for the present there are about all the market will take.

BUFFALO The receipts were heavy on chrysanthemums the past week, which has had a tendency to weaken the sales of carnations and other stock though the near ending is soon looked for. Roses are not overplentiful and have had good sales. Beauties are fine with only normal demand. There are some good violets and plenty of lily of the valley on which the demand was light, however. Lilies are in normal supply. There has been a heavy supply of pompon chrysanthemums on which the demand is gradually falling away. Holly, laurel, pine and other decorative material are gradually growing in demand.

CHICAGO Comparative quiet exists in the market following a good Thanksgiving week and preparations for an active holiday trade are general among the wholesalers and retailers. At this time much depends upon the amount of sunshine during the next ten days. Growers report quantities of buds in sight but without bright weather they will not open in time for the florists' best season of the year. So far December has been cloudy. There are plenty of blooming plants in all the Christmas varieties advanced far enough so their condition is assured.

The condition of American Beauties remains unsatisfactory, with stock scarce and of rather poor quality. Mrs. Russell is showing more deviation in color than at any previous time since its introduction here and just what is the cause has not been agreed upon by the growers. Carnations are selling better now that pompons are leaving. Chrysanthemums are nearly gone. A few only of the late varieties will be in market till Christmas.

CINCINNATI The local market is cleaning up pretty well but this is due to a small general supply rather than to active demand. If the demand for stock were as brisk as it might be there would be a shortage. Shipping business is very good. Roses, while not as plentiful as they were, still are in supply sufficient for present needs. Pink roses and American Beauties, relatively speaking, are not as plentiful as the white ones. The carnation cut has shortened greatly. Lilies are having a good market now that the chrysanthemums are not as plentiful as they were. Callas, too, sell more readily. Double violets are fairly plentiful. Lily of the valley, orchids and sweet peas come in regularly and meet with an active market. Narcissus receipts are rather limited as yet. Stevia receipts are so heavy that it is impossible to clean up on all each day.

This market has seen many market fluctuations during the past week, some of which are hard to understand. Violets have taken an abrupt upward turn and have about doubled in price, the singles, of which a good many come from the vicinity of Boston, enjoying the best sale. The situation looks as though the violet growers were beginning to hold back on their picking in anticipation of a holiday advance. If that is so they have a fine chance to lose out as has been repeatedly demonstrated in past years. Chrysanthemums still linger and they are really good. All the Chadwicks, Goldmine, Harvard and the perennial Bonnaillon are the chief varieties now in the large flowered section but there are lots of pompons, anemones and late singles, all of which classes are being grown more and more and of better quality than ever before. There are some beautiful sunny bronzes among the pompons which sell at sight. The quality of roses is excellent everywhere. Ophelia, Sunburst, Hoosier Beauty and Aaron Ward are seen in rich array and Hoosier Beauty and Prima Donna are bringing almost or quite the price of American Beauty. The latter had advanced steadily for some days but on Tuesday of this week seemed to strike the doldrums and fall back to the old fall figure of $3.00 a dozen for the best—and the “best” were well worthy to be so considered. Very many of the tiny rose buds of Mignon type are seen this fall and they appear to find a good market. Cattleyas are now becoming more plentiful but the majority of the blooms one sees are under sized and do not impress one as being worth the prices asked. Lily of the valley has maintained an advanced price for some time and it looks as if the standard winter value on this indispensable flower would be higher by fifty per cent. than it has been in any recent year. About carnations there is little to be said. They are not much in the public eye just at present although there are some fine flowers being sent in. Growers will be chary about letting many of their red ones get out of their sight and very soon we may expect to see these go aeroplaning. Pansies are having much popular favor and are classed among the things that every well conducted store must have. The sweet peas are now asserting themselves, some of the stock being well up to exhibition quality. Gardenias are again to be had in limited number. Among the newer—or rather, in old things revived, are the bouvardias, of which generous quantities in several colors, both double and singles are shown on long stems and well filled trusses. Reverting to the chrysanthemums once more we should not fail to mention Frank Dinda's anemone flowered Emma which is in our opinion the best in its class on the market.

We had a very PHILADELPHIA steady market
here for the past week and stock generally has cleaned up pretty well. Towards the end of last week carnations shortened up a good deal and the tone of the market for these has improved very considerably. The orchid situation, on the other hand, experienced a great change as several new sources of supply came in crop and prices are now very much easier. American Beauty roses were never finer. The supply is good. The demand is good. On the whole prices have firmed up a little notwithstanding the excellent crops which are larger than for years at this period. (Martin Samtman, Senator Heacock and other apostles of the supply and demand theory please take notice.) All other red roses are selling well but at rather lower figures. The double white Killarney is now in her glory and getting better every day; the most wonderful

We all bow to her and your humble scribe must try to make her glorious by his pen, and incidentally he would cast a ray or two of the dazzle towards Casper Pennock of Lansdowne. The chrysanthemum crop is nearly over; some yellow and a sprinkling of pink but mostly Jeanie Nonin.

Business has been a little quiet comparatively, the past week, which came as a natural sequence after the heavy Thanksgiving rush, accentuated by the all-absorbing interest in the Exposition as the date for the final closing drew near. It seemed everyone who could possibly do so, rushed to the grounds for a last look at the greatest spectacle of its kind the world has ever known. The spirit of unrest pervaded the entire city, and many lines of regular business suffered a temporary slump. As to the market an unusual condition has confronted the florists the last month in that outdoor summer stock has held on so late. The present storm will probably put a a better demand for roses and other more seasonable offerings. The rain is damaging the outdoor chrysanthemums also, which will no doubt strengthen the market on other varieties of seasonables still further. Violets, on the other hand, will benefit by the rain. They are in good supply and an active shipping demand cleans up the daily arrivals closely. Carnations have weakened a little owing to heavy arrivals and only fair demand. From all reports flowers will be in fine shape for Christmas. Roses are improving steadily with a splendid cut in view for the holidays. The same is true of poinsettias. Some fine specimens are being offered now, but most of the growers are holding their crop. Gardenias promise well. In potted stock, cyclamen holds a strong position, and begonias are getting more plentiful, as well as azaleas and primulas.

Prime Thanksgiving

ST. LOUIS stock of all kinds has been scarce and a rise in prices has occurred all along the line. Cold and clear weather assures a good quality of stock and a good supply for the holidays. There is a scarcity of roses in all varieties and prices have advanced. There are more Killarneys than others. Beauties are very scarce but the local grown are just beginning to come in on crop. Carnations are also somewhat scarce. Sweet peas and violets are not enough for the demand. Lily of the valley, paper white narcissi and lilies have a large demand but with no advance in prices. Chrysanthemums are over for this season.

The flower market WASHINGTON is in fine shape with prices advancing normally. Roses show something of a shortage in the lower grades. Carnations and roses both clean up well each day. While chrysanthemums are still very plentiful not nearly as many are going to waste and sales are good. There is almost a glut of double violets which sell low. Single violets of local production are exceptionally good and are bringing a little better price. Orchids are more plentiful but still clean up quickly and there are not enough to go around. Gardenias are to be had in larger quantities. Sweet peas are coming in better shape and sell fairly well. Easter and Rubrum lilies are very plentiful. Lily of the valley is in good demand.

PAN-PACIFIC PRESS ASSOCIATION, LTD.

San Francisco, Calif.

October 16, 1915.

Mr. Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y.

Dear Sir: The Horticulture Jury, of which the writer was a member, awarded you a Gold Medal for your Insecticides, and when you take into consideration the fact that that Jury, outside of the writer, was composed of some of the famous experts of the world, you will realize the importance of this award. Verification of this may be obtained from Mr. George A. Dennison, Chief of Horticulture, Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

The writer has been requested to furnish a list of the articles which the Jury endorsed by their action in awarding prizes because of merit. This request comes from representatives of foreign countries and states.

Respectfully yours,

Signed: J. A. BUCHANAN, Gen. Mgr.

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

Pleasant Lake, Mass., Dec. 7 While snowflakes were falling here yesterday, a bunch of mayflowers was picked in the woods near this village. Old residents declare that this is the result of a few mild days about a week ago, and indicates an exceedingly severe winter, followed by a late spring.—Boston Traveler.

Apples growing on birch trees may be a possibility in the opinion of "Johnny" Martin of Canton, who is experimenting along that line. He claims that on his estate twigs of apple trees continued to live for three years after being grafted to birch trees. He expects to make additional experiments this spring, and if successful is thinking of calling the result of his labor "the birch apple."

cant commodity. It is only worth around $250 a pound.

A particular flower seed commands $1600 a pound. "But we don't deal in it by the pound, only by the ounce or the dozen of seeds," remarked this erstwhile physician, who turning from healing sick humans to perfecting flowers and vegetables.

If you can develop a fine new variety of sweet-pea, for instance, it will bring you more than Kipling gets for one of his poems, and, measured by the poet's recent output, I think it worth considerably more.

"What is their little game anyway?"

That is what people asked us at the time the Luther Burbank Society was sending out its rosetinted gulf and asking people to join the immortals by becoming a "life member." We did not know what the game was, but it is being developed now. All capital stock in this Burbank Society has been assessed one dollar per share! There are liabilities of $73,023.58! Among the "assets" is the item of $287,500 as "value of the exclusive right to use the name of Luther Burbank and to distribute his horticultural productions." The "little game" seems to have been the same as that of the shell-game man—a run for your dollar. You had the run after the society of Burbank and then you give up your dollar! What a farce the whole thing was. How they did play on the vanity of hundreds of men and women who ought to have known better. The Burbank Society! A seat in it has proved just about as satisfactory as a seat on a bunch of dried burdocks!

—Rural New Yorker.

That there are meat eating plants is generally known, but that there are also plants that cough—not figuratively, but in the true literal sense of the word—will be surprising to most readers. Indeed, to the researches of the French botanist we owe the description of a plant growing in certain tropical regions which obviously "coughs" like a human being. The plant externally is in many respects related to our common bean. It is very sensitive, and shows a strange dislike of every kind of dust. No sooner do a few grains of dust settle on its leaves and thereby irritate the air chambers of the sheath scale, which represents the organs of breathing, than these organs fill with a kind of gas, swell up and then explosively reject the gas, whereby the dust is expelled. But this explosion produces a sound that has a striking resemblance to the cough of a child that has caught a cold. The stranger who, in the midst of the wilderness, hears the sound involuntarily looks about for some man or animal, and discovering, of course, nowhere a living being that might have coughed, will be seized with the uncanny feeling of the presence of some spook. Curved Eave Show House at Louis Dupuy's, Whitestone, L. I.

Some Interesting Show House Showings

WHEN you think of the hundreds and thousands of dollars that are continually being spent to show goods to the best advantage in all other lines; what a tremendous opportunity it suggests for Show Houses in the plant and flower business.

We might mention off hand, half a dozen such houses that we have built in and around the New York section; every one of which you doubtless know about.

Among the number, however, there are two which are conspicuous for their success.

One is the Plant Show House of Louis Dupuy at Whitestone, L. I.

The other, the Flower Shop at Forest Hills, L. I.

Knowing as you do, that Mr. Dupuy sells the bulk of his plants to the leading New York Florists, you will wonder what particular advantages a Show House would be to him.

If you have ever gone into a big department store and had the exasperating experience of chasing from one floor to another, and from one counter at one end of the building, to the other you know full well the welcome advantage it would be if you could leisurely walk through a light, attractive room of moderate size, where everything you wanted, was right handy by.

With this in mind, Mr. Dupuy shrewdly overcame the necessity of his customers going from house to house, through his big range; by concentrating his plants for sale, in a fine, curved eave Show House we designed and built for him.

Not only will Mr. Dupuy tell you of its saving in time; but that it has greatly increased his sales.

Can't we build you one of these business builders?

You know we go anywhere for business, or to talk business.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Asparagus plumosus

From now on there is nothing better than a good rich mulch put on from time to time. After the New Year they can have plenty of liquid manure. Asparagus plumosus is a greedy feeder, and additional nourishment in some form must be given. From this out it is always well to let the surface of the soil become fairly dry before giving water. When doing it, however, give them a good soaking. Keep the house moist, as when this is wanting luxuriant growth is impossible. See that the young leading growths are kept nicely wound around the strings. Give the surface a frequent stirring to keep the soil open and sweet. About 65 degrees at night, in the coolest weather, and a deep and richly manured compost are the essentials to successful asparagus culture.

Calanthes

When the blooms begin to open, calanthes should be kept as near the glass as possible and in a night temperature of from 60 to 65 degrees. During the day, if the sun shines, 70 or 75, but if the day is dark 65 to 70 will be about right. When the flowers are half expanded they can be removed to the cooler end of the warm house where their long sprays of bloom will keep in perfection for some weeks. Don't apply too much water when the plants are in flower—only enough to keep the soil from drying out too much. This is a good orchid for the commercial growers, excellent for cut flower purposes and having fine lasting qualities. Calanthe Veitchii and C. vestita are good sorts. After flowering they should be rested in about the same degree of heat as they were grown in for a period of from eight to ten weeks during which time water should be withheld gradually.

Decorative Ferns

From now and up to the middle of February all ferns generally used by the florist will stand full sun. For ferns that require a medium temperature, 55 to 60 degrees will do, while those that require stove heat should be given from 60 to 65 degrees at night. Handle the ventilation so as to give them a proper amount of fresh air without chilling draughts. Ferns always like a certain amount of atmospheric moisture through the house, but extremes either way should not be allowed. As a rule from this out wait until they show a slight dryness at the root and then give them enough water so it will run through the bottom of the pot. Go over them often and give a cleaning of old foliage, etc.

Manure for Crops

On the amount of plant food we have in all composts for crops growing inside, will depend success or failure. Florists all agree in giving a good grade of well-decayed barnyard manure first place among fertilizers for general use, but all experience the same difficulty in procuring it in a condition sufficiently decomposed for immediate use. They must therefore lay in fresh manure which at this time of the year is not hard to obtain. Pile it up and give it time to decay. Forked over once or twice during the progress of decomposition it will be in proper condition for use next spring. Horse manure, if not stirred up frequently, burns quickly and is then of little value. Refuse or spent brewers' hops does not heat so quickly and needs no forking.

Propagation

It is much more satisfactory to take cuttings now and pot them along. Plants so treated will later on produce plenty of cuttings, Coleus, alternanthera, achyranthes, verbenas, petunias, salvias, heliotropes, fuchsias, German ivy etc., will all root in a short time. Lobelias, ageratums and petunias should be propagated now, and of course geraniums can hardly be overdone. For alternantheras, it is better to use flats about 2 to 3 inches in depth, using either sandy soil or a layer of soil in the bottom with sand on top. Insert cuttings of about 2½ inches in length and they can remain in these flats all winter in a temperature about 65 degrees at night.

Secure Plenty of Flats

In two or three weeks we shall have need for a lot of flats to sow seed and to prick stock into. See that they are put in good order. Do not leave this job until later on but get busy now and prepare enough of them.

Next Week:—Cinerarias; Cyclamens; Stock Chrysanthemums; Lilies for Easter; Violets; Verbenas.

A well-judged tribute

The award of the George Robert White medal of honor for 1915 to E. H. Wilson of the Arnold Arboretum is a well-judged recognition of the achievements and the devotion of a man whose services for horticulture, great as they appear to us now, will, after the lapse of a few years, appear vastly greater than is yet apparent. HORTICULTURE congratulates Mr. Wilson on the honor so worthily won and also the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on having been the medium entrusted with the bestowal of such a tribute.

All interests covered

The New York Florists' Club sets a good example of impartiality in the selection of its officers for the coming year. The president is a grower, the vice-president a retail florist, secretary a wholesale flower dealer, treasurer a seedsman, trustees for two years one wholesaler, one retailer and one growing retailer.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston at its election last month was equally unbiased in choosing its officers. While, of course, ability to fill the position assigned to him should be the foremost consideration in selecting a man for any office, yet a fair recognition of all the interests represented in the membership is always a wise course in the bestowal of honors as well as in the general policies and activities of any organization.

While on the topic of the New York Florists' Club we desire to throw one more bouquet in approval of its very praiseworthy action, as recorded in our reading columns, of refusing official recognition to a rose under a name other than that under which it had heretofore been known and sold. The New York Club is all the more worthy of special commendation because the course of action adopted affected most directly, for the moment, one of its own highly esteemed members, of whom it must be said that he explained that he had brought the rose in question to the meeting not for the purpose of being scored but for exhibit only, to give the members an opportunity of seeing it. The culpability appears to lie with the grower in California who re-named the variety. We are glad to see this Club take so exemplary a stand on a growing abuse that has been too long condoned.

The gardeners awakening

The meeting of gardeners in Boston last week brought together some of the leading and progressive spirits and was characterized by a confident and optimistic tone which promises well for the future advancement of their profession in the character and attainments of those who follow it as their life work and in the position accorded to it by the public among the honorable callings in which men are employed. Whether it be an individual, an association or an avocation, before a high position in the respect of the people can be attained, self-respect and a steadfast effort to develop a worthiness of the coveted recognition is an essential requirement. That commendable progress is being made in this direction ample evidence was given in the Boston meeting and the new incentive there created will spread its influence far and wide. The young gardener of today in love with his work and fired with honest purpose and noble aim should find abundant encouragement in the sentiment and spirit of this meeting at Boston and the quality of the men who participated.

Work ahead

One prerequisite for improvement in anything or anybody is a clear realization of the existing defects or short comings which make improvement desirable. As all plants have their insect and fungous enemies so also are there maladies ready at all times to prey upon and hinder the growth of any occupation in which well-meaning men may be engaged. If it should appear that any practices have been taking root which affect the relations between gardener and employer or between gardeners and the trade and which might react unfavorably upon the profession as a whole and retard its progress toward the pinnacle of world-wide honor in the great field of industry, this Association now has the opportunity and the wherewithal to search out and eradicate it, however deep-rooted they may find it to be. The names of the gentlemen who have been selected as standard bearers for the Association for the coming year are an assuring guarantee that the activities of the organization will be conducted upon lines which make for the true welfare and advancement of the gardening fraternity. Much is expected of such men and we feel sure that much will be forthcoming.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Feeding During December.

We are now going through the shortest days in the year, and unless the plants are growing very freely, the amount of feed given them will have to be somewhat the plants all that they will take. If bonemeal is limited, until the New Year, when it will be safe to give the plants all that they will take, and if they are growing good—there will hardly be a limit. If bonemeal is to be used and the plants are in need of a little food, then apply it now, for they are sure to get a large portion of it. We would not use much of this after the first of February. We prefer sheep manure, tankage, or other manures that may be available, not forgetting liquid manure. If the plants are not dried out properly the soil can nearly always be found to be acid or may contain large numbers of earthworms. These can be killed and the soil sweetened by an application of fresh hydrated or air-slacked lime. These are the only two limes we would use in the rose houses. This dose of lime can also take the place of plant food as it will decompose a good deal of matter in the soil, thus making available plant food that would otherwise lie inert.

Syringing.

As often as the weather will permit the plants should receive a good syringing so that there will be no spider anywhere to start breeding as soon as the warmer and brighter days of the spring come. They are a long way off as yet but most places are clean in the fall but are allowed to breed spider during the winter months and these come out in such large numbers in the spring that it is almost impossible to keep them down. Syringe early in the morning and shake the plants as soon as you are through so that they will have every possible chance to dry off before the night comes on. Do not neglect dusting plenty of air-slacked lime under the plants, especially in the Beauty houses. If not too cold, it is also advisable to carry a little air until about nine at night, unless the houses are not very tight and get plenty of air as it is. The thing to avoid is a damp, stale atmosphere, as this will soften the plants so that they will be almost sure to get a dose of mildew. It will also have a good deal to do in turning the flowers pale. Syringe as rapidly as possible, being careful not to throw too much water on the benches.

Tying.

It will be necessary to go over the plants quite often and see that there are no buds up against the glass where they will freeze into the ice that forms on cold mornings. Growers with wide houses with high sides will not have to worry about this but all the growers have not the up-to-date houses built but recently. All varieties, save the Beauty, will not mind going untied for a while, but the latter will not bud if allowed to lay around at all. Keep after the tying as much as possible, especially in the Beauty houses. We have seen a case of a grower's failing to grow Beauties successfully merely because they were not tied up properly all the time. Some of the long shoots will have to be bent down, and in doing this be careful to keep the growth on the same side of all three wires as it is rather unhandy to have them mixed up. Keep the tops all the same distance above the top wire as this will insure a square deal to all the tops and give them all a chance to get some sun and set, for Beauties that will not set are not very profitable. In tying teas to stakes be careful not to bunch them up too much, as they are bound to lose some of their leaves this way and are much harder to syringe.

Blackspot

Mr. Arthur Ruzicka.

Dear Sir:—Mr. George C. Thomas, Jr., in his "The Practical Book of Outdoor Rose Growing," second edition, suggests a new remedy for black spot in the shape of a formaldehyde solution. He credits the "American Florist" issue of June 14, 1914, and the National Rose Society of England with the recommendations of this remedy.

Have you ever tried this remedy or know of any one who has, and what has been the results obtained? This remedy has no doubt been tried out the past season by some rose growers, and it certainly would be very interesting to me, and perhaps others as well, to get some report on its use in this country.

Black spot is, of all the diseases and enemies of the rose, the worst that I have had to contend with in outdoor rose growing. We can control mildew by spraying and dusting with the usual recommended remedies, but black spot strips our roses of foliage, blights the bloom and refuses to respond to sprays. If the formaldehyde solution has any virtue, the rose-growing public ought to know it, for there is nothing so discouraging as a disease of this kind and the laborious and tedious task of picking off diseased foliage, recommended by the writers, and its constant repetition acts only as a check, and a mild one at that, and dampens one's ardor for roses.

Yours truly,

J. N. P.

Washington, Pa.

I am very sorry to say that I have never tried the treatment mentioned and I do not know of any gardener who has. Our outdoor rose growing has been limited, I regret to say, to only such varieties of roses that do not contract blackspot so easily and should any of these get it we have never gone to any trouble to cure it outside of a spraying or two of some good fungicide which we thought best to use. We are interested in cut roses commercially you see, so we cannot spend more on a plant than about a fourth of what we get from it. With private gardeners it is different as the roses are wanted regardless of cost. The only real cure for spot we have ever been able to find satisfactory is to grow the plants out of it. In other words, try to keep the plants growing all the time. This can only be done by being very careful to prepare a good soil when they are planted. The soil should be well drained if it is inclined to be wet and the plants should be watered only in the early morning when dry weather sets in. In watering it is best to water thoroughly, so that the water goes a good ways down. We also find it helps to mulch the plants as soon as hot weather comes around as this keeps the soil cool around the roots and the plants do not suffer so badly. It may be that some of HORTICULTURE's readers may have tried the remedy recommended in the book you mention, and if they have I am sure they will be glad to write of their experience.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF GARDENERS

Our notes published last week gave an account of the opening session of this Association, then holding its annual meeting in Boston. We are pleased to add to that the statement by the treasurer, James Stuart, that the Association has today in bank the sum of $1,289. Encouraging reports were made by several committees, including that on meritorious exhibits which was as follows:

Report of Exhibition Committee.

Certificate of Culture for a well-grown specimen Begonia Glory of Cincinnati, exhibited by W. Downs, Chestnut Hill, Mass.

Special mention for two specimens Begonias Lorraine, and Certificate of Culture for fine display of Calanthes by D. Finlayson, Brookline, Mass.

Vote of thanks to A. H. Hews & Co., Cambridge, Mass., for a display of pottery.

Judges—Wm. Kleinheinz, John F. Huss and P. W. Popp.

A resolution was unanimously adopted commending Adolph Lewisohn and his superintendent, John Canning, for their able and unselfish services in the promotion of the interests of the chrysanthemum in the New York and Cleveland exhibitions. Messrs. W. N. Craig, Duncan Finlayson and M. C. Ebel were constituted a committee to draw up a resolution to be sent to Mrs. Francis King in appreciation of her kind and influential words in the gardeners' behalf in her book, "The Well Considered Garden." An amendment to the Constitution was unanimously adopted providing for the suspension of members more than one year in arrears on payment of dues.

As recorded in our account of last week, W. N. Craig, of Brookline, Mass., was unanimously elected president for the coming year. Other officers selected, all by a unanimous vote, were: Vice-president, Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis, Minn.; secretary, M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J.; treasurer, James Stuart, Mamaroneck, N. J.; trustees, Peter Duff, Orange, N. J.; Wm. Duckham, Madison, N. J.; Wm. Turner, Oceanic, N. J.; Wm. Kleinheinz, Ogontz, Pa.; J. F. Huss, Hartford, Conn. Interesting papers were read (the authors not being present) on "Is Gardening a Profession?" submitted by W. W. Ohlweiler, St. Louis, Mo.; "The Management of Country Estates, from the Viewpoint of the College Graduate," by Morell Smith, superintendent of the Ralph Pulitzer Estate; "The Young Gardener's Opportunity in This Country," by Henry Gibson, of New York. The first and third of these papers elicited plenty of spirited and often amusing debate. The fourth and last paper was by William Gray, of Newport, R. I., on "Is Co-operation Between Garden Clubs and Gardeners' Societies Desirable?"

A vote of thanks was recorded for the authors of all the papers.

The Dinner.

At 6 p. m. the meeting adjourned and the members repaired to the banquet hall below, where an excellent dinner was served under the auspices of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club and Allied Horticultural Interests of Boston, and the rest of the evening was spent in speechmaking and pleasant companionship. During the banquet a clever young lady entertained the guests with singing and dancing. W. N. Craig, president-elect of the Association and secretary of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club presided. The list of speakers was a long one, and included President J. K. M. L. Farquhar of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, who voiced the pleasure of that organization in having the gardening fraternity its guests, Patrick Welch, president of the Society of American Florists, John H. Dillon, chairman of the Boston Park Commission, Wm. Kleinheinz of Ogontz, Pa., Peter Fisher, S. J. Goddard, P. W. Popp, J. W. Everitt, retiring president, Prof. A. H. Nehrling of Amherst Agri. College, Secretary M. C. Ebel, James McMahan of Tuxedo, N. Y., M. H. Norton, Jos. A. Manda, President H. H. Bartsch of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, Wm. J. Stewart, editor of Horticulture, Robert Cameron of Harvard Botanic Garden, W. P. Rich, sec'y Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Wm. Nicholson, James Methven, J. F. Huss of Hartford, Conn., James Wheeler, Duncan Finlayson, Wm. Downs, W. J. Kennedy and A. P. Calder, the silver-tongued orator of the Boston florist fraternity. The speeches were all optimistic in tone and emphasized the golden opportunities for the gardening profession in this country and the service which a well conducted organization could render in developing a high standard of efficiency among its members. On the part of the visitors there was much praise for Boston's part in making the convention a marked success and on the part of the local speakers a welcome gratulation and expression of good wishes for the future of the Association. The tables were profusely decorated with plants and flowers. A rising vote of thanks was extended to the committee in charge for the efficient manner in which they had attended to their work.

Friday's Outing.

The program for Friday included an automobile ride through the park system of Boston, Metropolitan Park Reservations, Arnold Arboretum and the estates of Prof. C. S. Sargent, E. D. Brandegee, E. S. Webster and Larz Anderson, refreshments being served at the latter place. The trip culminated at the nurseries of R. & J. Farquhar & Co., at Dedham, where the extensive greenhouses and nursery buildings with their contents were certainly an eye-opener to the majority of the visitors who had no idea of the tremendous development of this establishment within the past two years. An elaborate spread was served in the big packing shed. The autos for the trip were generously supplied by the Boston Park Department.

ST. LOUIS FLORIST CLUB.

The Florist Club met for the last time this year, December 9, in Odd Fellows' building, at 2 o'clock P. M., with half the membership in attendance. The usual opening proceedings were disposed of quickly when the chair called up all committees for final reports. The trustees reported that the February meeting would be held in the evening and the ladies would be invited. Mr. Ohlweiler, chairman of the Spring Flower Show Committee, read a lengthy report in which he named all sub-committees with President Bourdet as chairman of the Executive Committee and manager of the show. Chairman Ammann, of the Carnation Society Committee, made a brief report and suggested that a guarantee fund of $500 be raised to defray the expenses, which was quickly subscribed by the members of the club. Frank Fillmore reported for the Resolution Committee on the deaths of E. G. Eggeling and W. C. Young, and the report was accepted by a rising vote. H. C. Irish, vice-president of the Missouri State Horticultural Society, read a program for the meeting of the society to be held January 12, 13 and 14 at the Planters' Hotel, and named the thirteenth as Florists' Day, when several prominent florists would read papers. The question box formed a pleasing feature and several long discussions made things interesting to the members.

The New Year's meeting will take place Thursday afternoon, January 13.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

The meeting on Monday evening, December 13, was attended by about 75 members—a very creditable representation considering the wild storm which was raging, and gave memorable significance to the ill-omened 13th. The big business of the evening was the election of officers for the year 1916. There were no contests except on vice-president and trustees, all the other officers being elected by unanimous vote. The successful candidates are as follows: President, Henry Weston; vice-president, George E. M. Stumpp; secretary, John Young; treasurer, Wm. C. Rickards; trustees, Chas. Schenck, Robt. G. Wilson, Max Schling. All these gentlemen made brief addresses except Messrs. Schling and Wilson, who were absent. Quite a discussion took place regarding the exhibit of the rose re-named "Prima Donna" and this matter was given careful consideration by many of the leading members; it was decided that the New York Florists' Club could not and would not countenance the award of certificates or officially recognize plants and flowers which were given improper names. After the exhibitor had affixed the proper name of the variety Madam Paul Euler the exhibit was accorded a vote of thanks.

A. L. Miller introduced the subject of the coming National Flower Show in Philadelphia which he considered was recognized as the great coming event by all florists from Maine to California and suggested that the Club request of the National Flower Show Committee, that a day be set aside to be known as "New York Day" and that a committee be appointed to make arrangements for a party of five or six hundred to go to Philadelphia in a special train on New York Day. The motion of Mr. Miller was warmly seconded by Chas. H. Totty and the consensus of opinion was that the members of the Club should make it a point to join the party and make the attendance at the National Flower Show on "New York Day" a record breaker. A. L. Miller, Frank H. Traendly, Joseph Manda, Wm. Duckham and C. H. Totty were appointed a committee to make the necessary arrangements.

Resolutions were presented on the death of Edward Walz and Mrs. Victor Dorval. A committee was appointed to draw up resolutions on the death of the late W. Atlee Burpee, the committee being E. C. Vick, W. A. Sperling, W. C. Rickards, Jr., J. B. Deamud, H. A. Bunyard.

Richard Vincent, Jr., addressed the meeting in the interest of the American Dahlia Society. In the absence of Chairman F. R. Pierson, of the general Flower Show Committee, A. L. Miller and Frank H. Traendly reported for the coming Spring Show. Their report was very rosy, showing the NASSAU CO. HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The regular monthly meeting of the Nassau Co. Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke Hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., Dec. 8. The following awards were made: Begonia Gloire de Lorraine—1st to Frederick Hitchman; 25 carnations—1st, Robert Jones. Mr. Jones also exhibited a splendid vase of chrysanthemum Odessa for which he was awarded a cultural certificate. This being the annual meeting, Treasurer Ernest Brown read his financial report, showing that the Society is in a first class condition financially. Mr. Brown received a very hearty vote of thanks for his efficiency.

The election of officers now being in order President Westlake, after thanking his fellow members for their harmonious co-operation during his term of office, appointed James Duthie as chairman to conduct the election. The following officers were elected: President, James McDonald; vice president, Joseph Adler; treasurer, Ernest Brown; secretary, Harry Jones; corresponding secretary, James McCarthy; trustee, Ernest Westlake; executive committee, Robert Jones, John Johnstone, Arthur Cook, James Gladstone, August Fournier, Walter McKinley and Thomas Twigg. The newly elected officers were installed by Mr. Duthie and Mr. McDonald then took the chair and conducted the remainder of the meeting.

It was decided to hold our annual dinner on January 25, and a committee composed of Messrs. Ernest Brown, Joseph Adler and James Duthie was appointed by President McDonald to make full arrangements.

JAMES MCCARTHY, Cor. Sec'y.

PITTSBURGH FLORISTS' AND GARDENERS' CLUB.

The meeting of the club December 7th in the Fort Pitt Hotel was well attended. The main topic for discussion was the late Cleveland Flower Show. There had been a good attendance from Pittsburgh and every one was delighted. The introducer and grower of the Mrs. M. R. Morgan, yellow sport from Timothy Eaton chrysanthemum, which took the third prize at the show, was present, and we all agreed with him that it was a fine commercial chrysanthemum. Some were so enthusiastic over the Cleveland Flower Show that they raised the question of Why cannot Pittsburgh do likewise? and the main obstacle seemed to be the lack of a hall centrally located, but the leaven of a flower show seemed to be working, and who can tell what may happen yet?

There were exhibits of pink Astilbe Japonica in pots by Carl Becherer, of poinsettias by Pasquale Fabbozzi, gardener for J. C. Trees, the latter also showing Roman hyacinths in pots. Poinsettias were also shown by the Phipps Conservatories. To all three exhibitors cultural certificates were awarded. It was thought the pink astilbes would make fine Christmas plants.

Our President read an extract from a noted scientist on the origin of kissing. What has started our President on this investigation we cannot imagine, and we are awaiting further developments with great interest.

At the January meeting the election of officers for 1916 will take place.

H. P. JOSLIN, Secretary.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The semi-monthly session of this society in Pittsburgh last Wednesday evening, was characterized by a fine display of poinsettias, cyclamen, Lorraine begonias and ardisias, by the various gardeners. The original intention was to have had a talk on "Christmas Decorations," by one of the local florists, but owing to the rush attendant upon the approaching holiday season in commercial circles, this was, unfortunately, precluded. The first regular session of the new society was held on the first inst., when sixteen new associate members were reported by the vice-president, Superintendent William Allen of the Homewood Cemetery. All are members of the Garden Club of Allegheny County and joined at the annual meeting of the same, when Mr. Allen made a representative visit in the interest of his organization.

Thomas Edward Tyler, who has charge of the orchid houses of Charles D. Armstrong, had an exhibition of Cypripediums in variety, including several fine types of Sanderæ, to which he devotes an entire house. There was also a display of late chrysanthemums (single and pompons) by Mr. Huyler, chrysanthemum grower for the Phipps Conservatory. Mr. Huyler stated that his experience was that the single varieties were usually pinched too late in the season, thereby precluding the desirable long stems. The next session of the society on January fifth, will be devoted to a discussion on the advisability of giving the first annual Chrysanthemum Show

CLEVELAND FLORISTS' CLUB.

At the last meeting of the Cleveland Florists' Club it was decided to have a banquet and jollification in celebration of the November Show, which was a success from practically every angle. The premiums are all paid with a very few exceptions, there being some delay in a few cases, which will soon be straightened out. The club voted to go after the National Flower Show for 1918, and President H. Bate appointed the following committee: H. P. Knoble, chairman; Chas. Russell, Timothy Smith, F. C. W. Brown, Geo. Bate and F. A. Friedley.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

J. Stanley Giles, president; Harry C. Huesman, vice-president, and Fulmer H. Lauck, secretary and treasurer, were re-elected to serve for the ensuing year at a meeting of the Reading (Pa.) Florists' Association, held in Moore's Hall, Dec. 2. There was a discussion on the Carnation. A social hour followed the meeting.

The 49th annual meeting of the Minneapolis Horticultural Society was PHIPPS CONSERVATORIES, SCHENLEY PARK, PITTSBURGH.

It has been our privilege and pleasure, from time to time, to regale our readers with descriptions of the periodical public floral exhibitions that have been given in the Phipps Conservatories, together with occasional interior views of these great winter gardens which mean so much for Pittsburgh horticulture. No doubt the general exterior view accompanying these notes will be particularly interesting, now that the question of great public conservatories in park reservations is coming so strongly to the front. A place of resort, full of tropical luxuriance in the dreary months of winter, constitutes an unrivalled attraction and delight for all classes of people.

in session last week with a large attendance and great enthusiasm. The program was carried out and every thing was at high tide with weather delightful and a splendid exhibit of fruit and vegetables. The membership is now over 3,400 and an effort is being made to win it up to 4,000. It is now the largest in America if not in the world.

A very few members attended the monthly meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society on December 9th. A request from the Nassau Horticultural Society that this society co-operate in their plan for membership transfer for members changing place of residence was unanimously agreed to. Mr. Loveless gave a very interesting talk on his visit to the Cleveland show. The next meeting will be held on January 12th.

The New London Horticultural Society at its annual meeting elected officers as follows: President, Donald Miller; first vice president, Gustav Neumann; second vice president, E. Robinson; secretary, Stanley Jorgan; financial secretary, William J. Morgan; treasurer, Simon L. Ewald; librarian, Herbert Lickman; executive committee, Alfred Flowers, John Maloney, Thomas Leydon, Edward A. Smith, W. J. Schoonman, Miss Harriet Allen, Mrs. Joseph Beebe, Mrs. C. W. Nichols.

The Southampton, N. Y., Horticultural Society held its regular fortnightly meeting on Dec. 2nd. The talk of the evening was on "Sweet Peas Under Glass," when W. McCleod, superintendent for Mrs. Horace Russell, gave a very interesting, cultural address. Mr. McCleod has proved to be a very skillful cultivator of these beautiful winter flowers. The next meeting will be held on Dec. 16th at 8 P. M. in Odd Fellows Hall, Southampton.

The members of the Norwood (Pa.) Horticultural Society held their annual election of officers December 6. Dr. John A. Borneman was chosen president; John S. High, vice-president; Dr. H. A. Ickes, secretary, and Harry L. Deppen, treasurer. William L. Edward, a florist of Norwood, delivered an address on the "Care of Home Plants During Winter." It was decided that in the future, instead of having the regular flower show in September, the Society would hold a show early in September of each year for early fall flowers, to be followed in October by a show especially for chrysanthemums and dahlias, the idea being to promote the growth of the latter.

The annual meeting of the Connecticut Horticultural society was held at the county building, Friday evening. George H. Hollister, superintendent of Keney park, was elected president, and was welcomed to his new position by the retiring president Warren S. Mason, with congratulations and good wishes. The other officers elected were: First vice-president, Frank Roulier; second vice-president, Fred Boss; third vice-president, O. F. Gritzmacher; treasurer, W. W. Hunt; secretary, Alfred Dixon; librarian, William T. Hall; botanist, J. Vidbourne; pomologist, C. H. Sierman.

An unusually fine exhibit of poinsettias was shown by Alfred Cebelius. It was awarded a first-class certificate. The judges were Alexander Cumming, Jr., Frank Roulier, and A. Righenzi. John F. Huss gave an interesting account of the meeting of the National Gardeners' Association in Boston, and introduced William Kleinheinz, of Ogontz, Penn.; Joseph Manda, of West Orange, N. J., and P. W. Popp, of Mamaroneck, N. Y. All three gave interesting talks.

PITTSBURGH NOTES.

Mrs. Gustave Ludwig has returned from a two months' visit in Chicago with her daughter, Mrs. Victor Bergman.

Earl Tipton has severed his connection with the A. W. Smith Company to enter the employ of Penn, the Florist, in Boston, Mass.

Frank Crooks, who has charge of the James H. Park greenhouses and grounds, has the sympathy of many friends in the serious illness of Mrs. Crooks, who has been a patient in the West Penn Hospital for the past six weeks.

Eleven hundred and fifty dollars was realized from the flower stand at the Austria-German Red Cross benefit held in Exposition Hall last week. The committee in charge included Henry Mueschke, chairman; C. Philipps, Julius W. Ludwig and Gilbert Ludwig.

Preparatory to remodeling the grounds of "Greystone," the Michael C. Benedum estate, Berthold C. Frosch and his foreman, Joseph Irwin, supervised the transplanting of four trees from the Westinghouse estate, "Solitude," last week. They were fifty feet high, two being pin oaks between twenty-five and thirty years old, and two birches about fifteen years of age. At the same time a red and three Norway maples were removed from the Westinghouse grounds to those of Grant McCargo in Woodland Road. They also were of uniform size, twenty feet high, of six-inch calibre and ten feet "spread."

Debutante entertaining continues to tax the skill and ingenuity of the society florists. Simple elegance in the form of clusters of exquisite blooms and hundreds of gift bouquets and baskets add their charm to these magnificent affairs and the ballrooms call into requisition the most elaborate decorations. At one of these 2500 Mrs. Russell roses were used, entwined in a white lattice over the orchestral stage, beyond which was a boxwood hedge bordering an Italian garden and ocean scene, and on the tables in white willow baskets. Another ballroom was transformed into a charming Chinese garden hedged with boxwood and Easter lilies. On each side was a bronze vase six feet high filled with 100 yellow chrysanthemums; 150 Mandarin orange plants, each with from twelve to eighteen oranges, formed the table centerpiece.

CALIFORNIA NOTES.

A new shop was opened recently at 1125 Oak street, Oakland, Cal., by P. W. Coger.

A new florist shop has just been opened in Fresno, Cal., by Miss Pearson. It is known as the Rose Maur and is nicely fitted up.

The December meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was postponed a week on account of the closing of the exposition falling on the regular date. A large attendance is expected this Saturday, as officers will be elected for the ensuing year, and other matters of interest are scheduled.

K. & M. Hannon, of San Francisco, have made arrangements for improved quarters. The building in which they are located at 1438 Polk street is to be replaced early next year with a

ANGRÆCUM EBURNEUM.

This noble hothouse orchid, a native of Madagascar, is also known as A. superbum. The plant shown in our illustration was grown and flowered by M. J. Pope, whose cultural skill is conclusively demonstrated in the splendid specimen here portrayed. Angraecum eburneum is one of the parents, with A. sesquipedale, of A.

Veitchii, one of the two Angraecum hybrids thus far recorded.

The Angraecums are true air plants and need no soil at the roots, but simply sphagnum moss frequently renewed. A warm moist place is essential to their well-being in winter. They have no pseudo-bulbs, hence must never be allowed to become dry.

modern structure, and they have secured quarters in the new building. They will probably have to move to a temporary location immediately after the holidays.

RESTRICTIONS ON FUNERAL FLOWERS.

The article, "Flowers at Funerals," by John C. Lindblom, in December 4th issue, is well and timely taken, but there are two sides to every question and I have no doubt that whether priest or prelate raises the question of flowers at funerals, it is not with any feeling of animosity against the florist or his business. It is a never failing fact that the habit of giving flowers at funerals has grown to an alarming extent, not alone among the wealthy but the poorer classes, who very often can poorly bear such expense and often are not able to pay for them when they get them. Another question along these lines on funeral occasions is that unscrupulous florists get in the habit of charging about 200% more for flowers used in funeral designs than for any other purpose, taking into consideration that it takes an artist to arrange a design, and it might be well, all things considered, not to stir up a hornet's nest without first viewing all the circumstances surrounding the case.

Yours for justice,

Roanoke, Va.

OBITUARY.

Frank H. Timmerhof.

Frank H. Timmerhof, for six years cashier for the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, passed away on Sunday, Dec. 12th, at his home at 2725 N. Ballou street, after a short illness. Mr. Timmerhof was a young man and had been married but a few months.

Lorenze Krodel, Sr.

Lorenze Krodel, a veteran florist of Pittsburgh, Pa., died suddenly on Sunday morning, December 5. Mr. Krodel was aged sixty-two years, nine months and fifteen days. He is survived by his widow, Elizabeth Schmitt Krodel, and a son, Lorenze Krodel, Jr., who is connected with the I. W. Scott Company, seed dealers.

VANDA SANDERIANA.

The beautiful illustration of this famous Philippine orchid which adorns our cover page this week, calls for no other description than to say that it is from a photograph sent to Horticulture by Sander & Sons, of the specimen Vanda Sanderiana which was awarded a silver Lindley Medal at the Royal Horticultural meeting in London on the 28th of last September. The variety was exceptionally fine and the plant carried 42 expanded flowers and a spike in bud.

BOSTON FLORIST BOWLERS.

We see in the accompanying group picture the members of the Boston Florists' Bowling League, whose scores we have been publishing weekly. In the centre of the second row from the top, directly under the light, with arms crossed, is the president of the league, Seymour Grose, who is also captain of the Carbone team. Meetings for practice and competition are held at the Arch Street Alleys every Thursday evening and much interest is mani-festated by the active young men connected with the flower markets and the wholesale and retail establishments. They bowl "candle pins" and small balls only. Owing to the busy holiday demands no bowling will be done until December 30.

Thorley has leased the store 36 W. 16th street for a holiday annex.

E. Allan Peirce of Waltham, Mass., arrived last Tuesday evening after an 18-hour trip from Boston, being snowed in two miles from Stamford, Conn.

There are rumors of several houses caving in through the weight of last Monday's snow which was wet and sticky and did not slide off as is usually the case.

J. J. Coan has got nicely settled down to business in his new wholesale flower store at 115 W. 28th street, where for the first week he worked at great disadvantage on account of delay in telephone and light installation.

Notes.

Muskogee, Okla. — The Oklahoma Seed Company have moved into larger quarters at 112 N. Main street.

Columbia, Mo.—Thomas Berry, formerly with the Archias Seed & Floral Company, has purchased a half interest in the Wheat Floral Co.

Raleigh, N. C.—All seed dealers must promptly renew their licenses, according to notices being sent out by the Commissioner of Agriculture of this state. Those not complying may be barred from the state or suffer the penalties of the law. The new licenses go into effect on January 1, 1916, and running for a year will cost $25.

Senator Gronna, of North Dakota, filed on December 7, 1915, a bill (S. 578) "To Prohibit the Interstate Shipment of Impure Seeds."

This is identically the same bill filed by Mr. Gonna in the 62d Congress (February 5, 1913), S. 8382, and in the 63d Congress, S. 480, the former being unacted upon, the latter unfavorably reported by the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

The present bill is thoroughly unwise, impracticable, and would, if enacted, wholly prohibit the shipment in interstate commerce of certain seeds. It applies to all field, vegetable and flower seeds, arbitrarily defining adulterations which no expert can detect, and making all seeds unfit for sale which are under 90 per cent. germination.

The following letter which is being sent to all members of the American Seed Trade Association should have a direct interest for many of our readers:

My dear Sir:—

As you are perhaps aware, Representative Anderson has introduced House Bill H. R. 636, which purposes to subject seeds, plants, etc., to the same rate of postage as other merchandise.

You know it was by considerable effort we were able to keep seed at the old rate, 2 oz. for 1c. up to and including 8 oz. It would be a mistake to let this bill slip through at this time after so much effort. I will depend on you to use every means in your power to prevent this from becoming a law.

Please furnish me carbon copies of the letters you will write to the Senators and Representatives so as to prevent duplication. It is also well to have these copies on file.

You can readily understand that the matter of having to zone over 4 oz. is going to add very considerable burden. Please let me hear from you at your earliest convenience.

Sincerely yours,
W. F. THERKILSON, chairman,
Postal Laws Committee A. S. T. A.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE.

In his annual report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915, which has just been issued, David F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture, indicates a number of important measures necessary for the betterment of agriculture, both on the production and marketing sides, and for the conservation of the resources of the Nation. It is a very interesting document for any one occupied with the problems of farming, marketing and distribution, meat supply, national forests, etc. For the horticulturist the section concerning the potash supply will be found interesting.

MASSACHUSETTS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE NOTES.

The series of trips to neighboring greenhouses being made by the junior classes in floriculture has been completed this week by visits to Butler & Uhlman's houses in Northampton and the Montgomery and several other ranges in Holyoke.

Practically all the students in floriculture have gotten places for the Christmas holidays in either retail stores or greenhouses. The department gratefully appreciates the interest shown by the commercial men towards the students in helping them to get some practical work.

Professor R. R. Root of the University of Illinois, addressed the floriculture club on "Color Combinations in Formal Garden Work."

The junior classes in pomology are pruning in the Owen orchard this week.

Secretary Pochelon has sent the following communication to all members of the F. T. D.:

At the meeting of The Florists' Telegraph Delivery held at Cleveland, O., it was decided by officers and members present that on bills not paid within thirty-five days from member to member the discount of 20 per cent. shall be forfeited. This would help to do away with a lot of unpleasant feeling and also would help us find out people who are negligent in paying their bills. If we wish to have any further success in the F. T. D. we must have prompt paying members on our list.

The responsibility of the F. T. D. through this act becomes a much greater value than it has been heretofore, so please do not let bills to F. T. D. members hang fire but settle them as quickly as possible.

When you make out your statement on January 1, send the secretary a list of all bills overdue and owed you by members of F. T. D. These bills will have to be settled immediately, and members refusing to do so will lose the 20 per cent. and their names are liable to be taken off our list.

The tone of this letter may seem harsh but it is the only way to uphold the prestige of The F. T. D.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

Henry Marshall has opened a new flower store at Davis Sq., Somerville, Mass.

J. Frank Edgar, prominent grower at Waverley, has been elected to the Board of Aldermen of Waltham, Mass.

On account of the Christmas rush all games of the Bowling Association have been postponed until the 30th of this month.

Frank Leavitt has severed his connection with the Montrose Greenhouses and his place has been filled temporarily by George Mullen.

The double range of small houses built on the side-hill system and all heated by a single Kroeschell boiler was one of the features which especially interested the visiting gardeners at the Farquhar Nurseries last Friday. These houses are models of economy and convenience for the purpose of plant growing and well worth a close study by anyone wishing to accomplish the most at the least cost.

Penn's palatial new flower store at corner of Tremont St. and Hamilton Place opens its doors to the public on Saturday, December 18. This place is heralded as the most modern and artistic floral establishment in New England, if not in the United States. The exterior glows with golden trimmings and the interior is as elaborate as mirrors, carving, sculpture and fountains can make it.

The selling section is tiled like all the rest in soft buff-colored stone, and the walls are of Caen stone colored blocks. The show windows are so fashioned as to make the interior of the store elliptical at the front with the door in the centre, over which there is a white marble clock. The windows themselves are inclosed at the top with a green lattice work. Both the front and back of the show windows are of all glass construction, which practically makes the whole shop open—a veritable crystal palace.

On either side of the store is a refrigerating system of new type, which is strictly hygienic in that it neither uses ice nor ammonia. This sort of refrigerator has never been used in a florist shop before, although generally adopted by the newer hospitals.

At the back the visitor will see the crowning feature, the fountain court. There, in the centre of the tiled floor, spurts a wonderful Italian fountain by a Boston sculptor. The court is surrounded by eight marble pillars topped with an ornamental frieze. Above is an iron and leaded glass ceiling which will light the court day and night.

CHICAGO.

Victor Young, who lately went into business with Fred Ronsley, on Dearborn street, now has a store of his own at 1239 N. Clark street.

Mrs. M. E. Irby, of Memphis, Tenn., was taken ill while in Chicago making her selections of holiday stock and was obliged to return home.

The new store opened by Mrs. J. Simpson in Austin, two weeks ago, is getting well established and a fair amount of trade is coming its way.

Traveling salesmen took Chicago customers by storm last week, each trying to make his yearly sales as large as possible in the few days left.

The wholesale houses report the once a year customers who want to place large orders at lowest prices are all writing for holiday stock. "Nothing doing."

One of the attractive holiday window displays is that of the Atlas Floral Co., with Herbert Stone in charge. The overhead is a canopy of green coated with white calcimine and sprinkled with mica and hung with the finest possible threads of tinsel. A background of ribbon-trimmed araucaria gave color, and the floor space in front held the usual cut flowers of the season.

That it is to be another plant Christmas is predicted, and the way orders are coming in is in favor of the plant side of the question. Aside from calls for carnations, which have been reported scarce, orders are slow on cut flowers, while the largest plant houses report practically all stock booked by December 10th.

Allie Zech, of Zech & Mann, 30 E. Randolph street, on December 13, had quite possibly a narrow escape from injury if not death and did not know it till the next morning. Remembering something he had left in the rear of the store, Mr. Zech went in and turned on the light, passing the side of the office on his way. A bent form was seen to dart out, but supposing it to be a messenger boy after flowers from the barrel, he thought no more of it after the first start and left without entering the office. The next morning it was found the cash drawer had been robbed of about ten dollars, but the safe had not been touched.

PHILADELPHIA.

Frank Alderberger, the well known and popular Wayne florist has been ill for a week or more. At last accounts he was improving a little.

Holly is not quite so well berried this year as for the past few years—taking it all around. Even the best Delaware brand, which leads the list always, is a little under the average.

WASHINGTON.

Florists have been warned to be on the lookout for a man giving the name of Fred R. Forth who is wanted in this city for giving one of their number a worthless check in payment of an order, the man collecting the balance in cash. His description is as follows: Between 5 ft. 7 and 5ft. 9 in. in height; age 35 to 40; weight 150 to 160 lbs.; well built, smooth face, dark complexion and hair, neatly dressed in sort of gray or brown Balmacaan overcoat and dark colored soft hat. The check passed upon the florist who notified the police was drawn on the Security Savings and Commercial Bank of this city.

J. H. Small & Sons, as usual, furnished the decorations for the annual banquet of the Gridiron Club last Saturday evening. The decorations were handsome and in part very unique. The feature was the "forest" for as the guests entered the banquet hall they passed down a lane bordered by growing cedars and spruce trees. The walls were lined with American Beauty roses, chrysanthemums and poinsettias. The enormous gridiron, emblazoned with electric lights, was decorated with American Beauty roses on either side. Vases of flowers were on each of the tables. The small ball room, in which the reception was held, was decorated with palms and flowering plants, together with standards of American Beauty roses. Wall pockets also contained chrysanthemums and roses.

In appreciation of his efforts in making the convention of the G. A. R. last September, the brilliant success that it turned out to be, 100 members of the Citizens' Committee met in the New Willard Hotel and presented William F. Gude, chairman of the committee, a handsome mahogany chest containing thirteen dozen pieces of equally handsome silver flatware. The presentation speech was made by Simon Wolf who said, "We are fortunate in the National Capital," he said, "to have had from time to time, when occasion demanded, such exhibition of unselfishness, coupled with splendid executive ability and power to grasp the situation and to discharge the duties incident thereto with signal ability. The recent Grand Army reunion demanded a presiding officer who could administer the affairs of the reunion, and we were most fortunate in having found in William F. Gude such a representative as has stamped the city of Washington as the leading center of hospitality and good cheer." Mr. Gude thanked those present in a few well chosen words and later held a reception during which he was congratulated by all upon the good work he had done.

Flower Market Reports

Market conditions are BOSTON responsive to the sharp wintry weather which has prevailed for the past week. Chrysanthemums are rapidly closing out and the receipts of other materials are small and, as a consequence, prices have stiffened up all along the line, although there is really very little business coming in and not much is expected now until the holiday rush opens up. The table of price quotations furnishes information for those familiar with market ways as to the price situation at present.

Wintry weather and BUFFALO the market unchanged from the week previous. Chrysanthemums have practically ended and this tends to throw the demand toward other stock, especially carnations, which have been too plentiful to hold up prices, but Saturday last saw the clean-up of the week and at this writing, Dec. 13, the day's receipts of carnations moved promptly and have stiffened in price. Roses are coming mostly in long grades. Lilies are fine and there is also some fine stevia, mignonette, sweet peas, and lily of the valley, the latter too plentiful with demand very light. Decorative material is selling well—in fact better than for years previous. This should be a good week for the merchants and they are in readiness for a little hustle.

In the Chicago market CHICAGO all is being made in readiness for the florists' busiest season and most of those in the trade are looking for one of the best years in their experience. There are many letters of inquiry but the positive orders are, as in the past two years, coming late. Each year the orders come later. The quantity of stock is generally conceded to be sufficient in roses and shy in carnations with the possible sunshine an important factor. Trade the past week has been good from the wholesalers' standpoint and rather quiet from the retailers', which means that shipping trade has been brisk. Chrysanthemums of the latest varieties are still here, but they show the end of the season is near. The pink shades seem to be the best this week but growers expect white ones also for the last. All kinds of roses, with few exceptions, are being cut heavily and there is every indication of a good crop. Orchids are scarce and the American Beauty supply is still very limited. Holly is fine and well berried.

A fortnight before CINCINNATI Christmas shows the market to be in a rather tight condition. Supplies are not very large but are able to take care of a moderately active demand. If promises for Christmas come here we are due to have a good supply of cut flowers for that day, otherwise we will run decidedly short. Roses and carnations are not very plentiful. Enough lilies are coming in to take care of the call for them. Up to this time the narcissus cut has not been very large. Stevia is plentiful. Callas, lily of the valley, violets and orchids are all in a pretty fair supply. Sweet peas are not very plentiful. Baby primrose and forget-me-not may be had, also poinsettias, which promise to be plenty. Some good late chrysanthemums are still offered.

The local market is CLEVELAND cleaning up every day with not half enough stock to take care of the orders. Carnations have been very scarce for the past week. Roses have cleaned up every day. Violets and American Beauties have been very fine. Chrysanthemums are over for this season. Callas and lilies have a good demand. Narcissii and sweet peas are very scarce and not enough for the demand. Lily of the valley is very fine. From all reports flowers will be very scarce for Christmas.

The wild storm of NEW YORK last Monday upset business conditions in every direction. Demand there was not, hence the almost entire suspension of the supply did not affect the market situation. Shipments due on Tuesday morning did not arrive, as a rule, until Wednesday morning and much of the stock was in badly damaged condition when received at the wholesale markets. Things are gradually righting themselves and considerable satisfaction is felt that this outbreak of winter's worst temper came at a time comparatively inactive and hopes are entertained for a reaction to moderate and kindly conditions for the Christmas holiday trade now about to open. The outlook is for a fair supply of all seasonable things and in most excellent quality.

Carnations were the feature last week. They took quite a jump on account of the shortened supply caused by the dark, cool weather. Loud and long were the protests from the buyers, while the harassed salesmen on the other hand smiled with satisfaction—glad that the tables had at last turned. In the rose market Mrs. Russell is the bright particular star—magnificent stock, much of it bringing forty and fifty dollars a hundred. Hadley and other reds are rather on the short side. Chrysanthemums are about over. What few Nons there are coming in are quickly picked up by the local buyers, so that there are none for outside shipping. Calenthe Veitchi is the latest addition to the orchid show. Cattleyas, vandas and cypripediums are plentiful and good. Demand rather sluggish. Prospects for Christmas week are very good, some big orders having been already booked and more coming in every mail. The market is rising right now (Wednesday, Dec. 15th). They are getting eight for good carnations today and some orders they can't fill at any price. Looks lively for Christmas week.

PITTSBURGH Owing to the combination of several weeks of cloudy weather and the pinching of plants for the Christmas trade, stock has been exceptionally "shy" since Thanksgiving. Society work is at "concert pitch," figuratively speaking and funeral work continues plentiful, so that the demands are really far in excess of the supply, the latter being considerably reinforced from the outside. While prices hold up well, there is nothing really extravagant. From an all-round point of view, the approaching holiday business will far exceed that of last year, when business conditions were marked by the quintessence of depression.

SAN FRANCISCO The downtown retailers enjoyed a better counter trade the past week than for some time, as large crowds of holiday shoppers are now visiting the large stores daily. The florists make quite a feature of novel and attractive window displays, and these are strong drawing cards for drop-in business. The trade anticipates a banner Christmas business and is preparing accordingly. Indications are toward plenty of stock with high average quality. Shipping business is a little above normal for this time of the year. Violets are the big feature, but a good many chrysanthemums, roses and greens are being sent out also. Locally the demand for chrysanthemums has dropped off decidedly, probably because the late offerings are off-quality for the most part. Bonnaillon is very scarce and good Nonin is hard to find. Pompons are still fairly plentiful, and continue to sell well. The rose situation has been improving for several weeks, until there is enough medium stock to fill all requirements, but fine stock is held at a premium. As there are not enough really good roses to supply the demand, the finest offerings clean up early in the day. More Cecile Brunner could be used, and Beauties are being held back for the holidays. A splendid crop of gardenias is coming on, and the demand is all that can be desired. The same is true of cattleyas. Paper white narcissi made their appearance at Thanksgiving time in limited quantity and are now being offered quite freely. Freesias are quite plentiful also and hyacinths are more in evidence. Plenty of poinsettias, primulas and begonias are in sight for the Christmas trade. California holly appears everywhere and a strong demand is reported. Lots of greens are being shipped.

ST. LOUIS Trade has been fair. The wholesale market shows a decided shortage, especially so in carnations, and prices are now doubled up. Roses are going to be in abundance as our local growers are all coming on crop, also shipments from outside show roses will be plentiful. Extra fine cut poinsettias are coming in. Other stock generally will be in plenty at usual prices.

KING CONSTRUCTION CO., King's Road, N. Tonawanda, N. Y.

WASHINGTON There is a heavy demand for stock of all varieties and a noticeable decrease in the supply. Flowerers have been blooming in this locality since last August and it is but natural that there should be a shortening up. Carnations have jumped to from $3 to $6 and hardly enough to fill the orders. Roses are in excellent shape and bring up to $15. American Beauty roses are also of fine quality and sell well at from $3 to $5 per dozen. The call for lily of the valley has been very good and gardenias which are increasing in quantity are selling well. The holiday sale of blooming plants has already begun. Azaleas, poinsettias, Cincinnati begonias and cyclamen are as good as have ever been seen in this locality. The days have been generally dark and cloudy, although perhaps not sufficiently so to have an adverse effect on floral production, for the stock offered is all.

Elizabethtown, Pa.—E. H. Zercher has purchased the I. W. Hoffman greenhouses on South Market street, and will carry on the business in the future. Mr. Zercher will conduct the business in addition to his extensive greenhouse business at Mt. Joy.

NEWS NOTES.

Grosse Isle, Mich.—James Bremer has purchased the greenhouses of David Beyers.

THE POTASH SUPPLY.

From the Report of the Secretary of Agriculture.

The potash situation continues very serious and a grave condition confronts the American farmer. There is practically no potash in this country for fertilizer use, and present indications are that the supply for this purpose will not be increased materially during the coming year. The investigations of the department and of the Geological Survey have shown the possibility of producing from American sources an ample quantity of potassium salts for domestic consumption. During the year no new sources have been discovered, but the conditions surrounding the development of known sources have been clarified considerably. There are four possible domestic sources of potash: The giant kelp of the Pacific coast from Lower California to Alaska; the alunite deposits, mainly in the mountains of Utah; the feldspathic rocks of the eastern part of the United States; and the mud of Searles Lake, in California.

Undoubtedly a large supply of potash salts could be obtained from the giant kelp. The kelp beds have been surveyed and a report, accompanied by maps showing in detail their extent and location, has been issued. Harvesting is accomplished easily, as the kelp grows in open water and barges fitted with moving attachments can be used.

For utilizing the kelp several methods are feasible. It may be dried and ground. In this condition it contains all the salts originally present, which are mainly potassium chlorid and sodium chlorid. This material has ideal mechanical properties for use in mixed fertilizers. When the pure potassium chlorid is desired it is necessary to separate the juice from the organic material and then to remove the sodium chlorid. The latter can be done readily by recrystallization; but the separation of the juice from the organic material is more difficult, for the reason that the kelp is nonfibrous and in attempts to effect separation by filtration the filters become clogged and unworkable. The problems yet to be worked out commercially are the best methods of drying the wet kelp and of effecting the ready and efficient separation of the plant juices from the organic material. Investigation of these questions has proceeded far enough to indicate that their solution should not be very difficult.

But the development of a supply of potash from the kelp beds is still remote. There are several reasons for this. No one knows how long the European war may last or how soon potash from the former usual sources may be available. The American fertilizer companies heretofore have depended largely on the mining of phosphate rock and the manufacture of sulphuric acid for superphosphates. In these lines they are deeply interested financially. There is, furthermore, an element of doubt as to the control of the kelp beds. Just what jurisdiction the Federal Government has over them does not appear, and the Pacific Coast States have not legislated concerning those lying opposite their shores. It is unlikely, even in the event of an early peace, that there immediately will be a great supply of potash salts. It is a question how long it would take

Dear Sir: The Horticulture Jury, of which the writer was a member, awarded you a Gold Medal for your Insecticides, and when you take into consideration the fact that that Jury, outside of the writer, was composed of some of the famous experts of the world, you will realize the importance of this award. Verification of this may be obtained from Mr. George A. Dennison, Chief of Horticulture, Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

The writer has been requested to furnish a list of the articles which the Jury endorsed by their action in awarding prizes because of merit. This request comes from representatives of foreign countries and states.

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:

lution of oxids of sulphur, and a residue consisting of alumina and potassium sulphate remains. From this residue the potassium salt can be obtained readily by leaching and evaporation. The process is simple. The fumes liberated could be used to manufacture sulphuric acid; but this commodity would be in little demand in the locality and some method of disposal or utilization would have to be devised. Alumina resulting as a by-product would be suitable for the manufacture of metallic aluminum; but this metal is produced by one concern which controls sufficient bauxite deposits for its purposes and is not interested in other sources of alumina.

Work has been done along the line of producing potash from feldspar. This is commercially feasible if a salable by-product can be secured at the same time. The suggestion has been made by the Bureau of Soils that cement is a possible product from the feldspar treated to render the potash soluble. But the difficulty of marketing this cement in competition with thoroughly standardized products would be a great deterring factor.

The development of Searles Lake as a source of potash presents a number of unsolved technical problems. In addition, the question of title to the property is so involved that considerable time will elapse before it can be settled. In the meantime nothing can be done.

It is a matter of distinct regret that responsible business concerns have not made more earnest efforts to provide potash for agricultural purposes. Only recently, although the need of potash has been felt for a year, two companies have begun to develop a supply from alumite, but unfortunately it will be some months before any considerable quantity from this source can be placed upon the market.

You see what a thoroughly practical attractive side interior it makes. Certainly it's light enough.

Of Interest to Gardeners

WHEN the first curved eave houses were constructed, it was at once evident to us that altho the placing of the gutter at the sill, and substituting wall vents for continuous side ventilating sash, produced an exceedingly attractive house, it was also evident that practicalness was being somewhat sacrificed to attractiveness. It was, however, what owners and many of the gardeners demanded.

There were, on the other hand, some gardeners who put their foot down hard and declared they must have some kind of side sash so they could have ample top of bench ventilation. Some liked the idea of having every third light made a separate vent sash. Altho this was a decided improvement in results over the wall vents, still, in the opinion of some, it rather detracted from the attractiveness of the house.

In some cases we put a neat angle iron at the bottom of the eave curves, and hinged the sash directly to it.

This made a good fix, from a construction standpoint.

Still it had certain drawbacks, as the angle, while being large enough for the purpose, was not big enough to overcome the effect of an architecturally meaningless strip.

So the logical thing was to return to our ornamentally moulded gutter and place it at the eave. This gave a cornice effect, which as used in our old straight roof houses, was so heartily endorsed by architects.

The little shade which this gutter may cast is more than overbalanced by the advantage of the ventilation. The sides are also higher, giving much the same head room as in the more expensive curvilinear house.

Those who have this modified curved eave construction speak in high terms of it.

If you would like photographs of these subjects shown along with other general exterior views, we will be glad to send you a set to show to your employer.

The greater height at the side overcomes that somewhat squatly effect, so commented on with the old house.

Just another proof of its light, pleasing interior effect. Note the ample head room there is on the side benches.

The New Rose, Mrs. Bayard Thayer that we are offering this season, will make a fine addition to a class of large flowered roses which is rapidly coming to the front since we introduced Mrs. Charles Russell of which the new claimant is a sport. The color is a most beautiful clear rose pink, inside of petals a shade lighter. The foliage heavy and smooth and carried on strong stems. It won the American Rose Society medal over a strong class of competitors at the Cleveland Show, scoring 90 points.

A BOOK WORTH HAVING.

Dear Sirs:

The last letter we wrote you was an appreciation about Thomas' Book on Roses. We have had a lot of fun following his instructions this last summer and we consider the book worth much more than four dollars. On a test bed of about one hundred roses planted in April, 1915, we grew over thirteen hundred blooms and could have had at least one-third more if we had not pruned out a lot of shoots to give more strength to the bushes. We could write a volume on the value of Thomas' book, but enough said.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Cinerarias

Give the plants a cool house and keep the green fly away. A cineraria must have plenty of water, but if you notice traces of yellow in the leaves let up a little. When the plant once starts to get buds, transplanting or shifting will do it but little good, if you wish it to grow longer before flowering. Rather apply light doses of liquid cow manure instead. This is the time for the cinerarias to grow and while there may be nothing very beautiful about their coarse leaves, they are necessary to give the flower heads their proper setting; they belong to it and in order to have them the plants must have sufficient room to develop nicely. From early January up to Easter, as a plant for the show house they are hard to beat, and they will always be grown by the florist for that purpose. Do not keep them in too high a temperature. When given 40 to 48 they will grow into fine sturdy stock that will bear flowers profusely.

Cyclamens

The young plants for next winter should have every encouragement. If elevated on shelves or in a house kept at 55 degrees at night they will be all right. When ready for their first potting, use a compost of three parts loam and one-half part each of well decayed dried manure and leaf-mold with some sand added. Continue to give the potted plants the same temperature as when in flats. So long as they remain in flats go over them once a week and scratch over the surface soil. Avoid a close atmosphere, however, as this will cause the plants to become leggy. Cyclamens which are not wanted until spring must be kept in a cool, airy house, with a night temperature of from 42 to 45 degrees. On through the winter there is a constant call for these plants at all retail places, and to get plants along, 8 to 10 degrees more of heat is advisable. On all good days give ventilation even if only a very little. Watch the pots so they do not dry out.

Chrysanthemum Stock Plants

Too often we see these in pots and boxes on the walks or even below the benches, exposed to drip and every unfavorable condition. Cuttings taken from such plants cannot be expected to give flowers at all equal to those grown well up to the light in a cool house. There are all kinds of ways for wintering stock. Where the climate is not too severe it can be planted in cold-frames, held practically dormant for several months, and when opened in early spring the plants will soon give a grand crop of strong cuttings, better than those to be had in any other way. Good flowers always will sell. The best method for the average commercial grower who may need to start propagating early with special varieties is to plant in benches in a cool house. A violet temperature of 40 degrees at night will answer admirably. Let us all try to treat our stock plants better than we have in years past. I am quite sure it will pay in the end.

Lilies for Easter

We must now look to our Easter lilies, but there is no hurry as yet as Easter is very late—April 23—and it will be more of a case of holding them back than forcing them. If the buds show plainly by the 10th or 15th of March they will be all right. Longiflorums should be through the soil now. In the case of multiflorums a temperature of 55 degrees at night will suffice, while Formosas will do nicely at 50 degrees as a minimum. Giganteum is the lily par excellence for the pot plants. Bulbs of this arrive later than other varieties. It likes heat from the start and if given 55 degrees at night after potting, and 60 to 65 degrees once growth is started, it is almost sure to do well. If these lilies are just showing their growth above the soil they will be all right in an average minimum 60 degrees. Of course it is to force or retard a certain number which always come earlier or later than the main batch.

Violets

At this season the violets will not need frequent watering but sometimes the surface soil may seem damp and that below be rather dry. Violets like to have their roots cool and moist and anything like dryness will injure them and make them an easier prey for red spider if they chance to be near the heating pipes. To hold singles down to 40 degrees at night has not been possible sometimes. On the other hand, the doubles in mid-winter should be kept at 42 to 45 degrees at night or they will not open well. A few degrees higher will speedily excite the plants and cause an increased crop of leaves which we do not want. Look out for green fly or it will speedily cause lots of trouble. Violets will not stand heavy fumigation. Avoid, therefore, the use of tobacco stems and any of the nicotine extracts. The nicotine papers are perfectly safe. Change the air of the house even if it is for only a short time, as they like fresh air at all times.

Verbenas

While some of us keep stock plants lifted in the fall to take cuttings from, plants raised from seed can be depended upon to furnish the best flowering. To have good sized plants by next spring seed should be sown now. Give them a mixture of soil, leaf mold and sand in equal parts. Place in a temperature of 60 degrees until they come up, when they should have from 50 to 55 degrees. When large enough prick off.

Clematis Jackmani

Mr. John J. M. Farrell,

Dear Sir: Please tell me in your valuable paper the best way to get a stock of Clematis Jackmani. It seems as if I cannot get seed to come true.

Yours truly,

Chillicothe, Mo.

R. L. I.

In answer to the inquirer I would say that they can be readily increased either by cuttings, grafting or layering. The best time to take cuttings is about the middle of June. Taking the young wood leaving three or four joints. These can be placed in a gentle bottom heat in a greenhouse or make a hot bed with horse manure, letting it stand a week until the violent heat passes off. By keeping them shaded and moist in either case they will root. They can be potted off when well rooted and given shade until they take hold of the soil. By the grafting method you can get some roots of Clematis integrifolia, C. paniculata or C. viticella to use for stock to graft on. This grafting can be done anytime from January up to the end of March. The best mode is whip grafting. Make a scion, leaving one eye to the piece, and tie on to the stock. The roots of stock can be potted up during the fall and brought into heat about four or five weeks before they are wanted. These pots can be plunged in sand in a warm propagating frame in a temperature of 65 to 70 degrees. Keep close and moist for four or five weeks when they should be gradually inured to the air. When they become hardened they can be grown on in a cool house. Clematis Jackmani can also be increased by layering or pegging down the vines in the ground during the fall and leaving them there until the next fall when they can be removed with roots and planted where desired. Where these layers enter the soil they are better to be cut half through which stops the flow of sap, thereby encouraging the formation of roots more quickly.

Poinsettias Wilting

Editor HORTICULTURE,

Dear Sir: I would like to get information from your Mr. Farrell as to the best method of keeping the blooms of poinsettias from wilting after they are cut from the plant.

Yours truly,

Roanoke, Va.

P. F.

In answer to P. F., I would say that the stems should be placed about half an inch in boiling water just as soon as possible after they are cut. Bring the boiling water into the house where you cut them so you will lose no time in sealing the ends. They should remain from 30 to 40 seconds in the boiling water in order to seal them well. After the ends are treated they should be placed in water well up the stems. We use a tub. They should remain in the water from 8 to 10 hours. This will put them in good condition for shipping or any other use. We have used this method with success so can recommend it.

A Substitute for Potassium Cyanide

A good substitute for potassium cyanide is something that all florists who practice hydrocyanic acid gas fumigation would welcome. The present war has caused a scarcity in many products which Germany has always supplied, but there are few things that have affected those who pursue the various branches of agriculture more than the scarcity of the potassium fertilizers and chemicals. Potassium cyanide is no exception to the rule. However, a good substitute for potassium cyanide is sodium cyanide.

At present, sodium cyanide is much cheaper than the potassium cyanide and can be used in the same way for gas fumigation. But, certain prerequisites are necessary, if one is to use this substitute. First, only $\frac{3}{4}$ as much sodium cyanide as potassium cyanide is used. Second, a different grade of sodium cyanide must be used. The same strength sodium cyanide as potassium cyanide used would ruin the plants, for much free hydrochloric acid (HCl) would be given off.

One of the most common impurities is sodium chloride and its action would result in the freeing of the hydrochloric acid as can be seen by the equation:— $\text{H}^2\text{SO}^4 + 2 \text{Na Cl} = \text{Na}^2\text{SO}^4 + 2 \text{H Cl}$. We must, then, use a grade of sodium cyanide which is much purer, in proportion, than the potassium cyanide. It must be 128% pure. The ordinary potassium cyanide that is used is about 98% pure. Such a grade contains 40% cyanogen. However, a grade of sodium cyanide containing but 40% cyanogen would ruin your plants as shown by the preceding formula. We, therefore, use 128% to 130% pure sodium cyanide which contains as much as 52% cyanogen and for this reason only three-quarters as much is needed. Don't buy the ordinary druggists' sodium cyanide, for they carry only the impure grades. Roessler & Hasselacher Chemical Company, N. Y. can supply the pure grade and doubtless there are other chemical companies from which it can be purchased.

In using either sodium or potassium cyanide for gas fumigation, use in lump form only. This will offer some resistance to decomposition by the acid and so will give a slower and better distribution of the gas and, most important, will give you more time to leave the house. Cloth bags for holding the chemical are needless. Using lumps one-half the size of an egg, the operation is quite simplified. The acid is poured in the pans, beforehand, and when everything is ready you simply pass through the house and drop the cyanide into each container. Do not use glass containers as much heat is generated and it is liable to break a glass dish. Use earthen ware or granite containers.

The proportions of chemicals and the directions are as follows: Two parts (fluid measure) of water are placed in the container and into this is carefully poured and stirred one and one-half parts (fluid measure) of sulfuric acid 98% pure. When everything is ready, drop in one part by weight of cyanide.

The amounts of cyanide to use in a house vary with the plants, the insects and the cubic feet of space. For white fly on tender plants, you may use .075 grams cyanide per cubic foot of space, while for harder plants you may use stronger doses. Always remember, however, that you use only three-quarters as much sodium cyanide as you use potassium cyanide. By calculating the amount of cubic feet of space and multiplying by the strength to be used you get the total quantity of cyanide necessary for the house in grams. To get the equivalent in ounces divide by 28.35.

Always exercise the greatest care in using this fumigant as it is a deadly poisonous gas. Always air the house out thoroughly for at least one-half an hour before entering after you have fumigated.

If you are in doubt as to how much you should use, try a weak dose first and, if this does not accomplish results, try a stronger dose next time. Always be careful of using the stronger doses until you know your plants will stand it.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Work After Christmas.

With Christmas over we settle down to the regular work once more. Any mistakes made during the rush will be charged to experience and they should never occur again another year. The new year will soon be here now, but there will not be as much buying as there was for Christmas, although flowers will be in demand as much as ever. The work that will confront us after the holidays will be propagation. Many places have already started, and have several thousand plants in pots now. On large places this is well, for there are so many plants to be grown that it is necessary to start in real early. On a small place with the houses doing well it will be best to wait until the first of February for then it will not be necessary to tear out plants so soon and so many of them.

Marking Poor Plants

Even in the best houses there will be plants that are not doing as well as they should or they may bear flowers that are off in color. All these should be marked and no wood taken from them. Take all wood from strong healthy plants, for like produces like and the poor plants resulting after years of growing can generally be traced to selection of poor wood from poor plants. If time permits it would be well to go over the houses and find the plants that produce the most flowers and then take as much wood from these as you can get. There is such a thing as "blood" in plants. We have a good demonstration here of two benches of Killarneys. These plants are several years old and had been neglected a good deal in years past and the plants they came from were of a questionable quality. These will not respond to treatment as some healthy plants next to them will: they will not give the quality or quantity, and will not be nearly as profitable as the plants with plenty of energy—those that have been bred up, not down. The simplest way of marking the plants that are tied to stakes is with a piece of cardboard tied to the top of the stake.

Making Cuttings.

Select proper wood, which should not be too old and have nice red thorns or live thorns at least. The knife should be sharp enough to shave as a good edge is absolutely necessary for a smooth cut, free from bruise. With Teas we prefer three eyes to a cutting where we have plenty of wood. When propagating Beauties, or Teas with the wood scarce, two-eye cuttings are made. Beauties should never be made with three eyes as the plants will not thrive nearly as well as those grown from two-eyed cuttings. Do not leave too much leaf to a cutting. Generally the first two leaflets will suffice, but should these be small it will be well to leave half of the next two. The idea is to leave enough leaf for the cutting to breathe properly, but at the same time not so much as to make it hard work for it to keep the leaf alive. With too much leaf, the propagating bench will be crowded and blackspot is likely to set in, which strips the leaves off terribly and traces of it can be found months later when the plants are already in the benches. Make a slanting cut quite close to the eye, slanting away from it. Care should be taken not to cut too close as that would weaken the eye and the cutting might not root, or else produce a poor plant. Do not put in any cuttings with diseased leaves. These will only make trouble, and are likely to spread the disease to the leaves that were healthy when put into the sand. As soon as some wood is cut, sprinkle it well but do not put it into a tub of water for any length of time. This was the custom years ago, but we find the cuttings made from wood that is not water-soaked root much better and are less likely to rot if the heat in the sand happens to run up a little higher than it should be. Keep the cuttings well sprinkled, for if they should wilt they will be worthless. Do not keep them out of the sand very long for if they are allowed to lie around for any length of time, they are bound to wilt, and even though it may not be noticeable they will not root well then. The sand should be all packed and ready for them, with proper bottom heat. Never put cuttings in first and then turn on the heat, have everything read for them, so that they will start callousing at once. A good watering will be necessary every morning if the sand is well drained. An occasional sprinkling may be necessary if the weather is clear and cold but see that the cuttings do not have any water on the leaves at night. This will start blackspot quicker than anything else.

young men desirous of perfecting themselves in this very important branch of horticultural art. Earlier in the season the success of the course seemed somewhat in doubt. Its abandonment, on account of waning interest, would be a great pity and far from creditable to the aspirations of the large proportion of young gardeners which goes to make up the nearly five hundred members of the Boston club. In opportunity for honors and emolument, landscape gardening in America stands today far ahead of all other branches of horticulture, and there need be no fear of overcrowding.

Seems improbable

It was stated by one of the speakers at the recent convention of gardeners in Boston that the rather small attendance of members from places outside of the immediate environments of Boston was due to the failure to incorporate more recreation, such as bowling, etc., in the regular program. This does not seem a valid explanation. There are a number of other reasons that might be offered, as being more likely and at the same time more to the credit of the gentlemen who make up the membership of the association. That any gardener worthy of the name would absent himself from a gathering of his fellows in such a centre of progressive horticulture as Boston is acknowledged to be, for no other reason than that no bowling had been promised, seems quite preposterous and we should be sorry to have to believe it true.

To enlist all interests

Comment has been heard in gardener circles upon the comparatively greater prominence of the commercial floricultural element in the leading flower shows, of late. The fact that the trade firms are thus in the ascendant is used as an incentive to spur the private gardeners on to a greater interest and activity in this direction. While we have never found ourselves quite in sympathy with any movement tending to array the private gardening people against the commercial section, yet there can be no harm but much good to come from an amicable emulation between these two classes on the exhibition tables and if a further segregation of the prizes offered in the schedules will help to strengthen any exhibition, let this be done. It was not so long ago that frequent complaints were being made by the trade people that it was unfair to expect them to compete against private exhibitors with unlimited time and money at their disposal, but now the situation appears to be reversed, as it is the private gardener who asks protection in the majority of cases. We believe that the best interests of horticulture might be better served by giving as far as possible, distinct departments to each of the two classes of exhibitors than by simply duplicating the premiums as has been done in some instances recently. The private gardener has exceptional facilities for acquiring and testing out new things. In fact, quite a few of our finest commercial plant and cut flower favorites had their first exploitation in the country at the hands of some clever private gardener. A bigger inducement to activity by the private gardeners in this particular sphere would be vastly more useful as a rule than, for instance, offering them a set of premiums for established commercial varieties of roses and carnations which are sure to be well taken care of by the trade exhibitors. The opportunities in floriculture are still exhaustless. Improvement and demonstration on new lines are essentials which should never be lost sight of in our exhibition promotion and in this direction there is room enough for all—private gardeners especially.

Optimism

So far as we have been privileged to learn, a genuine revival of prosperity is now confidently looked for by the entire florist trade of the country, who find cheering promise and assurance in the volume and quality of the advance holiday business. We realize that there will be no time to spare for the reading of this week's trade papers until Christmas has passed into history and its results, for better or for worse, all known beyond any speculation, consequently, expectations and forecasts have no useful place in these lines. All we can say is that we most eagerly hope that the optimism which is unmistakably evident on all sides at the time of this writing may prove to have been fully justified.

A golden opportunity

We are pleased to see that the landscape gardening classes for this season, conducted by the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, are nicely filled up with CHRISTMAS GLORY AT RUTHERFORD.

It is conceded that the holiday plant growers have had the most remarkable demand ever experienced for their products this fall. Christmas orders began to come in long ahead of the time and have continued with increasing momentum until "sold out" has been the unavoidable reply in many cases. We visited the Julius Roehrs Company's place at Rutherford, N. J., one week previous to the holiday, and found it a veritable hive of industry and hustle, packing and shipping, with no more orders accepted on most of the Christmas specialties and some of them even oversold. One who has not visited such a place under similar circumstances cannot realize the stupendous proportions of the business done at such a time—plants by thousands standing like forests, in their wrappings in the spacious packing shed, and actually acres of begonias, cyclamens, camellias and azaleas in the houses awaiting their turn to be wheeled out and prepared for shipment by a swarm of busy workers.

There is no finer sight anywhere at this time than the three large houses filled with camellias—plants two to five feet high in pots and resplendent with bloom. We would not have missed seeing it for anything. Many of these camellias were made up into groups of four or five in one pan in combination with nice little clumps of Asparagus plumosus, and the arrangement was very pleasing to look at. There were azaleas in gorgeous billows of color, house after house of them. For quantity Begonia Gloire de Lorraine took the lead, there being no less than thirteen houses filled with them in many sizes—pots and suspended baskets. Most impressive of all was Begonia Mrs. Peterson. There were two houses filled with this beautiful novelty which we believe is destined to take the leading place among recent plant introductions. Its ample inflorescence of sparkling pink against the lustrous dark foliage needs but to be seen to make a sensation.

There are many other things in this big establishment that arrest the attention of the plant lover in passing through, about which we shall have a word to say later on.

The Holyoke & Northampton (Mass.) Florists' & Gardeners' Club held its annual meeting Tuesday evening, Dec. 14th, at the greenhouses of G. H. Sinclair, Holyoke. Mr. Sinclair took occasion at the same time to christen the Belle Skinner cup which he won at the recent flower show with an exhibit of chrysanthemums. Officers were elected as follows: President, Aubrey Butler, Northampton; Vice-president, Geo. Strugnell, of the Bonnie Brae greenhouses; Secretary and Treasurer, James Whiting, Amherst; Executive Committee, William Downer, Prof. E. J. Canning and Edward Hennessey, all of Northampton. After the business of the meeting had been transacted, there was an enjoyable social time, refreshments being served and music furnished by an orchestra; also songs by Norman Dash. The January meeting of the club will be held with George Rackliffe.

BRASSAVOLA NODOSA.

This is one of the prettiest of the twenty species of this genus. It has also been known as B. grandiflora and B. subulifolia. The photograph was taken by M. J. Pope in the orchid houses under his charge at Naugatuck, Conn. The Brassavolas are natives of tropical America, the one here pictured being found in Southern Mexico and Jamaica. They are closely related to the Laelias and require the same treatment. They need plenty of sun to mature the young growths, and, when resting, a somewhat drier atmosphere than during growth. They do best suspended on blocks, near the glass. Flowers pale green and white.

NEWS NOTES.

San Francisco—Announcement has been made that the Exposition's $1,000 cash prize for the best rose entered in the international rose contest went to Dickson & Son of Belfast, Ireland, for a rich yellow creation.

Newton, Mass.—A. W. Wilson, proprietor of the Flower Shop, 406 Center street, has newly fitted up and adorned his store, which is now the most attractive of its kind in this section. Fixtures and furniture are of quartered oak, and the floor of mosaic marble.

Hackettstown, N. J.—Herrick & Roos have recently purchased the Harte greenhouse establishment, and will grow flowers for the New York wholesale trade. Mr. Roos was for many years with Siebrecht, of New Rochelle, and later with J. H. Small & Sons, of New York City.

Rahway, N. J.—Trial of the suit of Wilbur N. Bauman, florist, of Rahway, against George R. Sloane, of Newark for $500 which the plaintiff alleged had been illegally collected by the defendant by representing that he was executing an order of the court, resulted in a victory for Sloane in District Court, when Judge David awarded the defendant a judgment of $362.73.

Sloane was arrested last week on a warrant sworn out by Bauman, charging him with fraud. Last April 1, Sloane was deputized by Oliver Conlin, sergeant-at-arms of the District Court, to execute a judgment of about $150 granted against Bauman in favor of Hitchings & Company and was placed in the store for four days until the amount was collected. In the present suit, Bauman contended that Sloane remained at the store until November 11, under the pretense that he was acting by authority of the court, and that he collected $500. Sloane contended that Bauman had employed him to remain at the store at a salary of $2.50 a day and had given him a bill of sale for the business as security for his wages. Sloane set up a counter claim for wages and was awarded the sum mentioned.

Wm. R. Beverly, one of the oldest residents and a former florist of Rockland, Mass., celebrated his 83d birthday December 17th.

Obituary

Christian Muno.

Christian Muno, of 108 Ridge Ave., Chicago, passed away Dec. 20th, at his home after years of illness. About twenty years ago he built a range of houses and specialized in carnations, but soon gave it up and rented the houses, as his health would not permit work of that kind.

Leonard G. Townsend.

Leonard G. Townsend, head of the Townsend Floral Co., doing business at 4248 Olive street, St. Louis, Mo., for the past sixteen years died at St. John's Hospital, December 12, after a short illness. Mr. Townsend was born in 1861, in Ohio and so far as known had no relatives. Miss A. Histon who was with him in business will continue same with her brother.

Alfred C. Smith.

Alfred C. Smith, a well-known gardener of Westerly, R. I., who had charge of a number of summer estates at Watch Hill, died suddenly from heart disease at the Central Theater, Pawcatuck, on Wednesday evening, Dec. 15. He and Mrs. Smith had been seated in the theatre only a few minutes when he was taken ill and died shortly afterwards. Mr. Smith, who was 52 years of age, is survived by his wife, mother and one brother, Albert Smith, of Westerly.

Henry Blume.

Henry Blume, well known in the New York flower market for many years, and for the past two years in the employ of P. J. Smith, 131 West 28th street, died suddenly at his home, Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn, from hardening of the intestines, on Monday morning, Dec. 20, aged 42 years. Previous to his employment with P. J. Smith, Mr. Blume had been 13 years with Frank Lichtenhand at the Grand Central Station, later with Metz at 117th street and 3rd avenue, having started in the flower business as a boy with Le Moulton on the Bowery. Mr. Blume was universally liked by all who came in contact with him. He was a quiet, industrious man of the strictest integrity, and no one was ever heard to say an ill word regarding him. Much sorrow was expressed at the place where he was employed when the news of his death was received. He had been at work as usual up to closing time on Saturday evening.

Norfolk, Va. — The Art Floral Company, recently formed with a capital of $15,000, has opened at the City Market, Monticello and Tazewell streets. The large plate glass front, sides and roof, add very materially to the handsome appearance of the store. The officers of the corporation are Lyons H. Williams, president; F. W. Herrgen, vice-president, and H. R. Weller, secretary and treasurer. Messrs. Williams and Weller are officers of the Williams Seed Company, while Mr. Herrgen is well-known to the trade, having been associated with a retail florist here for many years.

PHLOX SYLPHIDE.

Of the many good white herbaceous phloxes now on the market it is probable that, all things considered, none are superior to the variety Sylphide. While many of the new varieties have the unfortunate drawback of being constitutionally weak and in the course of a few years drop out, Sylphide is one of those which retains its vigor and given even ordinary cultivation is always satisfactory. It is a pure white and the individual flowers and truss are large. It is nominally a strong free grower, devoid of any disease, but if occasionally replanted and given good cultivation it grows into a magnificent plant as fine as anything in the whole herbaceous garden. The photograph from which our illustration was made, was taken at the grounds of the Mt. Desert Nurseries, Bar Harbor, Me.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The next officers' meeting of the St. Louis Florist Club will take place January 6 at the home of Vice-president Wells, at 8 o'clock.

The December session of the Botanical Society of Western Pennsylvania was held as usual in the Herbarium of Carnegie Institute, President John Bright presiding. He also spoke at some length on the collections made during his last summer vacation at Ohio Pyle. Illustrating this were some fine specimens of marshallia, which has recently come from the Southern mountains. The plant, which flowers in July, has blossoms of an unusual and exquisite shade between a pink and lavender, and has just come into commercial use for bedding purposes.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

AMERICAN SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

At the executive committee meeting held at the Hotel Belmont, New York, on Saturday, December 4, 1915, the following resolution on the death of W. Atlee Burpee was adopted:

The Executive Committee of the American Sweet Pea Society, held in New York City, Dec. 4th, 1915, speaking for its members, desires to express in this feeble manner its sense of immeasurable loss sustained by the passing away of its most devoted charter member, W. Atlee Burpee. The Society has lost its best friend and the flower we all love so well has lost its most ardent lover.

Wherever the Sweet Pea is grown, it will always be known as an emblem of pure devotion to the memory of our devoted friend.

RESOLVED, That a copy of these minutes be sent to the bereaved family, spread upon the minutes and a copy be sent to the Trade Press.

Signed: William Gray, President; W. C. Kerr, Vice-President; Lester L. Morse; A. N. Kirby; A. J. Sperling; J. Harrison Dick; Arthur T. Boddington, Treasurer; Harry A. Bunyard, Secretary.

J. Harrison Dick was elected to the executive Committee, to fill the vacancy occurring through the death of Mr. Burpee.

Lester L. Morse was authorized to hold an exhibition in San Francisco, 1917, under the auspices of the American Sweet Pea Society with full power to act. Frank G. Cuthbertson was appointed assistant secretary to act at the exhibition.

President Gray appointed the following as a general committee on exhibitions: W. C. Kerr, William H. Duckham, J. Harrison Dick, A. N. Kirby, W. A. Sperling. A letter was read from the Bar Harbor Horticultural Society stating they were preparing the schedule for the summer exhibition of 1916. It was resolved, in view of the fact that the Bar Harbor exhibition must be held three weeks later than any date in which New York and vicinity growers could possibly exhibit, that the society hold an exhibition and convention in New York City contingent upon a sufficient sum for premiums being assured and a suitable hall for the exhibition be secured and that the matter should be at the discretion of the exhibition committee. Several members present volunteered premiums should the committee decide upon an exhibition.

It was voted that the Society issue a Year Book, to be known as the "Sweet Pea Oracle" to be sent to the members free, and to others for 25c., also that any firm desiring a quantity of these bulletins, should be supplied with same at cost. J. Harrison Dick, chairman; W. A. Sperling, and Harry A. Bunyard were appointed to take the matter in hand at once.

It was resolved that Horticultural Societies may become associate members on the payment of $10.00 annual dues. Such societies will have the privilege of receiving and awarding one each of the American Sweet Pea Society's medals, namely: One silver and one bronze at their local exhibitions; will also have the privilege of sending one delegate with power to vote at the annual conventions. AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

In making up the forms for printing the premium schedule the printers inadvertently dropped class 6 in section A. This class calls for a vase of 100 blooms any red or scarlet, to include all varieties generally included in those colors. Same prizes as other classes in section A. A special notice will be sent to all members about January 1. A. F. J. Baur, Sec'y.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society held a meeting in New York on December 13. It was reported that the Rose Garden premium for the National Flower Show in Philadelphia, March 25 to April 2, had been raised so that the first prize would be $500 in cash; second prize $400 cash, and third prize $300 cash.

Michell Seed House offers a gold medal for the best vase of 25 blooms of American Beauty roses; a gold medal for the best vase of 25 blooms Mrs. Charles Russell; a gold medal for the best vase of 25 blooms of red roses. Other special prizes have been received from August Doemling, Lansdowne, Pa., $25; Conard & Jones Company, West Grove, Pa., $25; Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J., $25; S. S. Skidelsky & Co., Phila., Pa., $10.; S. J. Reuter & Son, Westerly, R. I., $25; Lord & Burnham Company, New York City, $25.; Harry O. May, Summit, N. J., $25.; Pulverized Manure Company, Chicago, $25.; Kroeschell Bros. Company, Chicago, $25., and Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa., $25.

These prizes are all at the disposition of the American Rose Society to place where they will be most useful.

The secretary was directed to notify all affiliated societies that beginning January, 1916, they will be required to pay 25c. to each member instead of 10c. as heretofore. The reason for this action is that the furnishing of medals and annuals as now proposed makes it an impracticable arrangement when based upon 10c. for the American Rose Society to carry out.

The committee appointed at the last annual meeting to report upon the standardization of stems of various cut flowers for commercial sale reported progress. The committee was composed of Messrs. S. S. Pennock, Phila., Pa.; Patrick Welch, Boston, Mass.; Frank H. Traendly, New York City.

The arranging of suitable lengths of stem was brought up by Ex-President Elliott and from time to time has been requested by commercial florists in various parts of the country. A matter was referred to the executive committee asking if something could not be done in regard to preventing the re-naming of roses different from the name under which they were first disseminated. Action was referred to the committee to be presented at the coming annual meeting.

There are 114 members of the American Rose Society who stand in good and regular form with the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, and this entitles the president of the American Rose Society who is S. S. Pennock of Philadelphia, Pa., to membership on the Board of Directors of the S. A. F. for the year 1916.

The following roses were registered and publication of the same directed according to the rules and regulations of the A. R. S.:

Mrs. Wm. R. Hearst—A sport from

My Maryland with the same productive habit of growth and freedom of flowering. In color, a clear, dark pink, a shade resembling Bridesmaid, and a decided improvement on the parent.

Red Radiance—A sport from Radiance. Similar in habit and growth, but a clear, even shade of red in color and of equal merit to its parent as a forcing and garden rose.

Little Sunshine—Seedling from Rosa multiflora nana × Soleil d'Or. Color, creamy yellow varying to deep golden yellow occasionally flecked or splashed with crimson. Double flowers one and one-half to two inches in diameter, carried in large panicles throughout the season. Habit, dwarf, spreading and vigorous similar to Multiflora nana. Very hardy and valuable for garden planting, but of special value for pot culture.

These are submitted for registration by A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.

LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS' CLUB.

December 16 is getting pretty close to Christmas and most florists are pretty busy around Christmas time, but notwithstanding all this we had a representative crowd on our visiting trip to Lititz, a pretty little burgh of Lancaster County noted from Minnesota to Texas and Maine to California for its "pretzels" and incidentally to see our compatriots Mr. Spinner who has a very neat little place devoted principally to vegetables and from which he makes quite as much as the average florist specialist would from the same amount of glass, the houses being used early for chrysanthemums, and C. F. Loeffler who has the past summer added two King houses and now has a good sized plant complete in every particular and a general assortment of cut flower stock, delphiniums, calendulas, snapdragons, alyssum, sweet peas and carnations, with chrysanthemums all out of the way excepting a few Nonin which he says he will not plant next season, it being a nuisance on account of its lateness. His new houses were unfortunately delayed in the finishing and the carnations have suffered considerably, but are now starting to produce.

A stop was made to see Enos Kohr's model place. Mr. Kohr has the business insight to keep everything right up to the top notch of productiveness, utilizing all available space and recognizing cleanliness as next to godliness. He has some 45,000 paper white narcissi coming in and his carnations, of which he has house after house, are exceptionally uniform in quality; in fact, most of Lancaster County carnations are a little higher up in quality than just "good" this season. Mr. Kohr likes White Perfection better than Matchless and has a very fine bench of Alice of which he thinks considerable and with good reason. Bench after bench of Mrs. C. W. Ward were a sight worth the whole trip.

Some thirty-two were present in the evening for the "Oyster Feed" among whom as guests were D. T. Connor of the Lord & Burnham Co.; T. J. Nolan of the King Construction Co. and Ed who from a few remarks that he made before leaving, will be a booster for ward J. McCallum from Pittsburgh the club. A short meeting was held before the "feed" and H. A. Schroyer was nominated for president; E. J. Weaver for vice-president; Harry K. Rohrer for treasurer and Frank Kohr for secretary. Lemon Landis our secretary since organization insisting on being relieved from his job.

The committee on supper, Frank Kohr, David Rose and John Shreiner, certainly gave us full value for the money expended but they forgot one important thing at a florists' banquet and that was the decorations which might have been a little more elaborate than what they gave us.

After supper bowling teams were organized under the leadership of Messrs Connor and Nolan and some heavy scores were made, Mr. Connor winning the first prize, a very handsome umbrella, Willis B. Girvin the second and Frank Kohr, the booby prize called by courtesy the third. In duck pins David Rose won first and A. Rohrer the low prize.

The singing and playing of Alponzo Petrs was a feature of the evening and billiards and pool and several hotly contested card games kept every one busy until 11:30 when we broke up a jolly party feeling all the better ready for work during the coming year under a new president.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERMEN.

The forty-first annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, will be held in Milwaukee, Wis., June 28-30, next. Hotel Wisconsin has been chosen as convention headquarters. T. J. Ferguson, of Wauwatosa, Wis., is the local representative of the Association in the matter of arrangements, entertainment, etc. Questions regarding membership, etc., may be sent to Secretary John Hall, 204 Granite Building, Rochester, N. Y., who will promptly respond. It is the hope of the executive committee that every nurseryman in the country, actively engaged in the business, but not yet identified with the Association, will take the necessary steps to become one.

PACIFIC COAST HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The regular monthly meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society on the evening of Dec. 11, was followed by a very enjoyable smoker. The nomination of officers for the ensuing year was one of the principal matters of business and the results were as follows: Eric James for president, Thomas Fenton for vice-president, W. A. Hofinghoff, incumbent, secretary; J. A. Axtell for treasurer, D. Raymond and F. Poss for ushers, and John McLaren for trustee. A long list of names were proposed for the exhibit committee. The evening exhibits made a very creditable showing. A vase of late varieties of carnations by N. Patterson of San Mateo took 92 points; a display of Cibotium Schiedeii by F. Pelicano was rated at 95 points, and Nephrolepis Superior by H. Plath took 90 points. The exhibit committee announced the prize winners having the highest scores on exhibits for the year as H. Plath, first, 980 points; F. Pelicano, second, 762 points; MacRorie-McLaren Co., third, 444 points. Splendid entertainment was provided by Jas. Keegan and his committee for the latter part of the evening.

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

The December meeting, held on Tuesday evening, Dec. 21, was pretty well attended, considering the nearness of the date to Christmas. Election of officers was the principal business. The result was as follows: President, James Methven of Readville; vice-president, W. J. Patterson of Wollaston; secretary, W. N. Craig, Brookline; treasurer, Peter Fisher, Ellis; executive committee, Peter Miller, W. J. Kennedy, Herman Bartsch, W. C. Rust and Andrew Rogers.

Secretary Craig read a paper on the prospects in this country for the young gardener, and a very interesting and vigorous discussion followed.

The landscape class of the club meets at Horticultural Hall every Monday evening at 7 o'clock, and interested visitors are always welcome.

WESTCHESTER AND FAIRFIELD HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of this society was held on December 10 and officers for 1916 were elected as follows: president, W. J. Sealey; vice-president, Owen A. Hunwick; treasurer, Robt. Williamson; secretary, J. B. McArdle; corresponding secretary, P. W. Popp. The attendance was the smallest on record owing no doubt to the severity of the weather, and the gloom cast over the members due to the death of our beloved friend and associate member, Hon. John M. Brown, Mayor of Stamford, Conn. He was one of nature's noblemen whose charming personality and cheerful presence will be greatly missed at all of our gatherings. A committee was appointed to draw up suitable resolution of sympathy to be presented to the bereaved family and a copy of same to be

The treasurer's report showed the society to be in a very flourishing condition financially, the membership constantly increasing. Our society was well represented at the convention of the N. A. G. at Boston, December 9 and 10. The Boston horticultural interests entertained the members in a royal manner and the 1915 convention will long remain a pleasant memory. The fall show committee rendered their final report and was discharged with thanks.

The next meeting will be held January 14, 1916. Best wishes to all for a Merry Christmas and a Bright and Prosperous New Year.

"Honest Dealers."

There is one seed seller in the United States who deals honestly and openly with his customers on the question of guaranteed seed. That is Henry Field, of Iowa. Field sells seed corn, for example, subject to the buyer's own test and approval and, if it isn't satisfactory, it can be returned at his expense and with money refunded. He doesn't promise a full stand in the field. Nobody could honestly do that. But he does promise that he will send seed corn which has shown a germination test of 94 per cent. or better and that if it doesn't show a high test for the buyer the latter can fire it back. And Field makes good on his promise, too.

I don't mean to suggest that our southwestern folks should buy their seed corn from Henry Field. Most of his corn is grown too far north of us to be a good yielder under our climatic conditions.

I do wish, though, that some of our southwestern seed dealers would take a leaf out of Henry Field's book and sell us seed that is recommended in the same sort of way. If they did we might get a lot better stands from some of the seed which we buy. Nowadays the only guarantee we get is something like this:

"We give no warranty, expressed or implied, as to description, purity, productiveness or any other matter of any seeds, plants or bulbs we send out, and we will not be in any way responsible for the crops grown thereon."

How many folks have bought seeds under one name and succeeded in raising something entirely different? How many have bought some fine new variety of oats, wild rye, quack grass, slender wheat grass and Johnson grass? How many have paid high prices for seed that wouldn't grow no matter what you did to it? Then when you kicked about it the seed house flashed a "guaranty" about like the one I have quoted above and showed you where you should have been glad of the chance to buy seed from them at all.

—Oklahoma Farmer-Stockman.

Brother Carl Williams, editor of the Oklahoma Farmer-Stockman, Oklahoma City, Okla., seems to have an idea that a farmer would make a better seedsman than a seedsman. He seems to fail to realize that the seedsman evolves from the farmer, the gardener, the forester, the florist; and becomes in time the expert result of all of them. If Carl refuses to take a look at Darwin, then he should stop sending his woolly western paper so far east as Philadelphia. G. C. WATSON.

White Clover Seed.

White clover seed is still going up. The latest cable advices (received from Europe on the 16th inst.) indicated an advance of two inside of a week. Those who have been prophesying seventy-five by spring may not be so far off after all. It looks pretty serious.

Notes.

Atlanta, Ga.—H. G. Hastings Company are distributing this season 600,000 of their attractive annual catalog, which has just been issued to their customers throughout the southern states.

Chicago—Onion set shipping is now beginning in earnest. J. C. Leonard of the Leonard Seed Co., says that it appears now that shrinkage will be considerable and the cost of hand picking will be high. This is quite an item and has a direct influence on the market price of onions later. The bean situation does not improve and a very serious shortage on all sorts has developed. Though some portions of the country seem to have escaped, in general the crop has been very small. Sales have been reported at $12.00 per bu. on Giant Stringless in quantity and $14.00 and $15.00 on Wardwell's wax bean.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

NEW YORK.

Charles Thorley has been using an extra store at 36 West 46th street for his holiday overflow.

P. J. Smith's 13-year-old-daughter has been quite seriously ill with tonsillitis for the past week.

Mrs. Ritta Rankin, proprietor of the "House of Ferns," is suffering from a severe attack of the grip.

J. J. Coan added a department of Christmas trees and holly temporarily to his wholesale flower business this week.

Reed & Keller report an extraordinary holiday demand for the various florists' supplies in which they specialize.

J. K. Allen, who was laid up at his home, is able to be out again, having made his first appearance at his place of business this week.

A. Rynveld, of Rynveld Bros., Lisse, Holland, sailed from New York on Wednesday, December 15. He expects to return in March, and will have a permanent office in New York at 44 Whitehall street.

Frank H. Traendly is now able to come to business for a portion of every day, and customers and others who visit the Traendly & Schenck establishment are all overjoyed to find him at his post once more.

Chas. Schwake returned on Saturday night from his Western trip, having been absent from his office since the time of the Cleveland show. He reports very enthusiastic business expectations all through the West.

G. Van der Mey, of Van der Mey & Sons, bulb dealers of Lisse, and Johann Harduyzer, nurseryman, of Boskoop, Holland, arrived from Holland last Saturday on the S. S. Noordam. Their headquarters will be with Maltus & Ware.

That the carnation Matchless is living quite up to its name no one could question after seeing the quality in which this superb white is being received by Jos. A. Millang at the New York Cut Flower Co.'s place, from Cottage Gardens. It is a "top-notcher."

Phil. F. Kessler is still receiving elegant flowers of the late blooming Chrysanthemum Mistletoe. The flowers of this variety are very large, incurved, white, with a faint luminous flush in the depths of the blossom. Foliage and stem leave nothing to be desired.

Charles Millang went very heavily into imported holly trees for Christmas this year and made a great success of it, disposing of many hundreds of trees. They were very handsome specimens, all loaded with scarlet fruit and some of them having variegated foliage.

The leading flower stores are going heavily into zinc-lined baskets and jardinières of ornamental plants in various combinations for the holiday trade. Alex. McConnell utilized the large basement of his store for this class of work and kept many hands busy putting up exquisite combinations of poinsettias, cyclamen, ericas, crotons and other appropriate things. Brilliant red Christmas ribbon is quite generally used on these combination gifts, but the old custom of using crepe paper and an excessive decoration of ribbon bows seems to have gone into disuse.

WASHINGTON.

A bill has been introduced into the House of Representatives by Congressman George S. Graham, of Pennsylvania, providing for an appropriation of $50,000 to be expended in the erection of a monument to the late William R. Smith, to perpetuate the memory of the "father of horticulture." The bill, H. R. 6419, has been referred to the Library Committee of the House of Representatives.

A bill introduced by Congressman Charles H. Dillon, of South Dakota, establishes for various commodities the following net weights per bushel: 14 pounds, blue grass seed, orchard grass seed, red top; 28 pounds, top onion sets; 30 pounds, broom corn seed; 32 pounds, bottom onion sets; 22 pounds, timothy seed; 40 pounds, apple seeds; 44 pounds, hemp seed; 45 pounds, herds grass; 46 pounds, castor beans; 50 pounds, Hungarian grass seed, millet, rape seed, sorghum seed;

60 pounds, alfalfa seed, clover seed. Fraud is punishable by fines of not more than $500, by imprisonment for not more than three months, or both, in the discretion of the court.

J. H. Small & Sons furnished the decorations for the Wilson-Galt wedding. Cattleyas and American Beauty and Lady Stanley roses were used in profusion and the corsage bouquet worn by the bride was of orchids. The salon and dining room had been thrown into one room and a large bower erected in the bay window of the latter. Ferns and American Beauty roses and many choice orchids were used. The general decorations of the dining room were carried out in pink and green. At one end was a bank of ferns and clusters of pink roses, while on the buffets and tables were pots of growing roses and ferns. Cattleyas ornamented the wedding cake. Aside from the wedding decorations there was little business for the local stores. To say that the simplicity of the affair was a disappointment from the standpoint of the retail stores is putting it mildly.

PITTSBURGH.

Edward L. McGrath, manager of the Blind Floral Company, has a holiday display of exceptionally fine poinsettias grown at the greenhouses at West View.

During the past week Gilbert Ludwig of the Ludwig Floral Company, Federal Street, North Side, has been confined to the house with a cold, which seriously threatens to develop into pneumonia.

On last Sunday evening a "Ford" ran into a truck belonging to William M. Turner, the Penn Avenue (Wilkinsburg) florist, more or less injuring the five occupants and completely demolishing the aggressive "peace" (?) car.

At the Russian ball given last Friday evening at the Pittsburgh Club by Mrs. Horne, the stage on each side had a large urn of old bronze holding two hundred poinsettias. Maidenhair ferns in baskets of gold tied with the colors of the czar were used for the table centerpieces. At a dinner dance given Monday evening at the same club the table was decorated with mounds of poinsettia separated by tall silver shafts of white lilies.

THE FLORISTS' SUPPLY HOUSE OF AMERICA

H. BAYERSDORFER & CO., 1129 Arch Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

CHICAGO.

A. F. Longren, is home for the holidays and says the supply business is all right. He will start out again in two weeks.

Schiller's Gift Shop was filled with every kind of offering that a florist could supply. The window was trimmed overhead with drooping branches of red foliage and masses of gray southern moss and mistletoe.

Many of the down-town retailers have taken extra pains to beautify their stores. Special attention has been given to the overhead effects and the results are good. All employed red as the predominating color.

J. Mangel, found his new conservatory indispensable for holding his blooming plants and showing them to good advantage. A line of pottery for holding small plants, etc., is having a good run.

Eastern growers are trying to sell their American Beauties this year before shipping them into this market. The experiences of last year, when thirty thousand were dropped down here proved a lesson not to be risked again.

The Alpha had its entire windows, which are the largest of the down-town flower stores, all done in red and green. Gus Pappas, proprietor of the store since his partner's death, went to the other store at Des Moines, Ia., Monday and will return Christmas day.

At the Chicago Flower Growers' Association all are busy filling the early orders and the books show a long list to be filled later in the week. Some especially fine cut poinsettias were seen here. They were four feet long and the bracts very large and of extremely brilliant color. Another lot will follow these, both sent by one of their growers who enjoys the reputation of being an expert.

At Poehlman Bros.' southern shipments are under way and the orders are fully up to a normal year. The quartette of red roses which are playing such an important part in the holiday sales are Hadley, Hoosier Beauty, Richmond and Milady. Speaking of their respective merits, Mr. Freese regards Milady as having the best shipping qualities and the first two as excelling in richness of color. Mrs. Russell at this house is exceptionally good; not a trace of blue in its color and the size and shape of the flower being all that could be desired in a rose.

The lily of the valley situation is reviewed by Phil Schupp, manager for J. A. Budlong, about as follows: The number of pips now in this locality nowhere near approaches the quantity used in a normal season, though a few who had forethought to lay in a good supply have their stock assured. Should the war in Europe terminate before warm weather comes again, shipments could be safely made which would take care of next year, but the acreage is small in Germany compared to that of other years, and even with best of shipping facilities stock will be scarce. The Budlong lily of the valley this week measures 15 inches and the bells are of large size.

BOSTON.

Edward Stout, formerly salesman for the Boston Rose Co., is now first assistant to Wm. Penn, buyer for Penn the Florist.

Friends of Mrs. Fisher of Worcester are glad to see her once more around the market early in the morning as before after her late illness.

George Libbey of Lynn, who has recently sold out his florist business in Lynn and retired, has gone to spend the winter and spring with his son in New Haven, Conn.

One of the most attractively dressed and illuminated florist's windows ever seen in Boston is that of Thomas F. Galvin this week. A splendid electrical display in many colors adds to the external attractiveness of the building at night.

The Boston Herald of Sunday, Dec. 19th, devotes considerable space to a picture and accompanying story about Harry Brinkgrieve, who, although blind for the past three years, is able to conduct his greenhouse at Hyde Park successfully, and who has made a good record with his chrysanthemums this season. Lettuce and early tomatoes will follow the chrysanthemums in his greenhouse.

Penn, the Florist, opened his new store at 124 Tremont street on Saturday, Dec. 18th, with a superb display of plants, flowers and floral work. A large advertisement in the Boston morning papers invited the public to come and attend the opening. The advertisement stated that there were no cards for this opening, no selective lists or special invitations, but that friends, customers and the public alike were bidden welcome, and the people responded in large numbers.

South Orange, N. J.—W. A. Manda has just received what he believes to be the biggest shipment of herbaceous plants ever received from Japan. These are the result of a two-years' collecting tour, and it is possible some new and specially valuable things may be included in the shipment. Laellias and cypripediums are now blooming handsomely in the greenhouses, and Polypodium Mandaianum still holds its place as a leading favorite, both for use as a plant and as cut fronds.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON The dark weather of the last two weeks has made an apparent great scarcity of certain flowers in the market. Good carnations have been almost impossible to obtain and red ones are being held at unheard-of prices. Unfortunately the quality is not there in a large proportion of the carnations offered. Pickling is decidedly in evidence. Roses are more plentiful and outside of red are selling at a medium figure. American Beauties are rather unsecure from present outlook. Sweet peas of the Spencer variety are in brisk demand at a good figure and Blanch Ferry and White varieties of the grandiflora type sell well. Lilies, callas, marguerites, calendulas, etc., also sell rapidly. In the plant line there has been a brisk trade and dealers are generally sold out. The market on azaleas is especially good. Cyclamen have been all cleaned up and are in great demand.

CHICAGO At this writing, long distance shipments are clearing the market for the heavier trade which is expected later in the week. All kinds of roses are in good supply as predicted, and there is every indication that there will be enough to fill all orders. The shortage is in carnations, particularly red ones. When it was asserted by some of the large growers weeks ago, that carnations would be scarce for the holidays, few were inclined to take it seriously, but those who had accepted orders at a low price are now unable to fill them. The plants are off crop, and buds are not far enough advanced to create any hope even should the sun shine all of each day, or as one grower put it, "24 hours of each day." American Beauties are fine, the supply being mostly of the long-stemmed ones. Mrs. Russell is distinctly of two types, the good ones and the bad, the latter being decidedly off color. The very last cuts of chrysanthemums are now in and no one regrets that the season is over. The last ones are not equal to those of mid-season, but fair. Lily of the valley is bringing good prices.

CINCINNATI Supply has been rather short, but roses are getting more plentiful as the holidays approach and there will undoubtedly be a fair cut for Christmas. American Beauties which up to this time have moved out rather slowly are now meeting with a good call. Carnations are very scarce. Poinsettia receipts are very heavy and very good. The supply of lily of the valley, double violets and orchids is equal to the demand, while single violets and sweet peas may be had in fair quantities. Narcissus receipts continue rather light. Lilies are plentiful and very good. Up to this time the demand for boxwood has been exceptionally heavy.

BUFFALO Business has been gradually growing heavier each day. Last week was quite a busy one for those handling decorative greens and the sales so far have exceeded any previous year. There was also a good supply of cut material in roses, lilies, carnations, chrysanthemums and other stock and things cleaned up fair at end of week, excepting long Beauties, lily of the valley and white roses. Every indication points toward a heavy holiday business as a slight hustle has already begun at this writing (Tuesday).

NEW YORK This market has been going through a rare experience during the past week. The demand for cut flowers in the retail stores has been slack, as is the case usually preceding the Christmas onslaught, yet prices have stiffened up to a limit seldom reached and the wholesale places have been cleaning up very well, everything considered. Much doubt is expressed by wise observers as to the outcome when the holiday trade develops its capacity. That more or less stock—especially carnations and violets—is being held back for the final windup by some growers, seems very probable. Many of the carnations sent in previous to the holiday have shown a very suspicious drowsiness after being exposed to the air for a brief time. So few violets have been in evidence that the whereabouts of the crop is quite a mystery. We hope that the disheartening experience of other years will not be repeated—an avalanche of violets on the last day and the back of the market broken.

Roses have been doing well. They appear to be in good crop everywhere, quality very good and the signs of pickling not so apparent as in the case of the carnations. There are relatively more of the long stem grades than the short, while the demand is mostly the reverse. We look to see an abundance, if not an excess, of roses and heavy sales at moderate prices. Poinsettias in cut state are among the most despised things at Christmas time usually, and this year is no exception. They are hardly worth growing for cut-flower purposes. Of lily of the valley there is an abundance. Longiflorum lilies are holding out at a good price but many of the lots seen are of low grade quality. All white flowers naturally suffer at Christmas. Red is in the saddle, but whether it be roses, carnations, poinsettias or anything else in that popular color, the stock must be such as will hold up in good fresh condition after delivery to the consumer. Anything else, nowadays, will only make trouble for the dealer and obloquy for the cut flower trade. As for the plant trade the most of the story is told when we say that all the growers were sold out clean long before the demand ceased. The stock is very fine as a rule with the exception of the small poinsettias grown for pan use. Of these there is a greater amount of inferior material on the market than we have ever seen before. Cyclamens are very fine; so are azaleas. Foliage plants, such as crotons and dracaenas, are brilliantly colored, and the fruited plants such as solanums, ardisias and oranges are uniformly excellent. Erica melanthera, also several of the ventricosa sorts, are also very well done.

PITTSBURGH The past week's ideal weather augurs well for the florists, whose only troubles now seem to be scarcity of stock to supply the demand, which increases as the days go on. Roses are fairly plentiful, including special American Beauties, but carnations are so scarce that the wholesalers do not even care to quote prices. Of these flowers, it is estimated that the various retailers are able to fill about only twenty per cent of the calls. Holly is not coming in the quantities required, the quality being "hof and hof," some about perfect and other again most inferior.

SAN FRANCISCO Preparations for Christmas are demanding principal attention all along the line now. Some fine windows have already made their appearance. Stock has cleaned up very closely all week, and in some instances more flowers could have been used to advantage. It is believed the growers are holding back for the Christmas trade and that there will be a much better showing than present offerings would indicate. A heavy rain the first of the week about finished the chrysanthemums and this was followed by a few cold days, which acted as a set-back to roses and some other seasonables. Good stock is bringing high prices. On the other hand violets are even more plentiful and the demand continues excellent. There is little to be said about carnations, the offerings being light, quality poor and demand only fair. The supply of roses abundance of roses. The prices are high this year, roses bringing all the way from $6 to $35 per 100. Carnations are scarce and high. All shippers are away off crop. Stock should be enough to supply the demand. Last year at this time all kinds of stock was in plenty, but it is just the reverse this year. All expect a big Christmas business.

Flower Market Reports

It is generally believed that the business done during the holidays will exceed that of previous years by no small margin. In this city flowers have replaced to quite an extent jewelry and other more expensive luxuries as Christmas and New Year's gifts. Early in the week it was predicted that there would be a shortage of carnations and that orchids, Richmond roses, lily of the valley and gardenias would not be obtainable in sufficient quantities to meet all de-

BOILER RATINGS AND CAPACITIES

To the Editor of Horticulture:

I wish to call your attention to a very common error which works to the detriment of boiler users (greenhouse men), and of well meaning and honest boiler manufacturers and salesmen. The fallacy I refer to is this: "A square foot of radiation is a square foot of radiation wherever it is." No statement could be more incorrect in its obvious meaning.

Most boilers are rated for utmost capacities under best conditions, i. e., with chimneys of proper height and area, good coal, frequent firing, etc. Many boilers are rated for capacities entirely beyond them under any conditions.

Greenhouse boiler manufacturers only, rate their boilers in lineal feet of pipe for greenhouse heating (generally $3\frac{1}{2}$ and 2-inch pipe).

Any boiler will take care of a greater amount of radiation in a dwelling house than in a greenhouse, and a salesman who attempts to sell a boiler for greenhouse service on its dwelling house rating either does not understand what he is doing, or is trying to deceive.

I am sending to you herewith a paper written for a purpose other than greenhouse heating, but it may be of interest to greenhouse people.

Yours very truly,

FRED J. ELDER.

"Conditions Under Which a Boiler Should Fulfill Its Ratings."

A Talk by F. J. Elder, Mgr. Boston Office, Lord & Burnham Company. Given at the Burnham Boiler Get-Together Convention, April 23-24, 1914.

It has become a custom to rate heating boilers in square feet of cast iron radiation of standard height (38 in.) and two columns wide, to specify that the radiation be proportioned to heat the building to 70 degrees, and that the boiler be connected to a flue of sufficient area to provide volume and sufficient height to produce the required velocity or intensity of draft.

Ratings are also based on a standard of two pounds pressure for steam boilers, and a temperature of 180 degrees F. in radiating surfaces for water boilers. It is also called to the catalog reader's attention that he must include in his total radiation figure all exposed pipe surface of mains, risers, connections, etc., plus 25 per cent., and it is explained that pipe surface is approximately 25 per cent more efficient for heat transmission than standard cast iron radiation. It is further stated that 25 per cent. should be added to the total amount of direct-indirect radiation, and 50 per cent. to the amount of indirect radiation, that proper allowance be made for the absorption of heat by fire pot coils, and that greenhouses, factories, garages, storage buildings, etc., which are heated to low temperatures, will condense more steam per square foot, or require more heat units per square foot of radiation than in living rooms heated to 70 degrees.

Radiation now means any one of three things. It means first to the fitter and the buyer of a boiler a quantity of radiating or transmitting surface, a number of cast iron radiating units or radiators. Radiation particularly means the heat projected in rays, or straight lines from a heated surface, that is, radiant heat. Radiation is now considered in its broader sense, that is, as including the whole transmission of heat from a heating unit. It covers the radiant heat that projected in rays, the transmission by convection, or rising in fluid masses, or through flues, and the transmission by conduction, or heating by contact with the hot surface.

Air can be heated only by conduction, that is, by direct contact with hot surfaces, or substances. Pure dry air cannot be heated by radiant heat. Rays of heat pass through air unless intercepted by particles of dust or vapor. These, and other substances and surfaces which may intercept the rays, will in turn heat the quiet surrounding air by conduction. This property possessed by air is called diathermacy. The same property is possessed by glass through which sun rays pass without warming the glass. Hot surfaces are surrounded by films or fluid masses of hot air, which cling to the surfaces, and it is evident that an easy circulation or passage of air over the surfaces by convection currents is desirable in order to constantly remove the film of heat, and for this reason extended surface radiation, such as pin and corrugated or ridged radiators, are not as efficient in quiet air as the more common types. The fluid masses of heat cannot be disengaged from the rough surfaces without swifter currents of air than are possible by convection only, as with direct radiation. Extended surface radiators are, however, most satisfactory in indirect heating where air velocities are greater.

Radiators are rated or measured according to the number of square feet of surface with which air may come in contact. The efficiency of a radiator or its coefficient of transmission is the number of heat units transmitted per hour through one square foot of emitting surface for each degree of difference in temperature of the radiating surface and that of the air surrounding. Efficiency depends on the form, shape, and condition. As explained above, extended surface radiators would have a low efficiency in quiet air. Single column radiators give off more heat per square foot than two column radiators, because there is an easier circulation of air around the single column radiators, and the heat film, as it has been called, is more easily disengaged from the radiator's surfaces. With three, four and five column radiation, efficiency is correspondingly lower because the heating is pocketed or trapped, and because every column interferes more or less with the radiant heat from every other column.

Efficiency of radiators depends also on their height. A low radiator is more efficient than a high one. Air is drawn to the bottom of a radiator or induced by convection currents to rise beside and against the radiator's hot surfaces, and it is obvious that the higher a current of air rises against or the longer it passes over a heated surface, the higher its temperature becomes, and its ability to absorb heat decreases at the same rate. Low radiators give off more heat foot by foot than high ones. The efficiency of a radiator is affected by its location or position; a radiator should not be too close to a wall, or otherwise pocketed so as to prevent a free circulation of air around it. Radiators, whether of cast iron or in the form of pipe coils, are much reduced in efficiency when placed high on walls, or hung from ceilings. It is about as hard to get warm air to circulate below the level of the heating device as it is to get hot water to do so inside of radiators and piping.

The efficiency of horizontal pipe surface is greater than that of any other form of radiator, and pipe coils placed flat, or side by side in horizontal runs, as in greenhouse practice, have the highest possible efficiency. Different authorities have given coefficients of transmission ranging from 1.4 to 1.8 for cast iron radiators of common type, and efficiencies of 2.2 to 3+ for horizontal pipe.

To determine the amount of heat given off by a steam radiator in a specified time, it is only necessary to weigh the water condensed in that time and to multiply the quantity in pounds by 965, which is the number of thermal units given up by the condensation of one pound of steam at zero gauge pressure or transforming one pound of steam at 212 degrees to water the same temperature. The product will be the number of heat units, or quantity of heat given off by the radiator in the time named.

From the foregoing, it is obvious that very little or very much heat may be emitted from a square foot of radiation, and that this all depends briefly; on the form, shape, character, position and location of the radiator. It also depends even more on the temperature of the air surrounding.

In greenhouse and garage heating and in other such special cases where the temperatures required are below 70 degrees, it should be remembered that each square foot must emit in B. T. U.'s the product of its coefficient of transmission times the difference between the temperature of the radiating surface and that of the air surrounding it.

The lower the temperature required, the greater will be the difference, the higher the product, and the greater the heat transmission.

In looking through a boiler catalog recently, I noticed that greenhouse boiler ratings were given for various temperatures and for the various quantities of greenhouse glass surface, and the following are the ratings of a particular boiler as set forth in that catalog:—

Size Grate.	Lin. ft. Outside Diam.	4" Pipe	Sq. ft. Glass.
			40-45	45-50	50-55	55-60	60-65
24 x 24	1200		5600	4800	4150	3600	3150

In greenhouse heating the water temperature is assumed to be 150 degrees, and the coefficient of transmission 2. In the table the same boiler with the same pipe is rated to heat different amounts of glass to temperatures ranging from 40 to 45 degrees up to 60 to 65 degrees. Or, in other words, the same boiler is rated to produce or transmit through 1200 ft. of 4" outside diameter greenhouse pipe 252,000 B. T. U. to a house requiring a temperature of 40 to 45 degrees, or 204,000 B. T. U. to a greenhouse requiring 60 to 65 degrees. A very accommodating boiler indeed.

The amounts of pipe catalogued are correct for the temperatures named, but as has been stated, the same amount of radiation or piping may give off different quantities of heat and the boiler, or generator of units of heat, must be large enough for the number of units required, and not large enough for the quantity of piping or radiation merely.

In regard to the chimney, the flue should never be oblong if it is possible to avoid such a shape. It should be square at least, and a round flue is best of all. The effective area of the square is the same as that of a circle inscribed in the square. The flue should be smooth, and absolutely tight, and the area should be ample to carry away the products of combustion, which are noxious gases. The height of the chimney must be sufficient to produce intensity of draft. Both volume of air and intensity of draft are required for complete combustion. Neither one is sufficient without the other. Many boilers are condemned when the only thing wrong is the chimney, and the trouble is not always apparent. When combustible is completely burned, there must be a hot fire and an ample supply of oxygen. The resultant gas is carbon dioxide (CO₂) and nothing remains but ash. When coal is incompletely burned because of lack of oxygen, it is converted into carbon monoxide (CO), and nothing remains but ash, the same as if complete combustion had taken place. In such cases much of the real value of the fuel goes up the chimney unconsumed, and is lost.

Insufficient air, a low degree of heat in the furnace, and poor mixing of air and fuel, are responsible for enormous wastes. One cannot determine merely by looking at a fire whether or not there is sufficient air or sufficient draft, and one cannot decide from the ashes afterward whether or not combustion has been complete or incomplete.

The catalog may be filled with instructions and directions, it may mention precautions and don'ts ad libitum, but much of the success or failure is due to the quality of the fuel used and the quality of the handling or method of feeding that the boiler receives.

The fireman is responsible to a large degree for the satisfaction or dissatisfaction given. A good quality of fuel

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:

$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

Keeping Up With The Times

ONE day last week I walked into a New Jersey grower's work room, and right there, plumb in front of me was a neat little shelf with a Big Ben clock on it, and one of our Supply Books hanging underneath.

The owner seeing my glance smilingly said: "those are the two things that keep us right up to the times."

Taking the Supply Book down, he turned to the inside cover and pointed to these words—"Anyone not hanging this book on shelf when through using liable to discharge."

Then he explained how he considered that book almost like insurance. "Suppose, for example," he said: "a heating fitting breaks some zero day. All I have to do is to leaf over that book until I come to the picture of the very fitting I want; call you folks up on 'phone, and in the shortest possible time I get the fitting." "No, sir, I wouldn't be without that Supply Book."

Coming home I wondered whether you had one or not?

Will you let me know? If you haven't I will promptly see that one is sent to you, hot foot.
